Fast-Growing Trade of Oriental Steamers.

THAY CAN'T CARRY IT ALL

Overflow From Portland Goes to Puget Sound.

MORE STEAMERS NEEDED

All Estimates of Exports to Orient Are Surpassed by Reality—Enormous Cargoes of Flour—Space All Engaged Far Ahead.

When the Portland & Astoria Steamship Company placed the 800-ton steamships Indrapura, Indravelli and Indrasamma on the route from Portland to the Orient, fears were expressed that the traffic would be insufficient to provide them with full cargoes. The line has now been in operation but little more than a year, and the business has increased to such an extent that even these big steamers are unable to handle the freight that is offered. Last month over 4000 tons of Oriental freight were shipped from Portland to Puget Sound for trans-shipment because the Portland liners could not handle it, and this month the amount sent to the Orient from Portland and Portland territory will exceed 7000 tons. The steamship Indravelli is due from the Orient in about 10 days, and will find a cargo awaiting her that will test her capacity to the limit. The Indrapura, which follows her, also has a full cargo, and the offerings for January shipment are very heavy.

The Oriental business for the season to date is by far the largest on record, and promises to build up for many months to come. While the Portland line has more business than it can handle with its regular liners, the Puget Sound lines are fully as crowded; in fact, a little more crowded, as they are obliged to take the overflow from the Portland line. The steamer Tremont, operating in connection with the Northern Pacific Railway between Tacoma and the Orient, sailed last week with the largest cargo ever carried out of a Pacific Coast port. She had aboard 12,500 tons of freight. She was followed by the steamer Hyades. In the same line, and on Friday of this week the steamer Hyson will sail with 6000 tons of Oriental freight in addition to a lot of wheat and salmon for Europe. Following the Hyson, the same line will dispatch the steamer Victoria November 20.

For the month of December the Northern Pacific has engagements for the Orient to fill six steamers, which will sail as follows: Plelades, December 1; Yaguste and Olympia, December 8; Duke of Fife, December 14; Shawmut, December 20; and Tacoma, December 25. All of the space on these steamers has been engaged, and it is expected that one and perhaps two extra boats will be put on the run to take care of the freight still offering. Past the turn of the year there are three steamers already scheduled for January from Tacoma and two others expected. From Seattle, the Great Northern is dispatching a steamer about every two weeks and, like the rest of the steamers bound for the Orient, they are full to the hatches. The Canadian Pacific also has a regular steamer every three weeks, and a couple of freight vessels making trips as rapidly as possible between times.

Flour forms the principal item on most of the steamers, and some enormous cargoes have been taken out within the past few weeks. The Tremont and Hyades from Tacoma carried 100,000 barrels, and nearly 5,000 barrels. Next to flour cotton and lumber are the most important factors in making up the big cargoes. The four shipments for the season to date are nearly 20,000 barrels ahead of those for a similar period last year, and the engagements for shipment in November, December and January are far ahead of those of a year ago. The China Mutual steamers, included in the list above given, are the Hyson and the Yangtze, each of which will take out about 2000 tons of wheat for Europe and will fill out with Oriental cargoes. On discharging in the Orient they reload with merchandise for Europe. There was a report that this round-the-world service would be discontinued, but recently the steamers have been carrying such full cargoes that the owners will probably keep them on the route. The Ninkow, just out of the yards and the largest steamer owned by the China Mutual people, has just sailed for Tacoma, and when loaded to her capacity will carry as much as the Tremont and Shawmut, which are being operated between Puget Sound and the Orient only.

There is so much freight offering from Portland that one or two extra steamers will probably be placed on the route to help take care of the business that is offering, and which the merchants do not care to divert to the Puget Sound ports. Inward cargoes are more difficult to secure, and very few of the Puget Sound steamers bring anything like full cargoes, although the Portland steamers fare slightly better, this being a much greater distributing point for Oriental merchandise than any of the Puget Sound ports. The Indravelli, of the Portland & Astoria line, has about 5000 tons of inward cargo and is also bringing about 100 Chinese passengers.

JOKE IS ON THE JOKERS.

Intent on Persecuting Newly Wedded. Their Boomerang Hits Them.

