ROOT ON TRUSTS.

Unfair and oppressive trusts, so flowers and the fruit also. Regulation of trusts is a necessary part of our industrial development. Capital should have its reward, and the laborer should have higher wages

NEW YORK, Oct. 30,-Cooper Union was filled tonight with people who had come to attend a Republican meeting, the principal speakers being Mayor Low, Governor Odell and Secretary of War Root. Mr. Low eulogized Governor Odell and his administration of state affairs. Governor Odell followed in an address in which he cast aside as absurd the prediction that his majority would be a small one. Secretary Root spoke after try. the Governor had finished. He began by praising Governor Odell, declaring that the people of the state owed the Governor a debt of gratitude for what he had done their interest, he having shown himself a strong man and an honest one in the Governor's chair, as he has always been in business and politics. The Secretary said that the National issue of this political campaign, in its most important and political aspects, is whether President Roosevelt shall be sustained in his administration of the National Goverement. Discussing the work of Congress, Secretary Root said.

"The one case of urgent necessity for ction which failed of response was the bill for a just measure of reciprocity with Cuba, and that was defeated by a combination between the Democrats in Congress and a small minority of the Republicans refusing to go with the majority of their party. There is good reason to believe that the measure will succeed at the

What Is the Call for a Change?

"What is there which calls for a change?" the Secretary asked. "Is the reason to be found in a desire for the curbing of trusts? For an effective treatment of just at this time, among the supporters labor troubles, or for a revision of the tariff? Certainly not.

capitalists securing undue profits, and some tariff provisions becoming outgrown with changing conditions, and some stubborn contests between employers who wish to be paid more for labor, were new social and political system, and calling for desperate and revolutionary remedies. They are not new, nor strange, nor threatening. They are but reappearances, in slightly varied forms, of some of the dif-ficulties which have always accompanied material prosperity since the beginning of successful enterprise. of guccessful enterprise.
"Unfair and oppressive trusts, so called, are weeds in the garden of prosperity. It is easy to kill them if you kill the flowers and the fruit also, but if you would keep the weeds down, and have the garden grow, you must devote yourself, not to desperate and destructive remedies, but to a patient, discriminating and unceasing process, pulling out the weeds and leaving the useful plants. So, in curbing and regulating these combinations of cap-ital, which are injurious to the public, either because they monopolize the mar-ket, or the sources of supply, or the avenues of employment, or prevent competition unfairly and oppressively, care must be taken not to stop great enterprises which have legitimately reduced the cost of production; not to take Amer-ica out of the race of competition of the world; not to close the mills and mines not to throw millions of workmen out of employment, and deprive the farmer of his market for raw material of manu-

Row the Evils Came About.

"The evils complained of are an out-growth of the process of industrial de relopment of the age; their regulation is also a necessary part of that process. Our industrial history shows that the steady course of the process has always been, and is now, toward better and not toward worse conditions; that the diffusion of wealth is outstripping its concen-tration; that the great body of the peo-ple in the United States are climbing up above the hard conditions of poverty which have been the rule in the world's life, into general comfort and independence to a degree not known before; that our prosperity is sound and wholesome, and that courage and hope are justified rather than despondency. "The wonderful scientific discoveries and inventions of the last half century ously and progressionally increased the productive power of man-kind. There has been greater productive power during the last century than in any thousand years before. This epor-mous addition to the productive power of labor was due, first, to the brains that made the discoveries and inventions and made the discoveries and inventions and organized the great combinations of cap-ital necessary to utilize the new powers and the new methods necessary for their use, and, second, to the capital that built the machines and the railroads and led in the experiments and the renewal of ma-terial superseded by new inventions, and took the chances of loss to gain the rewards of successful enterprise. Both the brains and capital have come from every part of this great country, and their in terest in the enterprise to which both of them have contributed is represented by the stocks and bonds of the corporations which own the milis and the mines and the railroads. It is plain that, in the distribution of this newly acquired wealth, the brains that invest and that organize should have their share; the capital that constructs and maintains should be re-warded for its investment and its risk; the laborer should have higher wages, because his labor is producing more, and Lattle Liver Pills.

the consumer should have lower prices, because the product which he purchases is produced with greater case and at less

"Capital and brains always get the ad-vantage et first, but our industrial his-tory shows that the laborer and the consumer, slowly, but surely, wrest their share of the advantage from capital for themselves. The organizers of the great eugar trust made a great deal of money for themselves, but we are getting sugar for themselves but we are getting sugar now at less than it cost to make it be-fore the trust was formed. The organiz-ers of the Standard Oil Company have made a great deal of money, but the poor-est American farmer is lighting his house tonight, at trifling cost, more brilliantly than palaces were lighted a century ago; and these are the consumer's shares of the wealth created by the brains and cap-ital of the sugar company and the Stand-ard Oil Company.

ard Oil Company.
"While the returns of capital seem great, because they are massed together, and the returns of labor seem small, be-cause they are scattered, capital's proportionate share of the new wealth is con-stantly decreasing, and labor's propor-tionate share of it is constantly increasing. Not only have the wages of labor increased, but the cost of food and clothing have decreased," said Mr. Root, following at considerable length with statistics in support of his statement, and summing up his review by saying that every dollar of the wage-earner's pay would, in 1992, buy more food and clothing than it would 30 years before.

