WICKLINE BOYS EACH FINED $15.—The wreck which occurred November 8 on Mount Tabor car, near Sunnyside, was investigated yesterday by Municipal Judge Hogue, when Oliver S. Wickline was charged with assaulting C. H. Lefevre, a trolley-car conductor, and Robert Wickline was charged with using abusive language, on the complaint of G. H. Barker. Evidence was heard for nearly two hours, and witnesses differed considerably in their testimony, but the two Wickline boys were found guilty and were each fined $15. The fines were paid.

In giving evidence, the crew of the trolley-car insisted that one of the defendants, while on the rear platform of the car, was "monkeying" with the car-brake, on the night referred to, that the car was brought to a stop several times, and that the Wickline boys, after being asked if they had meddled with the brake, entered a vigorous denial. When the car stopped suddenly near Thirtieth street, the conductor rang three bells as a signal for the passengers to come to his assistance, and when the motorman opened the door leading to the rear of the car he had a controller handle in his right hand, and the Wickline boys thought he was going to assault them. Lefevre was struck in the nose. It was also charged that Robert Wickline used bad language toward the conductor. On the witness stand, the Wickline boys testified: "The car stopped so often, owing to something going wrong with the brake chain under the car, that I 'joshed' the conductor and people can't have any idea of the amount of money that was paid for my assistance, and I did not use bad language, but the conductor did. My brother and I did not meddle with the brake." The other defendant corroborated.

INCREASE IN COST OF LIVING.—"Goodness, gracious!" exclaimed a woman yesterday to her grocer, who had just asked for a can of lard, "eighty cents for a five-pound can of lard, and the can ain't full I know. None of the cans are, and everything's so high. I don't want that brand," she continued, "I've got that one," pointing to another. "That is the only pure lard I can find. All the others smell of cotton-seed oil or something. I wonder what you're going to do with the other brands? A roll of butter seventy-five cents," she moaned, "and flour has gone up, too. Everything is dearer than it used to be, except sugar and people can't live on sugar alone. My husband likes hot cakes for breakfast, but he can't have them often now. It takes flour, baking powder, milk and eggs to make good hot cakes, and all these things are high—store eggs, thirty-five cents a dozen, and then there must be plenty of butter and maple syrup, or jelly, or both, to eat on them. After the bread and jam, the grocer asked if the cost of living had increased as she had intimated. He said that the expenses of keeping house had increased within the last three years at least 30 per cent, and he thought 25 per cent. "Why," said he, "to begin with, rents have gone up, fuel is dearer, flour has risen, and, as the woman said, sugar is the only thing that is cheaper. Butter and eggs are naturally high at this time of year, but not often so dear as now. What means prosperity for the producer but the expense to the consumer is increased."

SUPPLY OF GAME IN THE MARKET.—There was a fair supply of Mongolian pheasants in several of the markets yesterday. Some arrived by belated trains Monday evening and more by the early trains yesterday morning. There was a good demand for them, and the display rapidly grew smaller. At one place several long strings were seen, among which were pheasants, quail, and other game. The pheasants were marked that it was wise for the hunters to spare the hens, but it was found that there had been the usual proportion of hens in the lot, though they had been pumped out by the hunters. The pheasants were more tender than the cocks, the latter when old being inclined to be tough. The price all around was $2.50 per pair, which was considered reasonable by the purchasers. There have been no large lots of blue or ruffed grouse or quail coming in. If the weather clears up, there will probably be a fair supply of pheasants in the market, but there is a danger of the market being overcrowded with them. Mallards are the largest and wisest of waterfowl, and the little teal is fine for broiling. Other varieties are sprigalls, blackjacks, butter-balls, etc., are seldom seen in large numbers.

