The last quarantine flag was taken down yesterday, and there is not now a case of contagious disease in the city. Temporary Office at Fourth-Street Entrance

Plan for the Exposition.

PORTLAND, March 8.—(To the Editor.)—Whilst the Lewis and Clark Centennial Fair is of general interest, I beg to be allowed to make some remarks concerning the Fair grounds. Mr. Huber, who has been appointed director of the grounds, is a very skillful civil engineer, but for manager of a fair ground like that in contemplation, a little more than a civil engineer is required. He ought to be a botanist, horticulturist, payagist, florist, rovarian, pomologist, maraicher, vegetable cultivator, etc. If Mr. Huber possesses the knowledge required he will be the right man in the right place, but if not, I would have suggested, if I had to say a word, that he be intrusted with the drawing of a topographical plan of the Fair grounds, for which he shall be paid, then have an architect who has the confidence of the directors to mark, on the topographical plan, the spots on which the Exposition buildings will be constructed and then give copies out to competitors.
