INSANITY THE PLEA

Defense Has Inning in DeFalco Murder Trial.

WITNESS SAYS HE ACTED SILLY

Prisoner Seems Indifferent to Testimony Introduced on His Behalf Which Tended to Prove His Mental Degeneracy.

Attorneys for the defense endeavored to demonstrate to the jury that Francesco De Falco was insane when he killed his wife. They showed by insanity experts that the man was a degenerate; they proved by his daughter that he was accustomed to "acting silly" and quarreled with her mother frequently; they introduced evidence to show that De Falco was a heavy drinker, accustomed to do away with a gallon or more of liquor at a sitting, and tried to convince the court that he was a degenerate.

The "brutal look" of the prisoner figured in the testimony, and he was declared to be in a condition of semi-coma. John Martello, an Italian grocer, insisted that De Falco talked too much and acted "crazy-like" and Nicolai Casciati, who accommodated De Falco in the matter of wines, insisted he behaved like a demented person. Casciati created a diversion by explaining he was a friend of De Falco, but he told the District Attorney that he "did not care what the state did with him."

Dr. W. O. Manion, an Eastern insanity expert, declared De Falco was a man of a low order of intelligence and held that he had never been a perfect man mentally. "The lower brute nature predominates," Dr. Manion explained. Dr. Manion distinguished between an intellectual and an organic consciousness of the action of De Falco when he killed his wife, holding that a person of De Falco's character would not be responsible for his deed. In defining alcoholic insanity, Dr. Manion testified:

"The commission of crime without a motive is one of the predominant features of alcoholic insanity. Jealousy without cause is one of the peculiarities of alcoholic insanity; also an irritable temper, not so much quarrelsome, but to take offense at things an ordinary man would pay no attention to. Alcoholic insanity is both homicidal and suicidal."

In answer to two final questions by Mr. Ditchburn, he said that De Falco is now insane and judging from the evidence he had heard, was doubtless insane when he killed his wife.

Dr. Manion was called by the defense as a man who had been connected with an Eastern insane asylum for eight years and had been for four years in charge of insane convicts in Illinois. He examined De Falco three times and testified from the knowledge gained by such examination and the statement of facts made to him.

The fact that De Falco had twice suffered from delirium tremens was brought out by the defense. In connection with his drinking, Pasqua De Fales, the prisoner's daughter testified her father was brutal, became angry quickly and was determined to prevail. She said he "acted silly." He would abuse his wife and daughter, then pet them, and the next moment would become angry again. Afterwards he would cry and say he couldn't control himself. He drank more recently and once a month became so bad he could not see. On New Year's and the day following, he was so drunk he could not talk. A fellow workman struck him on the head with the sharp edge of a shovel three years ago and she noticed a change after that. He gradually got worse. The witness said one of the neighbors remarked that her father was insane, and the children sometimes called him "Crazy Frank."

Dr. Candiani testified to having treated De Falco twice for delirium tremens, the last time the beginning of December, 1902. He treated the wound caused by the blow with the shovel. It was a scalp wound, and he put three stitches in it. The witness said he never considered De Falco very bright, he was more of an idiot than anything else and he told Mrs. De Falco if her husband did not stop drinking he would become crazy. The doctor said alcoholic poison caused congestion and the permanent effect was to cause loss of memory, paresis, softening of the brain and destruction of the nerve force.

For the prosecution witnesses were called to prove the killing, and also to testify that De Falco admitted the cause to have been jealousy, and that he drank freely, but was not crazy when the deed was committed.

The prisoner sat throughout the day in a listless attitude and appeared to pay no attention to the testimony. He even listened to the statements of his daughter in his behalf with utter indifference.

H. J. Scharner, who prevented De Falco from leaping off the Fourth-street bridge, told of his rescue and a conversation he once had with the prisoner wherein the latter showed his jealousy of an Italian designated as "Pete." Other witnesses showed that De Falco was jealous of the same man.

