

DEBATE ON TRUSTS

House Begins Considering Littlefield's Bill.

HURRY-UP BILL PASSED FIRST

Under Rule Restricting Speeches, the House at Last Gets to Business—Powers Says 'Trust Revision is No Remedy'—Clayton Answers.

The antitrust bill debate which opened the House yesterday did not develop much animation, although there was a fairly large attendance in the galleries. The rule under which the House was to operate, however, precipitated a lively discussion. The Democratic protest was against the rule because it did not permit them to secure a record vote on a substitute.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Grosvenor, from the committee on rules presented to the House today the special order for the consideration of the anti-trust bills. It provides for the consideration of both the bills to expedite legislation was enacted, and the Littlefield publicity bill.

Underwood (Dem. Ala.) urged the House to vote down the previous question on the rule, so as to afford an opportunity to amend it.

Grosvenor said the terms of the rule were by no means unprecedented. The majority, he said, would be held responsible for whoever legislation was enacted, and that responsibility it was willing to assume. The Democratic position, he said, could be developed in committee of the whole. He proposed that the country should see the difference between the conservatism of the bills to be presented and the radicalism of the opposition.

"If you are certain that we shall offer radical amendments, are you not willing to go on record against our folly?" asked Thayer (Mass.).

"We are not willing to take up the time of the House," Grosvenor said, "to allow some individual gentleman on the other side to make his own platform. When any respectable number on the other side get together, we will be willing to meet them here at once."

Clayton (Dem. Ala.) thereupon announced that if it were a matter of saving the time of the House he was willing to surrender an hour which had been allotted him for debate if the other side would permit the minority to offer a substitute or make a single motion to recommitt.

"The gentleman knows I have no power to accede to such an arrangement," said Grosvenor, "and if I had I would not do it."

The rule was then adopted, 160 to 107—a strictly party vote.

In accordance with the provision of the rule, the Senate bill to expedite cases under the anti-trust law first was considered by the House on the subject of trust legislation. A verbal amendment to make it conform to the bill as reported from the judiciary committee, and it was adopted. The bill then was passed by a vote of 160 to 107.

Under the rules of the House the resolution itself into committee of the whole and took up the publicity bill, it having been agreed that Littlefield should control the time on one side and the Democrats on the other. The bill is for ten hours general debate and three hours under the five-minute rule, at the end of which time the previous question will be considered as ordered on the bill and pending amendments to its passage.

Not a Party Measure. Powers (Rep. Mass.) opened the debate. He declared the pending bill was not a party measure. Both sides of the judiciary committee, he said, had labored earnestly on the subject of trust legislation. For 15 years there has been a growing and increasing demand for some act for the control of the great industrial combinations. Finance and unrestrained competition did not exist. The public was convinced that the great transportation companies gave favors to the large producers which smaller producers did not enjoy. The pending bill, he said, would be entitled properly "A bill to defend the American people in their industrial liberty."

The combination of industries, he said, was the result of an economic evolution and could not be stopped. All that could be done was to insist that within certain limits, that no advantage over its smaller competitors should be allowed the big corporation in the shipment of goods. He believed there was no trust that could not be reached under the commerce clause of the Constitution.

The proposition of the other side to reach the trust by removing the tariff, he said, was futile, since there are trusts in 139 articles of the tariff. He believed the connection, Powers said he believed the time had come when there should be a general revision of the tariff on other grounds, not as a remedy for trusts.

In concluding, Powers pointed out the fact that there was a growing socialistic sentiment in this country, as evidenced by the increased vote of the party in Massachusetts last Autumn. He said that there were, he said, many intelligent people who believed the Government should proceed to take charge of the railroads and other means of interstate commerce. It was important, he said, that these people should be made to understand by the enactment of a bill like the pending one that Congress proposed to hold these gigantic combinations in check.

Use Taxing Power. Clayton of Alabama, a member of the judiciary committee, who followed Powers, agreed with him that there had been no politics in the consideration of the subject of regulating trusts in the committee, but he insisted that the methods proposed by Republicans and Democrats differed radically. He and his associates, he said, believed that the National party should not vote for Senator Mannebach, the official candidate. An official organ says the Nationalists have established a junta in Buenos Ayres and are preparing a revolutionary movement. The Uruguayan government has taken energetic measures and is holding troops under arms to crush a rebellion.

POWER OF MORMONISM

SENATORS DEBATE ITS BEARING ON STATEHOOD. Anti-Polygamy Amendment May Be Adopted—President of Church Controls Candidates for Office.

Discussion of the statehood bill in the Senate yesterday turned on the question of polygamy, and a number of Senators participated.

Gallinger, replying to McComas, said that he was in favor of an amendment to the statehood bill covering the question of polygamy as strongly and firmly as possible.

The influence of the Mormon church over politics caused a large and sharp debate. Hale characterized the debate as interesting, valuable and startling, because it had disclosed a powerful religious organization "exercising itself as a dominant, potential force" over the mind and action of its followers, which should be taken into account in future legislation.

Before Kean resumed his speech in opposition to the bill the Senate went into executive session, and adjourned a few minutes afterward.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—During the consideration of morning business in the Senate today a bill was passed authorizing the Pittsburgh Carnegie & Western Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Allegheny River at Pittsburgh.

Quay then objected to the passage of any further bills until the committee on the pure food bill passed by the House, and on an ay and no vote the motion prevailed, 49 to 18.

The bill was read, and an amendment was agreed to providing that nothing in the act should be held to apply to substances or materials manufactured and sold exclusively for the arts and industries, but only when manufactured and sold as drugs or foods.

Consideration was not concluded at 1 o'clock when the statehood bill came before the Senate. The debate turned on polygamy. McComas started it yesterday by criticizing the pending bill as being too liberal.

