McGovern Confident of Regaining His Laurels.

CORBETT HOPES TO

Champion Has Hard Work Getting Down to Weight-His Opponent Plans a Wary Mode of Attack.

BAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 10 (Staff correspondence.)—In spite of all the stories of fake which have floated westward, the McGovern-Corbett battle which will be decided tomorrow night will be on the level. No two fighters that have ever faced each other in the ring have trained more faithfully than have McGovern and Corbett. The little Brook-lyn cyclone has been to weight and unlyn cyclone has been to weight and un-der for several days past, and today at his training camp at Croil's Gerden, Ala-meda, he looked a world-beater for a lad of his size. Young Corbett, on the other hand, has had his own troubles getting down to weight. In fact, he weighed at 6:30 this evening 128 pounds, and will spend a part of the night on the road. He will be compelled to go through the same course in the morning, and the beat he hopes to do is to be at 127 pounds at 3 o'clock. Corbett's daily grind in order to reach Corbett's daily grind in order to reach the weight has worked against him in the betting, and the wise men who wager their wealth on the outcome of a fistle encounter are holding back. McGovern for days has been a 19 to 8 favorite, but if the Denver lad makes the weight tomorrow there are chances that the champion will enter the ring at even money. So far there has been little money bet on the battle. The bets that have been placed are all small ones, and the amount is not over $10,000. The bulk of the money will be bet tomorrow at the ring-side, and notwithstanding the fact that it is a championship battle, not over $50,000 will be wagered.

McGovern Strong and Past.

McGovern Strong and Fast.

McGovern if he is fit, as he says he is ought to regain his lost laurels. He has had nothing to worry him during his preparation for the fight, while with Corbett it has been all worry and hard work. Terry is as strong and as fast as he ever was, and he has bot the last dollar he has on earth that he will regain the championship from Corbett. Great crowds have watched the little terror fitting himself for the battle, and have come away declaring that there is nothing to it but McGovern. Terry has demonstrated that he is as game and courageous as a lion. He has gone through his training without a mishap, and tomorrow night when he steps in the ring he will be as fit as a fighter can possibly be, so if he loses all the credit must go to Corbett.

While McGovern has always declared that it was the "lucky punch" that laid him away at Hartford, he has not lost sight of the fact that the Denverite has a terrific right that has the sleeping potion always lurking for the unwary in the late of the mourage of the fight bave been advised expense money to make the trip to Portland, and both parties agree as to the division of the gate money. Tracey will agree to weigh 140 pounds at 6 o'clock the evening of the fight, but Gans insists that he shall weigh 140 pounds at the ringside. The wires were kept hot yesterday morning Tracey received a letter from Ganr' manager. Al Herford, which set forth the conditions under which the world's champion was willing to meet Portland's lightweight fighter.

"I am willing to accept 500 as expense money to make the strip to Protland, and both parties agree as to the division of the gate money. that. Gans can come down to 121 pounds, without any trouble, and it is a concession for him to fight at 140 pounds."

Martin Denny, who is arranging the details for his partner, is disposed to accept the statements with a little sait, and says that he does not believe Gans can fight at 131 pounds.

I don't think he has it over me, and I am going to prove to my friends that I too, have the wallop that will bring home the money."

McGovern's Plan of Attack.

Unlike Corbett, McGovern has not named the round in which he is to win. He has agreed upon a fighting programme which is, that he will walt for Corbett to bring the battle to him and not carry it around the ring, as be has in all former battles. McGovern knows that Corbett has a weak middle structure, and he will give Corbett's stomach his undivided attention. McGovern is not the only one who knows that the champion's stomach has gone back on him. This was demonstrated the night he fought Little Eddle Hanlon. Hanlon ripped his right into Corbett's commissary department in the I'lth round and the state ments with a little sait, and says that the does not believe Gans can fight at the constant he does not believe Gans can fight at the does not believe Gans can fight the the does not believe Gans can fight at the wall says that the does not believe Gans can fight at the wall at the does not believe Gans can fight the wall not believe of the will alloy at the them of the will alloy at the them of the money, Tanke of ripped his right into Corbett's commidepartment in the 17th round and the champion went down for the count, and it was only through his masterful general-ship that he was able to stall Hanlon off mans.