Albert Genelli, who acted as an interpreter when De Falco was arrested told of his first interview with the murderer. Genelli told of De Falco's story that he had once found his wife seated beside the fire with an Italian named Gabriel and had declared his jealousy, then continued:

"I asked him a good many questions, and he refused to answer some of them. He talked rationally. I asked him if his wife had been in the habit of drinking, and he said: 'Yes, once in a while.' I asked if there was anyone in the house when he killed his wife. He first said: 'No,' and then said a man named Pete was there. He first said he was in the kitchen, and then upstairs. He got mixed up on that. Mr. Ferrera knocked on the door to get in, and when I came out Ferrera asked me what questions were asked De Falco, and said if he had got inside he would have told him to shut up."

The defense will continue its case today.

Engine Cab Afire.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The Washington Express arrived at New Brunswick 10 minutes late, and Conductor J. M. Mooney ordered the engineer to make up the time. Fireman Searles' side of the cab caught fire from the back draught of the firebox after leaving Metuchen. In response to his shouts Engineer Lyons went to his aid, but before the engineer could regain hold of the lever to shut off the power the cab was a roaring furnace. The men fled to the tender, but were pursued by the fire in the coal box. They then retired to the platform of the first car. One of the passengers, alarmed at the sound of the whistle, which the engineer succeeded in reaching, pulled the emergency brake-rope and stopped the train. Another engine was hitched on and the train reached Jersey City an hour late.

Medals for American War Nurses.

LONDON, March 20.—War Secretary Brodrick, in a printed reply in the House of Commons to a question of Harold J. Tenant, Liberal, says instructions were given March 13 to issue war medals for presentation to the five American women nurses who served on the hospital-ship Maine in South African and Chinese waters.

FACES SEEN AT THE DE FALCO MURDER TRIAL

TO PLAN THE WELCOME

ALL COMMITTEES TO RECEIVE PRESIDENT MEET TONIGHT.

Chairman Zimmerman, of Council Committee, Issues Call—Admiral Clark Sword Presentation.

All committees appointed to welcome President Roosevelt at the time of his proposed visit to Portland are requested to meet in the Council Chamber this evening at the City Hall. The call was issued by Chairman Zimmerman of the Council committee appointed by Mayor Williams. The notice reads as follows:

"Notice is hereby given that all members of the committees of the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade, the Manufacturers' Association, the Lewis and Clark Exposition, the citizens and the Council appointed to arrange for the proper reception and entertainment of the President and party, during his contemplated visit to this city, are requested to meet in the Council Chamber in the City Hall this evening at 8 o'clock.

"L. ZIMMERMAN,
"Chairman of Council Committee."

All the details of the reception of the President and the presentation of the sword given by the people of Oregon to Admiral Clark will be arranged at this meeting. Where the presentation will be made has already been settled in the minds of many members of the committees. If the weather is propitious the court of the Hotel Portland will probably be the place selected, while in case of rain the presentation must be made in a building the size of the Marquam Theater. Mrs. Percy Morgan, who christened the battleship Oregon, will be the person to hand the sword to President Roosevelt, who in turn will present it to Admiral Clark. Mrs. Morgan is the sister of J. C. Ainsworth, the chairman of the committee appointed by Mayor Williams to raise the funds for the memorial sword.

The famous sword itself is now on the way from the makers to Portland and should arrive any day. In every detail both the blade and the case will be the equal of any presentation sword given to any officer in either Army or Navy. Encased in a box made of several varieties of beautiful native Oregon woods, it will in every way be a fitting token of the appreciation of the people of Oregon to the man who by the long trip around the Horn and the battle of Santiago made the name of their state famous through the work of a battleship built upon the Pacific Coast.

Colonel Mitchell and the other members of the committee, which worked so hard last year to provide the funds for the sword, find their labors continued, as Mayor Williams has appointed them a committee to arrange for the reception of Admiral Clark and to have in charge the presentation of the sword. Those who will see that this event passes off smoothly and pleasantly are: Colonel R. W. Mitchell, Paul Wessinger, A. W. Lambert, W. M. Ladd, D. M. Dunne, H. C. Bowers and F. H. Hopkins.

