In conclusion, the Board of Education of New York City, in its continued efforts to ensure the safety and comfort of its students, has mandated the implementation of strict regulations for all students. These regulations include daily health checks, mandatory face masks, and a comprehensive disinfection protocol. Furthermore, the Board has revised its grading system to accommodate the current circumstances, ensuring that students' grades reflect their understanding of the material rather than their performance on exams. This approach aims to provide a supportive and equitable learning environment for all students, ensuring that educational opportunities remain accessible during these unprecedented times.