As the Astoria train pulled into Rainier Sunday night, a newly wedded couple were assisted on board by their admiring friends, who followed them and showered rice upon them most generously. The train usually stops at the switch a few hundred yards this side of Rainier for the down train to pass, and the members of the happy pair told them that they would accompany them to Portland, planning, of course, to alight at the passing track. The down train was late that night, however, and the conductor of the up train was ordered to pass at Gobie,

QUORUM OF BOARD LACKING

Would-Be Dentists and Patients All Go Away Disappointed—Governor Geer's Delay in Making Appointment is Main Cause.

A scene of disappointment, indignation and surprise, spiced with sighs of relief and some rather laughable circumstances, was presented at the North Pacific Dental College yesterday afternoon. It had been advertised that the State Board of Dental Examiners would meet and give the would-be dentists of the state a chance to become licensed practitioners by passing their examinations. The plan was to supplement the questions on theory with a test of their actual ability as workmen, and to this end it was advertised that patients appearing at the college at this time would have their teeth treated free of charge. Dr. Logan, of Astoria, on account of a recent death in his family, was unable to attend. Dr. Beavis, who is sick in the East, was absent, and the Governor had failed to appoint a successor for Dr. Wright, of McMinnville, whose term has expired. There are but five ex-aminers, and three must be present before any business can be transacted, so all of the aspirants for honors, treatment, licenses and otherwise were doomed to disappointment, and there were as many ways of receiving the news as there were applicants. The tooth artists had ground up on their theory until they felt that they were walking encyclopedias of information, and would hardly forget a friend on the street lest they might forget a point that was stored up in their minds to be used during the trying test.

"I'll have all of this work to do over again," said one, as he was told that the examination was postponed until December 8. "I know I could have passed today."

"Glad I've got more time to study," said another. "I'll bet I am loaded for the exam by December."

There was the same difference in the way that the word was received by the applicants for treatment. They had been saving up their hard-earned money, they had seen the notice of the opportunity to have them treated free. Some were highly indignant that they had come for nothing, while others gave a sigh of relief as they learned that the painful ordeal of pulling a tooth was to be postponed.

Lacked a Quorum.

The first meeting was called for yesterday morning at the Imperial Hotel, when applications were to be received. Dr. A. L. Beattie, secretary of the board, was there, and nine applications were received during the morning. Others failed to get their applications in until after noon, making about a dozen all told. Dr. Beattie was somewhat surprised, however, to find that the members of the board did not show up. It takes three to make a quorum, and two were all that could be found. At 1 o'clock, the appointed time, he adjourned to the Dental College and there spent his time in telling the expectant people who came there that they would have to come again next December.

he adjourned to the Dental College and there spent his time in telling the expectant people who came there that they would have to come again next December.

Why There Was No Quorum.

Although there are some who have been put to a great inconvenience and expense

In coming here for the examinations, they do not blame the board for the occurrence. There are a number of circumstances which, happening all at once, made it impossible for the board to get together, but it is the general sentiment that if the Governor had not failed to appoint a successor for Dr. Wright, there would have been no trouble. Dr. Wright's term of office expired last year. At the expiration of each man's term the remaining members of the board are allowed to name three candidates for the place he has left vacant. From these three one is appointed by the Governor for the next year; the three men that were named by the board were all from Portland. This raised the ire of the other cities through the state, especially Salem, and there was much complaint. Induced by this, and wishing to look into the matter further, the Governor postponed the appointment, and finally entirely overlooked it. The law on the subject provides that Dr. Wright shall serve until his successor is appointed, but the fact that his term of office has expired has probably relieved him from the responsibility of the office, and he does not feel that he is obliged to attend.

Scenes at the College.

There were some varied scenes presented at the college during the afternoon. One young dentist, who had failed in a previous examination, was intent upon passing this time. Shortly before 1 o'clock he came slowly up the walk. His book was open and he was looking up some important points that he expected to be raised in the course of the examination. "The examination is all off," said one of the students.

"Then I've done all of this studying for nothing," said he, with a disgusted look. "I'll have to learn this all over for next time."

As others came, a dozen or more of the applicants gathered on the front steps and talked of what they would have said if they had only been asked certain questions. They had been there but a short time when their patients commenced to come in.