Wealth Being Generally Diffused.

"The result of the process," said the speaker, "Is a diffusion of wealth among the people. The contemplation of the few large fortunes must seem of trifling importance. This steady increase in the earnings of labor, as compared with the earnings of capital; this processed of the steady increases in the earnings of capital; this wonderful diffusion of wealth among the men who work with their hands, has been accomplished in spite of the fact that we have been continually adding to our population by the immigration of the poor of other countries, without means, and these continual additions at the bottom of the scale of prosperity and earning power have continually kept down the averages of carnings and of popular

"Let us not, in fixing our gaze upon small evils, forget the greater good. The automobiles are of little account. Who owns the farm wagons?' is the important question. Let us keep our faith in Amer-ican institutions, and deal with the evils that are before us now and are to come hereafter, along the lines of the same beneficent system which has dealt successfully with every phase of the great struggle for the distribution of wealth in

Is it not true that heedlessness of its expectant beneficiaries, and their disregard for the welfare of the great mass of consumers. is more and more impudently exhibited? And is it not true that to all other reasons for a reform of our tariff laws there is added the birth and growth of their cruel and unmerciful progeny of trusts and combinations which stand guard against all attempts to seek relief in the field of free competition? That the present tariff conditions have assumed a complexion which not only requires a check on their aggressiveness but actual amendment, is at lest admitted among those responsible for these condi-tions. Such a concession was made when a dozen or more reciprocity treatles were submitted to the Senate, but the sincerity of the concession, and the honest inten-tion to surrender the least advantage as long as it can be held, is emphatically disproved by the fact that session after session of the Senate has passed without taking the least action on these treaties.

"Our Democratic friends talk as if some ment. We hear it on every side. What does it mean? It means that they see the handwriting on the wall as they have never seen it before. They have quieted the people's fears, and professed solicitude for their welfare, and promised to lead them to pleasant places, and now that shoals and rocks have been struck, they seek by another promise to mend the whole affair and retain the confidence and trust of those whom they have deluded. "I have supposed that my fellow-citizens are thoughtful on this subject, and that their thoughtfulness has led to desire an amendment of our tariff laws and a rectification of the wrong and injustice that follow in their train. of Canadian Reciprocity, CHELSEA, Mass., Oct. 28.-William H. Moody, Secretary of the Navy, was the principal speaker at a big rally of Republicans here tonight. He confined himself to the subject of reciprocity with Canada.

Mr. Moody referred at length to the Elgin reciprocity treaty of 1854, which lasted until 1886, and the result of which he said was favorable to Canada, but not deemed favorable to this country by the statesmen of the time.

In spite of that preference, Mr. Charlton, a member of the Canadian Parliament, says that in 1901 Canada purchased $23,000,000 more of manufactured goods from us than were purchased from Great Britain, and $15,000,000 more than were purchased from all the rest of the world, Great British newspaper published in Manlia, on ac-count of the publication of an article at-tacking General J. Franklin Bell and his plan of aiding the people of the Prov-inces of Batangas and Laguna, Luzon and of the Island of Mindora. This plan was put into effect after the cessation of hos-tilities. It consisted of selling rice and supplying the people with seeds and farm-ing implements, and it resulted in profits amounting to $27,000. General Bell has recently been ordered home. The Presidentes of all towns in Batangas Prov-ince petitioned General Bell to take steps to have his plan of aid continued after his departure. General Bell thereupon con-sulted General Davis and the members of the civil commission on the matter and place the $27,000 in his session in the hands of the commission to be expended by them among the peo-ple of the provinces and whence it was collected. General Bell came to Manila as the guest of Governor Taft, and drafted an act covering the continuation of his plan. This act was accepted by the commission, and General Bell transferred the

After this transfer of funds had been made, Libertas put in an article charg-ing General Bell with an attempt to steal this fund, and take it with him to the United States, but saying the commis-sion had forced him to surrender the money. General Davis transmitted to General Bell officially a copy of the Lib-ertan article. General Bell responded by denying the charges. General Davis thereupon transmitted the papers to Gov-ernor Taft, who, in his turn, remitted them to the prosecuting attorney. This official then instituted the proceedings against the newspaper.