Gallinger, replying today, said he was willing to accept an amendment as could be drawn prohibiting polygamy should be inserted in the bill.

Hale criticized the exercise of power by the Mormon church, Warren asserted that the Mormons exercised no control in his state.

Dubois declared that no polygamist could occupy any high political position without the consent of the first presidency of the Mormon church. The same influence, he said, was exercised in New Mexico and Arizona. He said that Idaho could control the Mormon people whenever it so desired. If the Mormon people should openly, through their first presidency, interfere in the politics of Idaho, he would guarantee to take the stamp and disfranchise every Mormon in one campaign.

Hale replied that the matter was a dark element that could not be penetrated by the light that usually illuminates and enlightens communities generally in the states.

Teller said that the Mormon church is all-powerful, and that whenever it spoke through its first presidency the great body of the church responded to the demand that was made.

Rawlins (Utah) spoke of the proclamation of the head of the Mormon church in 1890, declaring that there should be a cessation of polygamy and that the Mormon church should be taken out of politics and that Mormons were free to express their political preference as they saw fit. Thereupon, he said, opposition to the admission of Utah as a state was removed. He declared, however, that the Mormon church influence in politics in Utah is still an important factor.

Spooner inquired if it was true that the first presidency could dictate whether or

HENRY L. DAWES IS DEAD

AGED SENATOR FROM MASSACHUSETTS PASSES AWAY. Man Who for Forty Years Took a Leading Part in Nation's Affairs—His Work for the Indians.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Feb. 5.—Former United States Senator Henry Laurens Dawes died at 5:15 this morning at his home in this city. He was 86 years of age.

Mr. Dawes had been ill since Christmas last, when he contracted a severe cold while driving. The cold developed into grip, which undermined his system. Since last Sunday night he had been in an unconscious condition.

When President Roosevelt visited Pittsfield last Fall he called upon the veteran statesman. It was while returning from the visit to the Dawes house that the stroke occurred in which the President figured.

The funeral will be held next Sunday. Henry Laurens Dawes was born in Cummington, Mass., October 30, 1815. He was graduated at Yale in 1839, became a teacher and edited the Greenfield Gazette, and subsequently the Adams Transcript. He was admitted to the bar in 1842, and served in the Legislature from 1843 until 1850, when he became a member of the State Senate. He was a member of the constitutional convention of Massachusetts in 1850, and was elected to Congress by successive re-elections until 1872.

In 1848 he was a delegate to the Loyalist Convention in Philadelphia, and in 1855 he succeeded Charles Sumner in the Senate, and was re-elected in 1861 and 1867. He has been chairman of the committee on ways and means, has served on the committee on public buildings and grounds, and inaugurated the measure by which the completion of the Washington Monument was undertaken.

He was the author of many tariff measures, and assisted in the construction of the wool and woolen tariff of 1868, which was the basis of all duties on wool and woollens from that time until 1883. He was a member of the committee on appropriations, civil service, fisheries, Revolutionary claims, and Indian and naval affairs.

He was appointed on a special committee to investigate the Indian disturbances in the Indian Territory, upon which he made a valuable report. The entire system of Indian education due to legislation was created by Mr. Dawes. Among the important bills of his authorship passed are the severalty bill, the Sioux bill, the bill making Indians subject to and protected by the criminal laws.

One of his most important measures was the introduction of the weather bulletin in 1869, of Professor Cleveland Abbe, for the purpose of collecting and comparing weather reports from all parts of the country.

FALLS FROM A WINDOW. William Paul, Opera Singer, Meets Tragic Death in St. Louis. ST. LOUIS, Feb. 5.—William Paul, of London, England, leading baritone of the Castle Square Opera Company, showing at the Century Theater here, is dead as the result of a fall from a sixth-story window of the Southern Hotel. His skull was fractured and his arms broken. When picked up on the pavement Mr. Paul was unconscious. He was taken back to his room in the hotel, where he died shortly after.

The singer was leaning from the window when he is said to have lost his balance. He plunged out head first, striking the telegraph wires opposite the second window. These broke his fall, but they did not save his life. It was reported that Mr. Paul threw himself from the window, but nothing authentic as to this could be learned. J. D. Leffingwell, manager of the Castle Square Opera Company, said:

"It was an accident. Why should he have killed himself? He had everything—his profession, his money, no troubles that I ever knew of, and he has been with me all season."

Mrs. Paul is prostrated and is under the care of two physicians. At the time of Mr. Paul's first appearance here with the Castle Square Opera Company two years ago he was married to Miss Ethel Gordon, of Sydney, Australia. Other amendments allow the wives of bankrupts to testify in the proceedings; provide for an increase of the fees of referees and trustees to an average of about 50 per cent over the fees allowed by the present law, and prohibit the courts from allowing greater fees than the law permits in any case, and add to the list of debts from which a bankrupt cannot be relieved a discharge from bankruptcy. The new law includes debts to wife and children and alimony. The list of corporations which may go into bankruptcy is increased by adding mining corporations.

not a Mormon should hold a public political office. Mr. Dubois answered the question by stating that no Mormon would run for a high political office without the consent of the first presidency.

Rawlins said that, when the approval is given, the man goes forth with the benediction of the church, and that it is "While the other man," interjected Mr. Hale, "rests under the frown of the church."

Rawlins replying to Hale, said he did not know that this was the case with any other church.

Answering Spooner, Rawlins said he did not care to enter upon the question as to whether the church would overtake the church domination in the affairs of the state, because it was obnoxious to them. The disposition to do this, he said, is growing, and in Utah conditions were improving. Replying to McComas, he admitted that a majority of the Legislature