salt sen air is against free perspiration, and for a lad of the champion's build, who must sweat freely in order to reduce in weight, the beach is no place. Corbett knew this, but his great love for the breakers, which is nothing short of a passion with the little chap, was so great that he could not be persuaded to train elsewhere. When he is nothing short is nothing short of a passion with the little chap, was so great that he could not be persuaded to train elsewhere. When he is nothing short is nothing short of a passion with the little chap, was so great that he could not be persuaded to train elsewhere. When he is not let a down on which is nothing short of a passion with the little chap, was so great that he could not be persuaded to train elsewhere. When he is not let a down on which is nothing short of a passion with the little chap, was so great that he could not be persuaded to train elsewhere. When he is not let a down on the little chap was a solution to the let a down on the little chap. he is down on the beach watching the waves as they break and spread over the sands at his feet. During the rain, even when the downpour was so great that the road was a running stream, the Denver lad kept up his roadwork. The United States Life Saving Station is within a few hundred feet of his training quarters, and yesterday he borrowed a nor wester and a full set of waterproofs and took a six-mile tramp, always keeping close to the great waves, which were running yery heavy. He returned still fresh, but in spite of the heavy clothing was not perspiring as freely as he should have done, considering the amount of work.

When the two puglists of the agreement reads, in case a foul is claimed by either raids, the decision of the referee must be withheld until after a reputable physician has made an examination and reported what injury, if any, has been inflicted. Graney wants to have the full meaning of the agreement understood by all parties. It must be known whether the examination is to be made at the ringside and who will make it. In fact, all the circumstances of such an event must be clearly laid down. considering the amount of work

Corbett Has Hopes.

Yet, in spite of this, Corbett says that while he did not expect to beat McGovwhile he did not expect to beat McGov-ern in two rounds, he is positive he will do the trick in eight. Whether he can, remains to be seen. If he can keep Terry away from his stomach he stands a chance to win, but if he mixes it and gives Terry half a chance, his clutch to the championship will be gone when he wakes up. The out-of-the-state contin-gent who will witness the battle is not as great as was at first expected. It is estimated that not more than 300 ring-fol-lowers will journey to the Bay City to see the mill. Eddie Grancy has been chosen referee. He does not like the agreement entered into by the lads re-garding the question of a foul. He de-clares that a fast fighter that had outpointed his opponent for 16 rounds could easily claim a foul if it should happen that he got into trouble, and by the time the examination could be made he would be entirely rested and be able to win, where had he not claimed a foul he would have been defeated. The ring-fol-lowers will watch this agreement with considerable interest. W. G. M.

"I like McGovern for a winner," said Tracey's partner, Martin Denny; but he did not venture the assertion very loud until his partner had engaged in convermining spartner had engaged in conver-mation elsewhere.

"Reafly, I can't see anything to the fight except McGovern. I argue like this: The last time that McGovern fought Corbett he counted upon his name being a winner. He thought he would have Corbett scared to douth as soon as he got into the ring, and did not set into the proper above. and did not get into the proper shape. It was the aim of Corbett's life to beat Mc-Govern, and he was in the best of trim. Mac knows this time that he has no snap and he will train to the last. If I bet my money it will be on McGovern if I have to give odds."

"McGovern every time." said "Mysterious Billy" Smith. "There's no use talk-ing, Corbett can't fight like McGovern. Think of that blow of his. Why it would land you into the middle of next week. McGovern's fight in ten rounds, that's what I sas."

"In seven or eight rounds," interrupted Denny, who by this time had been drawn back into the conversation. "That fight cannot last long. There is too much bitter feeling between those men, and they are both too anxious to win. They will fight their hardest from the word go.

Trout Season Opens April 1. The trout-fishing sesson opens tomo row, and many an anxious angler wil enjoy a day's sport with red and real The early fishing is reported to be good this year, and this is vouched for by some few who have taken advantage of the law and the good weather to hie themselves to different streams before the open season. Dalry and Johnson Creeks have suffered the most, but doring the past week this has not been the case, as Game Warden Quimby has been paying visits to these districts and appointing describes to selecdistricts and appointing deputies to assist him in the enforcement of the law. Scrog-gins and Gaies Creeks are also reported as having been fished in to some extent during the past month, but the early fish-ing is not so good in these streams as in the others, and it is believed that few trout have been taken. Black bass fish-ing is also becoming very popular, as the fish are quite plentiful in the sloughs tributary to the Columbia River, while they may also be caught in the William-ette near the mouths of small streams flowing into the river. The open season for the black base commences June I, and the Game Warden is anxiously awaiting an opportunity to use his own rod on the gamy Eastern fish. In the meantime he
