

SWORD FOR CLARK

Design Chosen for Testimonial to Admiral.

WORTHY OF THE NAVAL HERO

Gift of People of Oregon to Commander of Famous Battleship Which Bears State's Name—Admiral Will Be Invited Here.

Definite steps were taken today a selection of the Admiral Clark testimonial sword by the committee appointed for that purpose at its meeting yesterday afternoon. A number of designs and specifications from various manufacturers were examined, but as the committee did not approve any design in its entirety, a committee of three—J. C. Alnsworth, Colonel David M. Dunne and Paul Westinger—was appointed to arrange the details of the general design adopted. In conjunction with Albert Feidenheimer, with whom the order will be placed.

The general design favored was that submitted two years ago by Mr. Feidenheimer, when the proposal of a testimonial sword for the commander of the battleship Oregon was first suggested, and was inscribed with the name of Captain Clark. The rank of rear-admiral has since then been conferred upon the commander, and the new design must bear the new title. Mr. Feidenheimer's sword was designed by J. E. Osborne, the president of the New York Academy of Design, after suggestions by the Portland jeweler. Several pieces of appropriate etching found on the other swords will be incorporated on the new blade and its massive scabbard. The detail committee will report to the general body tomorrow and the details decided upon will be sent by Mr. Feidenheimer to the manufacturer selected, who will in turn make a complete design and the order will at once be placed and the work begun. The designs examined yesterday ranged in price from $800 to $1200, and the cost of the selected sword will probably be near the latter figure.

The members of the committee present yesterday were: J. C. Alnsworth, chairman; Colonel H. W. Mitchell, secretary; F. H. Hopkins, W. M. Ladd, Paul Westinger, Colonel L. L. Hawkins, Colonel David M. Dunne, E. M. Brannick and A. W. Lambert were not present.

It was not easy to pick and choose among the many beautiful and elaborate designs submitted. Those of the Shreve Company, of San Francisco, were especially heavy and ornate, though displaying artistic taste and excellent workmanship. The Ames Second Company of Massachusetts, which will probably make the blade of the sword in any case, was well represented. The designs of the Gorham Manufacturing Company had the advantage of bearing the admiral's insignia very conspicuously, as they were recently designed. The reading of the voluminous specifications required much time and, as the committee was not thoroughly satisfied, it was suggested to send for Mr. Feidenheimer, who responded immediately. It soon became apparent that the entire design could not be selected then. Mr. Ladd first grasped the situation.

"Mr. Alnsworth," said he, "if you are the chairman of this committee, I wish to make a motion that a committee of three, yourself, Colonel Dunne and Mr. Westinger, confer with Mr. Feidenheimer and arrange the details, and that you report to the general committee on Wednesday."

As this seemed the only solution of the question, it was at the adjourned meeting. Secretary Mitchell reported that $1122.45 had been deposited in the bank in the name of the committee and that several towns of the state were as yet unheard from, he felt reasonably sure of $150. Several half-promised donations from well-known men of the city are not yet in, but with the sum on hand a handsome sword, suitable in every way to the purpose, can be purchased, and the committee will no longer delay action on account of lack of funds.

The question of inviting Admiral Clark to Portland to receive the long-delayed testimonial was also taken up at some length. Some thought that the Admiral would be only too pleased to come and publicly receive the sword, while others thought that a man of his nature would shrink from such publicity. It was decided to quietly ascertain the wishes of Admiral Clark on the subject before an invitation was extended. If the invitation is accepted, all expenses will, of course, be supplied from the fund, and the cost of the sword must therefore be somewhat regulated by the decision of Admiral Clark. There will doubtless be sufficient funds to expend $1200 on the sword and yet bring the Admiral West for the presentation, as the railroads have promised to do their share in the patriotic work.

Not only will the decoration of the scabbard be done in the best of the engraver's art, but both sides of the fine steel blade will be suitably inscribed. On one side will be engraved:

"Presented to Admiral Clark, of the U. S. S. Oregon, by the people of Oregon, in commemoration of the battle of Santiago, July 3, 1898."

The reverse will be etched with a picture of the famous battle, giving the names of the vessels and showing the position of the Oregon in relation to the others of the fleet. A small picture of Mount Hood will probably be ordered on either the blade or the scabbard near the hilt. The guard will be of entwined oak leaves, symbolic of purity and strength, and the trimmings and the buckles will be of solid gold. A blue enamel shield, bearing the stars of Admiral, may be placed on the scabbard, but in any case they will be set in the handle, which will be covered with the regulation sharkskin. Part of the work of the detail committee will be to decide on the materials for the greater part of the sword.

The people of Oregon who have contributed to this truly patriotic cause may rest assured that the design selected will in every detail be appropriate to the deeds of the renowned commander of the famous Oregon.

DEPENDS ON EDUCATION.

Future of American Cities Discussed by President Butler.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, delivered an address at the Auditorium tonight on "Municipal Education." He said that the cities of the future depend upon the fundamental education of children, and that the educational problem is the most important problem of municipal affairs.

"The city is the first manifestation of the forces which are now making great combinations of capital and creating organized labor. They are the outgrowth of our industrial and commercial progress, and as our manufactures and trade increase, so will the great centers of population increase and multiply. The fundamental problem that confronts the municipality is fundamental education. It costs about a fourth, and in some cases, a third of the entire expense of maintaining a great city to maintain an adequate elementary educational system, but these schools must be maintained and the American type of individualism, which is the safety of the Nation, must be conformed with in the teaching of the children."

