Looking Out for City's Interest.

"But." interposed Flegel, "the Council need not accept any ordinance the com-pany may present. The Portland Company pany may presented its ordinance and we altered it. The City & Suburban presents one on the ne lines, and we may change it. The Portland did not provide for rights-of-why or for street or bridge work, until we insisted upon those provisions and also upon the matter of compensation. The street committee should draw up an ordinance for the City & Suburban, and because the the matter of con nmittee could not get around to it, is reason why I called the ordinance up our last adjourned meeting. I am not favor of the company surrendering its cause that structure is equal to the carringe of only its present cars. It is plausible, has a well-defined plot, is as chuck full of roaring comedy situations as a shad is full of bones, and could be played without a single specialty, but Sullivan and Mack have always in-troduced a goodly number of specialties, and this season they are keeping in line of their well-established custom. Besides their own original specialties, which are undoubtedly the most inimitable of any before the public, almost every member of the company will contribute an original idea of some kind. From a farce-comedy standpoint, the management, Joe W. "A Temperance Town."

The late Charles Hoyt's best comedy, "A Temperance Town," will be the offering of the Neill stock company at the Baker Theater all next week, starting with Sunday matinee. There will also be a special holi day matinee on New Year's day. "A Tem perance Town" is, without exception, the best comedy ever written by Mr. Hoyt, and is one which has met with tremendous uccess on the road as well as in its New York production, where it had a long run to crowded houses. The characters are of the New England type, and give those who portray them ample opportunity to dis-play the splendid ability of the actor. There is an abundance of comedy in the play, with just enough sentiment to give it a most pleasing tone. The characters of Mink Jones and Bingo Jones are excep-tionally good, and in the Nelli stock company production are in the hands of Will ernard and Howard Russell, resp ively. Mr. Bernard has proved himse ough actor, and his delineation of the part of Mink Jones will be artistic. Mr. Russell will play a splendid Bingo, and Miss Countiss will be charming as Ruth, a part which she will play with her usu excellence

The lads from the Cecille were clad in natty uniforms, and looked seamanlike and well bred as they filed into the hall before the admiring eyes of the society and several hundred of Portland's people They were given places in front, and the display was imposing in the extreme. After a welcome extended by the committee and much exchanging of the compliments of the season the programme commenced, and was carried out most agreeably. At the end of the formal entertainment there was dancing and merry making.

The boys and their officers seemed to ap preclate very much the effort made by the Arion Society to show them regular Christmas cheer, and many a lad evident-ly forgot the distance from home as he collicked and danced with the warm hearted friends who had given the tertainment. The programme was as follows:

Sulphur Matches Stopped Dog Fight An exciting fight took place on Washngton street vesterday between a bulldo and a cocker spaniel, and the way it was brought to an end will show just how dog fight may be stopped. The dogs were the property of two women, one of whom was accompanied by a little girl. The mother of the child owned the cocker spaniel. The buildog seized the spaniel with a grip of iron on the back of the neck, and the fight progressed toward the entrance of a jewelry store, when the door was closed to prevent their getting inside. The two women tried vainly to separate the two dogs, the owner of the buildog trying to pull him away from the paniel, but the dog's jaws were locked to the spaniel. the spaniel. Finally, when it appeared that the spaniel would be killed, a clerand, drawing half a dozen sulphur matches from his pocket, lighted them nd then held them to the nose of the bulldog. As the fumes of the sulphur entered the dog's nose, and the lighted matches burned the tip of his nose, his jaws fell apart, releasing the spaniel. The woman who owned the buildog thanked the man for applying his remedy so promptly and effectively, for she was sure her dog would have killed the span-iel very soon. In the next instant the two owners of the dogs got into a dispute, and for a moment it looked as if they would renew the fight, in which event the ap-plication of sulphur matches would hardly