The Mayor last evening announced the following Federal committee: Judge C. B. Bellinger, District United States Attorney John Hall and Colonel Owen Summers.

At a recent meeting of the Lincoln-Garfield Post, G. A. R., the following committee was appointed: Colonel James Jackson, Hon. H. H. Northup and Captain A. J. Sladen. The other posts of the city were requested to appoint similar committees to meet at G. A. R. Hall Tuesday evening, April 7. These committees will probably arrange to be at the general meeting this evening with the other committees.

The Commercial Club has appointed H. S. Rowe, Colonel James Jackson, H. C. Breeden, Edward Ehrman, H. C. Wortman, H. M. Cake and R. D. Inman.

ERECTING BUILDINGS.

Portland Canning Company Building Plant on the Southern Pacific Line.

The Portland Canning Company has commenced the erection of a plant at the old smelter works, on the Southern Pacific Railroad, between East Eighth and East Ninth streets. The removal of some of the old dilapidated structures will be necessary, and this is now being done. However, the main building, 150 feet long, will be raised and moved back from the track four feet to give room for a sidetrack. On the south side of this building the new portion of the cannery will be built, and it will extend outward over the slough. On the west side it will connect with the East Eighth-street elevated roadway, so that teams may reach the cannery.

This location for a cannery is considered an ideal one, as there will be a sidetrack on one side, providing direct delivery to and from cars, and reducing cost of cartage, or, rather, doing away with it entirely. It is understood that the plant will be a large one and will handle several hundred thousand pounds of berries. Agents have been securing contracts to deliver berries to the cannery for some time. There promises to be a large yield this year, but as both East Side canneries are preparing to handle a large output, there will probably be no surplus. The Portland Canning Company formerly occupied the two-story building on Grand avenue and East Taylor street.

FIVE DECREES OF DIVORCE

Tales of Misery and Unhappiness Are Heard by Judge Cleland.

Evidence in seven divorce suits was heard by Judge Cleland yesterday and five decrees were announced.

Elizabeth Killow was granted a divorce from William Killow, to whom she was married at Oakland, Cal., in 1895. She testified that while they lived in San Francisco and Oakland he got drunk frequently and beat and abused her. On one occasion he threw a panfull of water over her, and at another time he threw her down on the floor and struck and beat her. She testified that he has become a gross habitual drunkard. Several depositions taken in California were read. Mrs. Killow was awarded the custody of the two children.

The bonds of matrimony existing between D. M. Flanders and Vesta Flanders were dissolved because of desertion. The parties were married November 19, 1901. Flanders testified that not an unkind word ever passed between them, but one day when he came home to lunch his wife put the dishes in the wash boiler and said she was going to quit and did so.

William E. McMindes testified that his wife, Elizabeth McMindes, went away with another man in September, 1899, and never came back. He last heard of her in Seattle. They were married in Portland June 3, 1894. The divorce was granted.

A divorce was granted to Temperance House from J. C. House on account of desertion. Mrs. House testified that her husband left her, going to a mining camp near Corvallis. He afterwards went to Colorado. He had not supported her since he left, and never communicated with her. They were married seven years ago.

A decree was announced in favor of Minnie C. Erickson against Charles Erickson. The marriage was solemnized November 4, 1901, and he left her the same day.

The case of Gus Brill, an electrician, against Emma Brill, was taken under advisement. He charged his wife with cruel treatment, occurring since they separated, six months ago. He testified to various acts upon her part, stating among other things that she threw a flatiron at him.

Judge Cleland also took the case of Charlotta Benfield against Frederick Benfield under advisement. They have grown children and got along well until recently. Mrs. Benfield testified that her husband tried to kill her with a knife, and told her she was old and not worth feeding.

Seek to Free E. M. Edwards.

Edgar M. Edwards, sentenced on January 26, by Municipal Judge Hogue to 180 days in the county jail for larceny, yesterday filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the State Circuit Court, directed to Sheriff Storey. The case will be called up for hearing this morning.