Drugging for More Bodies. ASHLAND, Wis., Nov. 24.—Although a large number of men have been drugging the bay all day in the vicinity of where Leo Foss is supposed to have fallen off the ore dock Saturday evening, the efforts have been unavailing. It is said that three men named Brown, Voss and Brace are missing, and have not been at their homes in this city since Saturday evening. When last seen they were going to the fire. It is thought probable that they are under the debris.

LAWYER BINGHAM MAD

SWEARS IN COURT AND IS FINED $20 FOR CONTEMPT.

"Pay Up Within Two Days or Go to Jail for 10 Days," Says Justice Reid.

Lawyer Edward W. Bingham was fined $20, yesterday, for contempt of court, by Justice of the Peace Reid, and warned that, if the money is not paid within two days' time, he will be imprisoned for 10 days. The case in which the dispute occurred was a civil suit by A. B. Keaton, to recover $85 from Mrs. Margaret Forrester, owner of plans for a house erected at Fourteenth and Market streets. Judge Hufford represented Keaton, to whom had been assigned the claim of Emil Schacht, an architect and Mr. Bingham appeared for Mrs. Forrester.

The evidence showed that Architect Schacht had been employed by Mrs. Forrester to prepare three plans from which three houses were to be built, and after the plans were prepared, Lewis Hodier, son-in-law of Mrs. Forrester, concluded that there was not room in the lot for three houses, and asked the architect to arrange for the building of two larger houses, instead of three smaller ones. At the time the plans were drawn, the architect stated, only one house had been built valued at $250, but the Forrester people built two houses, when they had only settled with the architect for one house. A dispute took place as to what was owing the architect for the change in the plans he made, in building the second house, and he brought suit through A. B. Keaton, his assignee, to recover $85 to Schacht and another architect named F. Williams, testified that it is customary for an architect to be paid 3 1/2 per cent for his work in preparing plans used in this manner, according to the value of the property.

Lawyer Bingham had been fuming for some time in wading through the mass of evidence, and he growled out something which Justice Reid did not hear, and the Justice said: "What did you say, Mr. Bingham? I beg your pardon?"

"I say that it is a d—d outrage the way my client has been treated," shouted Lawyer Bingham.

"You are fined $10 for contempt of court," said the Justice, sternly. Mr. Bingham immediately saw that he had gone too far, and he forgot his anger for enough to apologize to the court, promising not to so offend again. On this understanding the Justice remitted the fine, on condition that the offense be not repeated. In a short time after this, however, Lawyer Bingham placed his witness on the stand, and because the witness possibly did not answer in the way the lawyer wished, Bingham exclaimed: "This is a piece of d—d stupidity."

"Mr. Bingham," said the Justice, "as quickly as a flash, 'I will not permit you, sir, to trifle with this court any longer. I am surprised to find a lawyer in the practice you have conducted himself in the manner you have done here. I fine you $20 for contempt of court. Do you have the money with you?"

"I have not," admitted Bingham. In giving his decision as to the claim for $85, the Justice found for the plaintiff. "I give notice of appeal," announced Bingham, and as he was about to leave the courtroom, he said: "Judge, do you really mean to fine me $20?"

"You will find that out before I am through with you," was the reply of Justice Reid. "I give you two days in which to pay the $20, and if this is not paid you will be required to stay in jail 10 days."

COMMITTEE ON GOOD ROADS

Men Who Will Conduct the Campaign—Membership by Counties.

President J. H. Scott, of the Oregon Good Roads Association, has appointed four members at the executive committee of the body. They are: H. M. Palmer, County Judge of Linn; George C. Blakeley, County Judge of Wasco; L. A. Rood, County Judge of Washington, and W. Travillon, County Judge of Baker. Other members of the committee are: President J. H. Scott, County Judge of Marion; C. J. Trenchard, County Judge of Clatsop and treasurer of the association, and J. E. Mager, ex-County Judge of Yamhill and secretary of the association.

This committee met several days ago and evolved a plan of work. Secretary Mager was directed to write to each vice-president requesting that interest be awakened in good road legislation in the several counties, and that good road leagues be organized in the various precincts. Representative to Congress Fongus will be asked to have mailed to members of the Oregon Legislature, as far as possible, copies of good road laws of other states.

The membership fee of counties is $5. Sherman, Marion, Clatsop, Benton, Lane, Wasco and Yamhill have already paid. The committee will meet again at the call of the president.

SITE FOR THE MONUMENT

Committee Decides on Sixth Street, Opposite Postoffice.

The committee having in charge the general soldiers' monument, which is to be placed in the city, will meet today at 4 o'clock in the office of C. U. Gantenbein, to hear the report of the committee on location. This committee will recommend a site in the Postoffice block, opposite the Hotel Portland. The location which was recently turned down by the Common Council was in the center of Sixth street, half way between Morrison and Yamhill, and would necessitate a driveway encroaching slightly upon the blocks on either side.

The new location is on the grass plot between the Postoffice building and Sixth street, and is laid out in such a way that only 12 feet of the circle will protrude into extra-wide Sixth street. The ground has been so diagrammed that driveways on either side will accommodate the business of the Postoffice. After a careful examination of every proposed site in various parts of the city, the location committee considers the Sixth-street site the only one suitable to a monument of the character proposed.

If the general committee favorably considers this site, permission to erect upon it will at once be sought from the Treasury Department. The location committee is composed of H. S. Rowe, General Summers, H. C. Campbell, Ben Selling and C. E. McDonell.