STORY OF A CATSKIN ROBE.—A man passing down Third street yesterday noticed in a show window a robe of cat skins. There were 24 skins in it, black, spotted, brindled. The man went into the place to inquire about this robe, which he said looked just like the one he had had made in slaughterhouse the cats to secure the skins. He found that this particular robe had been made in London a good while ago by one of the rector of a parish there, who had harvested 100 cat skins in that parish and had tanned them in the attic of the rectory. He disappeared of so many cats was charged to a man who had been detected in poisoning a marauding cat and throwing it in the river, and the boy pursued his hunting and trapping unmolested. He had to complete the robe for a hunter and trapper in the great Northwest and eventually found his way here, but is not now in the business of catching cats. It may be said that catskin robes are not so valuable as seal-skin robes.

NEW WAY TO DRAIN FOUNDATION.—Notwithstanding the copious rains of the past few days, the excavation for the foundation of the Holman-Underhill Company's new building, which now a small lake a short time ago, is now clear of water. This state of affairs has been brought about by sinking a hole down to a stratum of gravel. The water collected and what has fallen since has been absorbed by the thirsty gravel and now seeps in it. The excavation had been pumped out two or three times before this scheme was thought of, but the water always was replaced by a new and larger supply. It will now soon be possible to complete the excavation and get work started on the foundations.

Joint Committee Decides on Apportionment of Total of $4000 Among Them.

At the meeting of the Oriental committees of the various commercial bodies and the Lewis and Clark Fair, held at the Chamber of Commerce office on Washington street, Monday night, it was decided that the method of raising money to defray the expenses of the Osaka exhibit would be to call on the Lewis and Clark Fair board for $2000, the Chamber of Commerce for $800, the Board of Trade for $800 and the Manufacturers' Association for $200. The committees will report back to their respective bodies, and another meeting will be held on Monday next to see what action the organizations have taken.

The gentlemen present at the meeting last night were Paul Westinger, chairman, and S. M. Meers, A. H. Beyer, Leo Friede, I. B. Hammond, T. S. Townsend, H. E. Dosch, W. H. McMonies and H. E. Reed. After a few minutes of preliminary discussion, Colonel Dosch was requested to give an estimate of the expenses of the exhibit. This was finally set at a round $4000, so that all contingencies should be met, in case they should arise. This amount was discussed, and it was a question in the minds of certain members as to what was the better method of raising the fund, and who had any authority to make a loan of the money. It was also asked if the fair directors had a right to appropriate anything, and after it was shown that the exhibit was to secure reciprocity, it was conceded that the fair ought to do something.

Mr. Westinger said: "It is now time to wake up. There must be something doing, and we should make this success by all means, we ought to do something."

Mr. Meers proposed that the various organizations should each put up a share. The Fair Board $2000, the Chamber of Commerce $800, the Board of Trade $800 and the Merchants' Association $200. This being put in the form of a motion, it was carried unanimously. It was moved that the committees present report to their respective organizations, and see if action could not be taken before another meeting to be held on Monday, November 24.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

"Alphonse and Gaston." Tonight at the Marquam Grand Theater "Alphonse and Gaston" will be the attraction. With it will be presented a musical farce, "Alphonse and Gaston," has been staged under the direction of Frank Tannehill, the author of the play. It is a musical farce and satirical caricatures of those now famous characters of fiction that has achieved notoriety through the talented drawings of the celebrated cartoonist, F. Oppel. The play is called a musical farce to differentiate it from the commonplace plays which, under the designation of farce-comedy, have fairly inundated the country with poor plays that were not refined.

"Alphonse and Gaston" is a musical comedy of the same element of farce and music which have made musical comedy so popular. The music is all original, and was composed by Ben M. Jerolim, and Herbert Tiltzer, who are among the foremost composers of popular songs. All of the scenery is new, and was made expressly for this production, and the costumes are elaborate and beautiful. Many prefer them to those of the comedians, and to them has been given the opportunity of making Alphonse and Gaston stage celebrities. They have so far, it is said, made a musical farce which has been bestowed upon their work. Several novelties in stage management have been drawn to the production much favorable discussion.

"The Belle of New York." At the Marquam Grand tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, November 20, 21 and 22, "The Belle of New York" will appear. By special request of Bobby Matthews, a matinee on Saturday, November 22. Since its last visit here the company has appeared in every state in the Union and after its engagements here starts out via San Francisco. Notable in Portland throughout the Union "The Belle of New York" is better known than any other musical comedy written. This is easily accounted for by the long run in New York and London have made it the most successful musical comedy in the world.