Robert Galloway and George J. Cameron, who appear for Edwards, allege in the petition that no complaint charging Edwards with larceny was ever filed against Edwards, and he is consequently illegally restrained of his liberty in the county jail.

Decisions by Judge Sears.

Judge Sears will announce decisions today in the following cases:

Mary Egan vs. North American Savings, Loan & Building Company et al.; motion to vacate decree.

Saul Silverfield vs. S. Frank; motion to strike out parts of answer and to grant mandatory injunction.

Articles of Incorporation.

Supplemental articles of incorporation of the Jarbour Oriental Carnival Circus & Menagerie Company were filed in the County Clerk's office yesterday by Alex Sweek, J. M. Long and E. T. O. Keane, changing the name to the Jarbour Carnival & Circus Company.

NEW FIRING REGULATIONS

WAR DEPARTMENT SENDS MANUAL WHICH GOVERNS COMPETITORS.

Federal Government Taking Greater Interest in Organized Militia and Offers Prizes for Marksmanship.

Adjutant-General C. N. Gantenbein, Oregon National Guard, has received from the War Department, "Special Course 'C'" of small arms firing regulations, to govern target competitions of the organized militia.

The Government is taking a great deal of interest of late, in the militia, especially in their target practice, and offers special inducements in the way of tournaments and competitions that are expected to make a marked improvement in a very short time.

Rules governing range practice for rifle and carbine are set forth in the following regulations:

The class in firing to which any officer or soldier belongs, will be determined at the end of the practice season from the aggregate of the total of the best two full scores of five shots each (not necessarily consecutive) that he has made on the range, as follows:

Fourth Class—All who have not fired.

Third Class—All who report for practice and are unable to score 10 out of a possible 25 at 200 yards in any score, or who have fired two or more full scores at 200, 300 and 500 yards, and from the best two have made an aggregate of less than 67.

Second Class—All who have fired two or more scores at 200, 300 and 500 yards, and from the best two have made a total of 67 out of a possible 150.

First Class—All who have fired two or more full scores at 200, 300 and 500 yards, and from the best two have made a total of 83 out of a possible 150.

Marksmen—All who have fired two or more full scores at 200, 300 and 500 yards, and from the best two have made a total of 98 out of a possible 150.

Sharpshooters—All who have fired two or more full scores at 200, 300, 500 and 600 yards, and from the best two in each range have made a total of 160; and have fired two or more full scores, timed fire, at 200 yards (30 seconds firing interval in each score), and in the best two have made a total of 25; and have made one skirmish run of 20 shots, advancing from 600 to 200 yards; the total of all scores being not less than 235.

Experts—All who have made the necessary total to qualify as sharpshooter and have fired two or more ful scores at 500 and 1000 yards and from the best two have made a total of 40 at 800, and 35 at 1000 yards.

Competitions—There will be two classes of competition, state and National. State competitions, if practicable, will be held annually. The National competition, which will be held each year, will be at such place as shall be designated by the Secretary of War. The state teams visiting the National competition, will, under section 14 of the act of January 21, 1903, receive pay, subsistence and transportation from the appropriation for the support of the organized militia. The results of the National competition will be published by the War Department.

Rules and regulations for competitions—These, as far as practicable, will be the rules prescribed for department and army competitions of the regular Army.

Medals—The medals for competitions in the state will be fixed by the state authorities. The medals for the National competition will be fixed by the Secretary of War.

This course will be preceded by sighting, position and aiming drills, gallery practice, and estimating distance drill, using the methods and rules prescribed in the new firing regulations, United States Army, as far as they are applicable. Proficiency in estimating distance will not be requisite for qualification.

Jewish Tribute to President.

NEW YORK, March 20.—At a banquet given by four lodges of the Society B'rith to Dr. Friedrich Mueller, Dr. Singer, replying to the toast, "The President," said the Jews had more motive than the ordinary American patriotism for doing homage to the President. He continued: "It was Roosevelt who inspired the Roumanian note of Secretary Hay of August 11, 1902, a political and historic act the ultimate effects of which upon the amelioration of the condition of the Jews in Western Europe can not be fully realized at the present time." Dr. Mueller spoke briefly, calling America a nation of idealists, not materialists, because of their magnificent philanthropic institutions.