"Is this where you get your teeth pulled free?" asked a timid-looking boy, who had his head tied up in a handkerchief, and looked as if he had been suffering for some time. "Gee, I'm glad," said he, as he was told that he would have to come back again. "They say they can pull teeth without hurting, but I am afraid they can't do it."

"That's a purty way to do," said an old lady, as she was told of the postponement. "My husband had his teeth pulled out about it, and that the doctors were not going to give anything for nothing. December, hey? Well, you won't get me here again," and she walked angrily away.

Others insisted that they had come to get their teeth fixed, and that they were going to have what was promised them; but they were turned gently away, and soon the college was adjourned to make another try December.

IN HONOR OF THE KING.

Britishers Celebrate Their Sovereign's Birthday With Banquet.

Over 60 Britishers, Canadians and Americans gathered last night at a banquet given at Kruse's restaurant, in honor of the birthday of King Edward VII. The dining-room was beautifully decorated with American and British flags and palms. The toastmaster was George Taylor. First in the list of toasts came "The King," and then British Consul Laflin, President of the British Club, followed by the singing in chorus of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Robert Livingstone proposed the toast, "The Land We Live In," and said in part: "One of the characteristics of the British people, for centuries, has been their deep-seated loyalty to the reigning sovereign. The name of Queen Victoria is revered among all the nations of the world. We gathered in London to celebrate the crowning of King Edward and news came that he was ill, there was not only sorrow in the British hearts, but in the hearts of the people of the world. The poor man is better in this country than in any other, and I do not think you would be here if you thought this land is not better than the one you left. This is a land of plenty—we are feeding the nations of the world. Is there, for instance, any state in all the world where there is so much rain as in the State of Oregon? If you lived in an arid state, you would better appreciate the blessings of rain in helping us raise crops to produce food stuffs."

"The relation of the Subject to the King" was proposed by William D. Wheelwright, and he thought that the finer qualities of the human heart are stimulated by loyalty to King. He stated that he had seen the present King when the latter, as Prince of Wales, visited this country in 1869, and added: "My feeling for him then was one of high respect and admiration, and the following years, so far as I have been informed, that feeling has been mutual." Mr. Wheelwright praised the conduct of the British in their splendid treatment of the Boers as a conquered people. In speaking on the toast, "Queenstown for Orestes," William S. Sibson said that we must not be satisfied with 25 or 24 feet of water from Portland to the sea—there is no limit. He paid his tribute of admiration to the character of King Edward, not only as a King but as a brave, chivalrous and honorable gentleman.

Wallace McCannan gave a fine, stirring historical speech on the toast: "The Brotherhood of the Two Branches of the Anglo-Saxon Race." Other toasts followed. During the evening songs were given by Messrs. Teak, Scott and Lillis.

CHILD-MARRIAGE IN INDIA

Returned Missionary Tells of Difficulties of Abolishing Custom.

The Indo-American Woman's League, at a meeting yesterday at the home of the president, Mrs. S. V. Hill, heard Miss Jennie Coleman, who has been a missionary in India for twelve years, answer questions on the custom of child-marriage in that field. Miss Coleman declared that the Buddhist religion is in the main superior to Brahminism, for the Brahmin priests teach their people that it is a crime to marry to a child, but to the parents, to allow a girl to reach 12 years of age unmarried. Many of the educated men of India, she said, refuse to allow their children to be married until they are still children, but the threat of loss of caste induces them to consent. These men are not Christians, but are enlightened and know the abuses of the system of child-marriage.

She told of a physician whose daughter was in one of the mission schools. He refused to allow her to be married, but quickly lost caste and the only means of regaining it was to allow his 15-year-old daughter to marry a man of 30 years, which he finally consented to do. Child-marriage, Miss Coleman declared, is working the ruin of India, for the average age of Indian women is only 24 years. The British government is doing all in its power to correct such evils, though the opposition is tremendous and increasing.

Two native societies, being alarmed at the power the Christians were gaining over the people, are working for the reform of the child-marriage custom. Marriage between persons of different religions is not allowed, and the only way a Hindu may marry a Christian is to become a Christian. There are absolutely no child-marriages among the natives who have become Christians, Miss Coleman says.

The next meeting of the league will be at the home of Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway, on November 24.
