matter in the world. The spectators last evening were in the mood to enjoy to the full all the old jokes and comicalities that were brought forth for their delec-a roar after each witticism. The play has good, brisk movement and should not be over-engined. Comedy specialties were introduced in each act, and diverted the audience sufficiently. "A Thoroughbred Tramp" will be continued the rest of the

WHY THE MAN WAS BRAVE.-A broken circuit which shut off the current from several street lamps Tuesday evening was located by the line foreman in a lamp at Thirteenth and Washington streets, and he proceeded at once to lower the lamp in order to fix the connection. In starting down the lamp swung a little to one side. closing the circuit, and as it swung back. in breaking the connection, an arc of flame was pulled, several inches in length, which set fire to a sparrow's nest in the hood of the lamp. The blaze of the straw and other material in the nest quickly attracted a crowd, and many of them, women especially, were greatly alarmed for the safety of the foreman, who continued lowering the lamp, and there was quite an excitement around him, the women demanding that he be made to go away from the lamp before the cur-rent struck him and killed him. Of course, he knew his husiness and was in no danger, and when the lamp came within reach it was put to rights by a touch of his finger. He still feels complimented by the interest the women evinced in his welfare, and attributes it to his good looks

WHAT HIS WIFE DISCOVERED,-A business man who had occasion to drive out on the Marquam Guich road a few miles resterday took his wife along for com-pany. They were only a short distance from the head of Sixth street, in an Italian colony, when the man was startled by his wife saying in a tone of horror: "Oh, John! there is the body of a child hanging on the picket fence just shead!" He looked and saw a pink-colored object which did look like the body of a child, but he told his wife that it must be a small pig which had just been bought from a countryman. The nearer they came to it the more like a human being the object appeared, till at last it was seen to be the body of a huge papiermache doll as big as a child a year old. It was a grewsome-looking thing to be hanging on a fence by the public highway, and the grinning Italian who came out and offered to sell it was advised to put it out of sight and not be scaring decent people with it.

Ms. Cook's Dwelling.—The block be-tween Fourth and Fifth, Hall and College streets is being cleaned up and the one house on the north-west corner is undergoing an over-hauling and having some changes made inside. The property is owned by J. W. and Vin Cook, and probably will be occupied by the latter. One of the items of the clearing up is the removal of a huge billboard which has for a long time closed access to the east end of the block. Its removal adds much to the appearance of the property. On this block 30 years ago was the residence of A. C. R. Shaw, superintendent of the State Peniten-There is a large walnut tree in the center of the block, the trunk of which is two feet in diameter, and on the east half of the block there is an old orchard, probably planted by Mr. Shaw, in which is a very large apple tree and some large cherry trees. I shall build a brick structure in their place, but what its character will be I have not yet decided. TROUBLES OF A HATTER .- A charge of drunkenness loomed up against S. B. Wheeler, a hatter, when he walked before Municipal Judge Hogue yesterday. "I'm a victim of circumstances that I can't control," wailed Wheeler, who, by the way, makes frequent appearances at the Municipal Court. "If you'll allow me to go this time I'll guarantee never to come here again." "What were you doing with those spoons you had at the time of your arrest?" queried the Judge. PORTLANDERS TO VISIT STATE FAIR TO-PORTLANDERS TO VISIT STATE FAIR TO-DAY.—A large number of Portland citizens are expected to go to Salem this morning. This is Portland day at the State Pair. Elaborate preparations have been made at the Capital City for the reception of the visitors. The commercial bodies of this city have been endeavoring to awaken in-terest here in the event. Yesterday about 60 citizens signified their intention of going. It is believed that several carloads will leave this morning. The round-trip fare, including admission to the grounds.

ROW BETWEEN SALOONKEEPERS .- A TOW tween two rival saloonkeepers, Charles Falk and L. O. Kormo, was investigated yesterday by Municipal Judge Hogue. Kormo asserted that Falk threw him out of the Anchor saloon, First and Davis streets, Monday, and injured him. Falk "Kormo came to my place trying to draw away my customers and con-certina-player. I gently led him by the arm to the door and asked him to leave my premises. I did not assault him." The against Falk was continued.

PRUNE-DRYING WILL BEGIN.-Prune drying will be in full operation next week. The season is later than usual this year, probably because the lowland crop is al-most a total failure. #### PHIL ROGOWAY BACK.

Prepared to Settle With Creditors and Wants to Do Better.

After leaving town suddenly last July to the regret of his creditors, Phil F. Rogoway, ex-Deputy License Collector, has returned to Portland, and states that during his absence he has worked at Juneau, Alaska, accumulating money with which to satisfy his creditors' claims, Rogoway called at The Oregonian office yesterday and said he desired to make this statement:

"I am determined to make a fresh start in life. My friends are willing to help me. I wish to state that I have not been a fugitive from justice, and that I have robbed nobody. I left Portland because it was the best thing I could do at the time. I had been associating with evil companions, and had been taught to gamble. I had never gambled before, I bought a ticket to Juneau, Alaska, and with this ticket and 30 cents I left town, arriving at Jueau July 10. "In Juneau I worked 22 hours a day to make money so that I could come back to Portland and settle. I worked in a barber shop in the day and cleaned saloons at night, and did everything I could to raise money. With what I earned and with the assistance of my wife I was able to return to Portland. All my debts have either been paid or will be immediately. I do not wan to owe any one a dollar. It has been said that I took money belonging to the city when I was in the license department. This is false. I never took a cent for a license but what was turned into the City Treasury. It has also been stated that I took money belonging to Fleckenstein, Mayer & Co. There is no truth in this, and Mr. Mayer cannot show that I ever robbed the firm of a nickel.

After I had resigned I borrowed money and ran into debt, and it is these accounts I am settling. There was nothing criminel about the matter at all. I have made money and want to make a new start in life. I am paid up in all the orders to which I belong, and hope I retain the good-will of my friends, I appreciate my mistakes, and wish to do better."

At the matinee Saturday, when Opic Read's latest dramatic offering, "The Starbucks," will be given, each lady attending will be presented with a handsome souvenir of Mr. Neill and Miss Edythe Chapman.

"Lost in New York" at Cordray's. "Lost in New York" will prove to be one of the dramatic treats of the season. The play is one of the kind that appeals to all lovers of what is good in the dra-matic line, and tells a story of life in a great city. The characters are such as will be found in all towns of importance and embrace a tramp who is funny, a policeman who is never found lacking, a woman who is blind, and has more hardships that are usually allotted to women and also a child who is dear to all ers' hearts. There are several others, all interesting characters, who help to make the production one of the most popular American plays. "Lost in New York" will commence at Cordray's next Sunday