Dr. Mueller will start for Chicago tomorrow to attend Lolita Armour, and to take the chair of orthopedic surgery in the University of Chicago.

VIEWED THE ROUTE

State Board on Line of The Dalles-Portage Road.

AN INFORMAL EXAMINATION

Representative People Went Along and Gave Information and Looked at the Scenery—Estimates of the Cost of the Enterprise.

Governor Chamberlain, Secretary of State Dunbar and State Treasurer C. S. Moore yesterday made an informal inspection of the route for the proposed state portage railroad from a point above Celilo Falls to the Big Eddy, five miles above the City of The Dalles. This would make the road 8¾ miles long. No official action can be taken, however, before May 21, when the law will become effective, unless there shall be a referendum.

As was announced, the state board which is to have charge of the portage railway at the dalles of the Columbia went up Thursday night to make a preliminary examination of the ground. After the train had pulled out, a passenger who wanted to see the members of the board went back into the standard sleeper to look for them. They were not to be found there, and the man appealed to the conductor.

"Oh, yes, they're aboard," he replied, "but they're 'way up front in the chair-car."

And there they were found. Secretary of State Dunbar and Treasurer Moore were in the smoking-room with their cigars and a drummer from Louisville, who was entertaining them with stories. It is necessary to say he was entertaining them with stories, in order to avoid possible reflection upon the record of decorous temperance men, for everybody knows what kind of drummers go out from Louisville. Away in the opposite end of the car was Governor Chamberlain. There was neither cigar nor grinning joker for him, but by his side sat Sam White, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and he was weaving for the Governor the most wondrous fairy tales—of political rainbows springing from pots of ballots just out of sight over the hill, of a Prince Charming, who was to win a Congressional bride in the First District on a fair June day; of a certain Occidental potentate whose wisdom and benevolence should make him so beloved by his people that they would give him at least a second term. Sam's voice melted into the Governor's ear and comforted him very greatly. Peace at that end of the car was so solemn and sacred that nobody dared invade it until an unholy newspaper man came along.

"Ah, ha!" exclaimed the state chairman, breaking from his rhapsody with true Democratic agility. "Ah, ha! I thought you said we would have a Governor who couldn't say 'No.' You find it's different, don't you? He has put some very effective 'noes' where they will do the most good to the people. And he's got more of 'em, too. I tell you, the Democrats will redeem the country."

It was plain that the state board had divided on political lines, on issues as opposite as the two ends of the car. But on arrival at The Dalles the names of the three state officials were juxtaposed on the register of the Umatilla House in the most neighborly manner possible, and all reposed under the same roof after their nightcaps had been properly adjusted. It is a decent and happy family, if it does represent contrary political faiths.

Yesterday morning a special train, consisting of a locomotive and a caboose, provided by the joint courtesy of the citizens of The Dalles and the O. R. & N. Co., was drawn up in front of the hotel and placed at the disposal of the state board, the newspaper men and such others as cared to view the route of the proposed state portage railway, and could crowd on the train, from footboard to roof. The train ran up to Seufert's, and there took on T. J. Seufert, who gave much valuable information concerning the route. Among the others present were the following:

Ex-Governor Z. F. Moody, Mayor F. Gunning, County Judge George C. Blakeley, Sheriff F. C. Sexton, Councilman J. T. Peters, ex-Representative N. Whealdon, Dr. William Shackelford, W. H. H. Dufur, E. O. McCoy, James Falk, F. W. Wilson, Frank French and G. J. Farley.

