If, as Mr. Corbett's friends believe, he will insist upon being relieved from further work for the reasons explained, a new president will be elected some time later on. At present members of the board have not even considered the question of a successor to Mr. Corbett. The board accepted a design for the monument to be erected to the memory of the explorers, Lewis and Clark. Two designs were submitted. The board selected one for a round column, declining to approve the proposal for a fluted column. The total cost is not to exceed $7500, and this sum is expected to cover the cost of stone already quarried. The construction of the complication of the monument was left in the hands of

It was declared that additional hotels must be construct-ed prior to the time the Fair is opened in 1966. Speaking along the line of addi-tional hotel facilities, Mr. Penton de-clared the tourist travel taxed the old hotels of California, and especially of San Francisco. He held that this tourist trav-el was being diverted to the North and Francisco. He held that this tourist travel was being diverted to the North, and that Portland was sharing in it. Within two years Mr. Fenton believed the erection of additional hotels would be necessary under normal conditions, and with the Lewis and Ciark Exposition as an extra drawing card the urgency of the occasion was great. The fine arts committee was asked to consider the question of erecting a monument to Lewis and Clark in Clatsop County upon the spot where the famous explorers spent the Winter of 1805-6. The question was brought up resterday, but the directors and the State Commission were not ready to take any action.

The following members of the State Commission attended yesterday's meeting and gave informal approval to the action taken by the board: F. G. Young, J. H. Albert, W. E. Thomas, R. Scott, Dav Railerty, J. C. Flanders, Frank Williams and C. B. Wade. The directors present were: George W. Bates, A. H. Devers, Samuel Connell, F. Dresser, W. D. Fenton, Rufus Mallory, A. L. Mills, John F. O'Shea, H. W. Scott, Paul Wessinger, W. D. Wheelright and P. L. Willis.

Another call was made yesterday by the committee on press and publicity for a design in colors symbolic of the Lewis and Clark Exposition. The competition is open to the artists of the world, and a prize of 1500 is offered for the most appropriate design. A circular letter sent out by the Exposition officials reads as follows:

The committee on ness and publicity of the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, which will be held at Portland, Or. U. S. A. in 1905, has offered a cash prize of 800 for the best design in colors, symbolic of the Lawis and Clark exploring expedition of 1904-6, the settlement of the western part of the United States by Americans, the development of traile on the Pacific Ocean and the reawakening of Asia. The terms of the competition are as follows:

The competition will close June 1, 1903. Designs must be submitted before that date, and should be addressed to I. N. Pielschner, chairman of the committee on press and publicity of the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition. Portland, Or. The prize will be awarded as soon after that date as it will be possible for the judges to agree upon the most meritorious design. All unsuccessful designs will become the property of the Exposition Company. The committee reserves the right to rester any and ties reserves the right to reject any and

CHINESE WITNESS SWORN First of the Kind Presided Over by United States Judge.

Manila Cablenews.

The ceremonial of swearing Chinese witnesses was successfully carried out in the grounds of the building occupied by the Court of First Instance in Manila, on February 15, and, though rather ludicrous February M. and, though rather ludicrous from an American standpoint, it seemed to be rather impressive to the many Chinese who had gathered to witness it. Doubtless it brought back recollections of the "old country," and was a treat that many of them had not witnessed for many years. One of the witnesses was so out of practice that he had to be coached, and finally a paper covered with Chinese characters was handed to him from which he read the oath that he took.

The proceeding was first started by making a small altar beneath a paim tree in the patic of the building. Colored can-dles and tapers were lighted, then a halfdoes not tapers were lighted, then a min-dosen or more oranges placed in a row just behind the candles. A box con-veniently hear served as a chopping block upon which to behead the chickens. The first witness then took a position on his kness before the altar with three sticks of must in his hands which he had nreof punk in his hands, which he had pre-viously lighted at one of the altar can-dles. Clasping his hands before his heart. both grasping the three sticks of punk, he began to call the curse of God upon his father, mother, sisters, brothers, him-self, wife and children, and their chil-dren's children, and, in fact, all connected with his family.

with his family tree, if he deviated one bit from the truth while giving his testi-mony before the court.

After thus swearing, he grasped a live rooster from the hands of an attendant, and, laying its head on the extemporized chopping block, severed it from its body at one blow, allowing the knife to drop from his hands at the same time with an expressive gesture. Each witness summoned for the defense went through the same performance until five chickens had met their doom. The defendant himself then took his place before the altar, and.

An earnest invitation was extended to M. Kiuchi, Imperial Commissioner from Japan to the St. Louis Exposition, to visit Portiand on his way home. Mr. Kluchi will be in Chicago today, and a telegram was addressed to him at that city. He is expected to return to his home by way of the Northwest, and the opportunity to consult with him relative to a display on the part of Japan at the Lewis and Clark Exposition is sought.

It is expected Mr. Kluchi will be in the Northwest within ten days. If he has ime prior to the sailing of the steamer which he is to take, it is believed he will come to Portland.

It is said that 70 letters will be asked for, but the members remaining with the Second Church say that not that number will go out. However, it will probably soon be known just how many will join the new church organization. It is said that the mancial backbone of the Second Church will withdraw and join the new movement, and direful results are predicted. NEWYORKTRUANCYSCHOOL Youngsters Domiciled There Until Cured of the Habit.

New York Commercial Advertiser. It is the opinion of City Superintendent William H. Maxwell that the way to prevent truancy is to make the public schools so attractive that the children will not be willing to be absent. Toward this end he says very considerable progress is behe says very considerable progress is being made. But the scholastic Utopia is not yet, and there are today about 50 urchins in Manhattan who are mastering the three "R's" willy-nilly. These young persons are confined in the New York Truant School, at 215 East Twenty-third street.
In 1896 the plan to establish a truant school was first considered, but it was not until 1897 that any active measures were adouted. Then it was that City were adouted. Then it was that City were adopted. Then it was that City Superintendent John Jasper appointed a mmittee on the enforcement of the mpulsory education law, with Clarence E. Meieney as chairman, and as a result the Twenty-first-street institution was or canized.

In 1808 A. T. Brennan was appointed In 1808 A. T. Brennan was appointed principal, and the building and the work was enlarged. At first the school was merely a day school-the truants being committed from day to day, In this way much of the good effect of the school was lost, and steps were taken to make provision for the commitment of truants for longer terms. A dormitory was established, and the work of the school materially aided. The school today has its dormitory, its playground and classrooms. Three teachers labor over the rebellious youngsters, who are put through a course youngsters, who are put through a course in manual training, which is aimed to make them more useful when they get out. They are also compelled to keep up with their books.

The aim of the school, however, is not to make the inmates feel that they are being punished, so much as to give them a proper training, to encourage new habits, and thereby to prevent future of-

where they may have an opportunity not only to mend their ways, but to learn to respect law and discipline. By this di-vision of the truants the confirmed truants are separated from the younger ones and their bad influences averted.

Under the new plan only those truants who are committed for the first time will be confined to the Manhattan School. It is the hope of the board that the present Legislature will so amend the compulsory education law as to make it possible to commit every truant for it possible to commit every truant for a change will make it necessary the schools to keep open during the amer menths, as the truants will not
