His Clients Sell Their Property for Banknotes, Which He Charms-Buried in the Barn, Money Turns to Slips of Paper.

Taking advantage of the superstitiou nature of his patrons, and dazzling them with the hope of enormous riches, De Amandus, a clairvoyant who has an office at 167% First street, recently succeeded in robbing two Montaville women of $1028. A complaint has been made to the Dis-A complaint has been made to the pro-trict Attorney, and the detectives are now trying to find the clairvoyant. When seen late last night Deputy District Attorney Arthur C. Spencer was not able to tell the names of both of the victims, al-though he said one was a Mrs. Moor, of Montavilla, and the other a relative of J. B. Wild, a liquor dealer who has a saloon on Third street near Alder. Mr. Wild, when seen, admitted that a rela-tive of his had been the victim of a trick which had cost her a considerable amount of money, but refused to give the name, The game which the smooth clairvoyant played was a simple one, and it is almost incredible to believe that two women of a mature age would have been taken in by such a scheme. He had instilled confi-dence into them, however, by his smooth talk, and had filled their minds with avaricious hopes, and they were ready to do his bidding.

"Get $1500," said he, "and bring it to me. I will charm it. You can bury it and leave it for a certain length of time. Upon digging it up you will find that it has turned into a box of gold and you will be magnificently rich."

Drenmed of Great Riches. The women believed his great story and made an effort to raise the money. Both were poor, and the hope of a box of gold was beyond anything they had ever dreamed of. Through years of hard work and saving they had possessed themselves of a small amount of property. This mortgaged, thus obtaining the g. About December 1 bills to the at of $1028 were drawn from an Oregon City bank and the women pro-ceeded to the office of De Amandus to have their money charmed. One had succeeded in raising $700, and the other $228. They did not count on their present share, however, for the box of gold, they thought, would be of such great value that they would never again need to fig-ure their accounts closely. The bills were that they would never accounts closely. The bills were closely tucked away in an envelope, and when they arrived at the office they told the magician that they could not raise the entire amount, but would like to have as much gold as $1022 would produce. He took the envelope, made some marks upon it and went through a ceremony which it and went through a ceremony which the wheels. The as much gold as $102 would produce. He took the envelope, made some marks upon it and went through a ceremony which was supposed to give it the power of changing into a large amount of gold as soon as it was buried away. They could not think that it was any trick, for he did not wish to know where it was to be buried rather impressing upon them that did not wish to know where it was to be buried, rather impressing upon them that the whole thing was to be a secret, and that they were to be the only ones to know where the money was buried. After he had counted it over carefully to make sure that it was all there, and that he was not making a charm for a different amount, he sealed the envelope again and handed it back to them, charging them. amount, he sealed the envelope again and handed it back to them, charging them that it was not to be opened or tampered with, but buried at once and left until December 22, when they could dig it up and would find that they were enormously rich. With trembling hands and fluttering hearts they proceeded at once to Buried the Money in the Barn. They did not wish any one to know of the burial of the money, and finally decided that the safest place was in the center of the barn. A board was torn from the barn floor, a hole the required size was dug, and the money placed in it. It was on December 5 that the money was buried, and they were to have their riches in time to celebrate the great ches in time to celebrate the great made for presents on the day of festivity, and they confided to each other that they would make a sensation when they dug up their fortune. "We were foolish to believe such a thing," they said, and laughed together as they thought how they had been fooled. But it did not then occur to them how badly they had really been deceived. Their spirits depressed and their hopes of riches vanished, they went back into the house to divide their money, and it was here that they received the hardest blow of all. In place of the bills which they expected to find, the envelope was filled with newspaper clippings and small pieces of paper the size of a currency bill. The mystery was too deep for them. They were sure that no one had rency bill. The mystery was too deep for them. They were sure that no one had known where the money was buried, and felt as though they had in some way failed to carry out the instructions, and the charm had worked in an opposite direction. They went at once to see the clairvoyant, but he was not to be found. Their adventure was then related to friends, and it took but a few moments and a small amount of explanation for and a small amount of explanation for them to solve the mystery.

"Yes," they admitted, "he had handled the money, but had put it all back in the envelope and had left them to bury it envelope and had left them to bury it see that the might see fit. There was no chance for him to have taken the money, for he did not know where it was buried." The friends were quick to see, however, that in handling the money and going through his motions, which were to charm it, that he had mystified the two women who had not watched him closely enough, and had substituted the paper slips and kept the bills for his own paper slips and kept the bills for his own

He must have taken the money along, for there is nothing left of him now but an office on First street with his name engraved on a large plate on the front door, with a long list of his magical accomplishments.

Exhibits Bendy for Japan.

Exhibits Ready for Japan.

The 64 cases of exhibits supplied by different manufacturers here for the Osaka Exposition are now being collected at the Upper Alaska dock, ready to be shipped to Japan on the Oriental liner Indrapura, which will sail about January 8. It is therefore desirable that all exhibits should be on the dock by the end of this week.

The question is often asked Mr. Dosch;
"What will be the ultimate result of this exhibit at Osaka?" He says his idea is to exploit all the exhibits at the exposition oit all the exhibits at the exposition the benefit of all exhibitors, and to rest Oriental and foreign exhibitors of the exposition it is agreeable to exhibitors to establish a commission agency at both Yokahama and Kobe, free of cost to them, where exhibits can be left as a sort of permanent exhibit to attract trade here, he thinks the best possible results will be secured. If the exhibits are sold or given away further interest in them will be lost. If they are formed into a permanent display the commission agent will endeavor to secure orders for such goods. In the Orient all business must be done through an agent, as it is all cash business there and no running accounts are kept or credit given. For this reason Mr. Dosch is anxious to get as complete an exhibit of our manufactures as possible.

TO COUNT UNION VOTES. Ceptest for Labor Commissioner

Nomination to Be Decided;

Today will decide the contest for Labor Commissioner. The union votes have all been received, and the committee will count them today. Communications have been sent to every union in the state, and a request made to have their members vote on their choice for Labor Commissioner. The man who receives the largest number of votes will be the man who will be named in a bill which will be placed before the coming Legislature creating a State Leber Burger and the office ating a State Labor Bureau and the office of Labor Commissioner. It is generally conceded that the contest lies between G. Y. Harry and A. A. Bailey, and there number of names of influential men attached to the petition for his release, but Besides the bill creating a State Labor the police think that these men have been

Officials Say He Has Bad Record and Was Clearly Proved Guilty of Brutal Marder.

Members of the police department are indignant at the attempt that is being made to secure a pardon for James L. Warren, who is confined in the penitentiary on a charge of mansiaughter. Out of the 12 jurymen, they say nine were for conviction of murder in the first degree, and the verdict of manslaughter was a sort of compromise between those nine and the other three. They say that there is no doubt but that he is related to some influential men in Georgia, but that his relationship to these men has not changed in any way since he was sentenced and that there seems to be no excuse for asking for a pardon for him.