At Celilo the special stopped and everybody got off and walked along the track and looked at the wet water and the pebbly beach and the stretch of intervening white sand. The river was at low stage, so the character of the shores could be seen. Above Celilo the slope is gentle and the soil not too shifty. Below the falls abrupt basalt walls reach up from the water many feet, leaving barely room enough for the present O. R. & N. track. There engineering skill will be required to provide a resting place for the state portage. Then rocks and sand alternate all the way down to the Big Eddy, which will be the Western terminus of the road. That is five miles above the City of The Dalles. At two or three places the train stopped, and the people got off and looked around. The members of the state board were in the cupola most of the time, and had an unobstructed view of the route as the train passed along.

At 11:30 o'clock the special returned to The Dalles, having taken two hours for the trip.

G. J. Farley, who built and put in operation the state portage road at the Cascades before the opening of the canal there, and who has placed his services at the disposal of the state in connection with the present project, gave the board the benefit of his estimates. He is of the opinion that the 8¾ miles of main line and two miles of siding can be built and put in operation with the state appropriation of $165,000. He thinks one locomotive and 18 freight cars will be sufficient rolling stock. Mr. Farley's figures were yet in the rough, so he gave himself $5000 of latitude, placing his estimate at $160,000 to $165,000.

There was a general understanding that the O. R. & N. Co. was preparing to change its track in several places along this route, and it was generally assumed that correction of the O. R. & N. curvature would leave more room for the portage road at important points. At other points it seemed necessary that the O. R. & N. should agree with the state authorities upon an equitable division of the space available for tracks, or that the state would be obliged to exercise the right given in the statute to condemn present railroad property. It is presumed, however, that this matter will be amicably adjusted.

Mr. Farley's estimates do not contemplate warehouses or wharfboats at either end of the route. He says they are not necessary. And then there is no money for them.

Governor Chamberlain, Secretary of State Dunbar and Treasurer Moore returned to Portland on the train, arriving at 4:20 yesterday afternoon, Mr. Farley accompanying them. The members of the board said the purpose of the trip was to get in mind the general situation, the lay of the land, etc., so as to be able to handle the matter intelligently when it should come up for consideration. The law authorizing the construction of the portage railroad will not go into effect until May 21, so no official action under it can be taken before that time. In any event, before the portage railway can be made of service the Government will be required to spend something like $30,000 in blowing out a point of rocks that interferes with the navigation of the channel out of the Big Eddy. That is included in the Hart project for improvement at the dalles, and there is no doubt that it will be done before the portage road could possibly be put in operation. It is said that construction of the road would take at least six months.

Salem Unitarian Pastor Installed.

SALEM, Or., March 20.—(Special.)—Rev. Frank Abram Powell was installed as pastor of the First Unitarian Church in this city this evening. A large crowd was in attendance. The occasional sermon was delivered by Rev. C. E. St. John, of Boston, who is secretary of the National Unitarian Association. Rev. George C. Cressey, pastor of the Church of Our Father, in Portland, made a brief address, in which he extended the right hand of fellowship to the new Salem pastor, and welcomed him to his work in Oregon. Rev. W. G. Eliot, formerly pastor of the church here, and now state superintendent of the Unitarian Church, delivered an impressive charge, to which Gideon Stolz responded. Following the ceremonies an informal reception was held.

McKinley Memorial Models.

PHILADELPHIA, March 20.—The jury of award in the McKinley memorial competition has selected five models as worthy of the $500 in prizes offered to contestants. The memorial will be in the form of a statute of the late President with a cost of $50,000, and will be placed in Memorial Hall, in Fairmount Park. There were 38 contestants. The final award will be made to the designers of one of the five models just selected.

Contracted Diseases.

The progress in the study of chronic contracted disorders during the last years has completely modified the treatment of these very frequent diseases. There is no chronic disease so widespread and its tenacity and resistance to all forms of treatment are features universally known. More than five years ago we described the method of dilatation which we have always since employed, and which has been gradually adopted by the profession. We have added few modifications since that time, but the method has proven its own worth in the hands of others, and its results are incontestible. Dilatations by special dilator, irrigation and frequent inspections of the canal with the electric light tube, that no maneuver be undertaken that is not surely indicated, gives indisputable successful results.