"Hunts of Oak." Seats will be placed on sale Friday morning for James A. Herne's famous play, "Hunts of Oak," which comes to the Marquam Grand Theater next Monday and Tuesday nights.

"Hunting for Hawkins." For good, honest, healthy fun, "Hunting for Hawkins," the bundle of sunshine, wins easily in a walk. Its appearance is guaranteed to produce a hearty laugh, and the greatest series of successes that a comedy has ever known. Most of us can remember how they laughed till they cried at the irresistibly funny lines and situations produced by Mr. Goodwin, and will welcome with delight its re-appearance at Corbray's Theater Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinee and evening, November 20, 21 and 22. This season has been brought about by sinking a hole down to a stratum of gravel. The water collected and what has fallen since has been absorbed by the thirsty gravel and now seeps in it. The excavation had been pumped out two or three times before this scheme was thought of, but the water always was replaced by a new and larger supply. It will now soon be possible to complete the excavation and get work started on the foundations.

"A Gold Mine." Nat C. Goodwin's splendid comedy, "A Gold Mine," will be the offering at the Baker Theater next week, starting with Sunday matinee. The Nell Stock Company will appear to an splendid advantage in "A Gold Mine," and the entire production will be one of the most elaborate put on here this season. This comedy has been one of the greatest successes ever produced by Mr. Goodwin and will be a treat for Portland theater patrons. There is every evidence that the advance sale is already one of the largest since the opening of the season. There will be a matinee on Thanksgiving day.

"Lost River" at Corbray's. It is the distinctly human types of Joseph Arthur's "Lost River" that the scenic effects, startling mechanical devices and laughable comedy scenes which have made a success of this clever play. There is also a hobo quartet, a "circus" and a "crazy" scene. The three thoroughbred horses and a thrilling bicycle race in a realistic storm, to add interest to this latest product of the author of "Blue Jeans." "Lost River" will be at Corbray's Theater for one entire week, beginning Sunday matinee, November 23.

Last Night of "Pennsylvania." The final performance of "Pennsylvania" will be given tonight at Corbray's Theater.

To Sell Unclaimed Goods. The Collector of Customs will sell at auction on Friday a quantity of unclaimed goods which have remained at the Custom-House for one year, as well as 100 cans of prepared opium and 19 boxes of cigars seized by the customs officials some time ago. The unclaimed goods

(No. 2.) THE RISE OF THE MARTIN GUITAR

It is often asked, "Why is the Martin Guitar better than others?" This can be answered in one word, only, by saying that it partook from the first of the conscientious nature of its founder. Quiet, retiring, Mr. Martin lived for his art, and was satisfied with nothing unless it was as nearly perfect as he could make it. In keeping with his character, he moved to a quiet settlement in Pennsylvania in 1839, and there worked until his death in 1871, when he left a well-established business to his descendants. Here Madame de Goni and other famous musicians visited him, with the result that his guitars became known as artists' models. A description of some leading styles will be given later.

"THUMP BOXES"

In using the expression, "thump-box," we wish it distinctly understood that no disrespect is intended to that much-abused but useful article of furniture. It has its mission in this sad world of ours, and so long as its work is faithfully performed it deserves kind words rather than blame. There are many persons who know and care nothing about music as an art, but who recognize that a house at the present day which does not contain something bearing the semblance of a piano appears crude and unfinished. What they require is something to stand in the corner of the room, which looks shiny, and upon which the "one-dollar-a-week" installment or "club" principle, and if not too freely used will often last until the final payment is made.

If you are looking for this kind of a piano, they can be found in Portland, but not at the warehouses of Soule Bros' Piano Company, 325 Washington street, who handle only high-grade, reliable instruments, such as the Steinway, Estey, A. B. Chase, Emerson, Richmond, Starr and many others, pianos that will last a lifetime, and at a reasonable price. Fine piano-tuning and repairing. Phone Main 677.
