You can lift up a man if he stumbles if he lies down, you cannot carry him. If you try to, it will not help him and it will not help you. So, fundamentally, it must rest upon yourself to win success. As I and, haw can do something, wise legisla-tion of the Government can do something. If you have laws badly administered they will stop any prosperity. It is easy enough to get a bad law that will stop the whole business, but to get a good law is not so easy. It is easy to sit outside and say easy. It is easy to sit outside and say how the man inside should run the machine, but it is not so easy to go inside and run the machine yourself. "This prosperity to which we have at-

1.100 Year to the President's speech follows:
Follow Citizens: There are many, many lesser problems which go to make up in their entirety the huge and complex problems of our modern industrial life. Each of these problems is, moreover, connected with many of the others. Few indeed are simple or stand only by themselves. The most important are those connected with the relation of the farmers, the stockgrowers and solid those affecting the relations between employer and employed. In a country like our it is fundamentally true that the wageworker is the well-being of the solid and the way worker and the other the solid and the way worker and the other charge of the solid and the way worker and the tiller of the soli and the way worker and the tiller of the solid. The tiller of the solid to real general prosperity unless based on real general prosperity unless based on the band the worker and the tiller of the solid. The the needs of these two classes are of the sole of all our citizens the one on the while the least affected in his ways of life and methods of industry by the giant he dential changes of the last half century. There has been change with him too, of course, He can also work to best advantage it he keeps in close touch with his beam of the devertment, Nor is it only through the department of the sole and charber improvements. Few measures in recent years, is the Irrigation Act, which will do for the states of the Great Failes and the Booky Mountain region at the states in question.

Co-operation by States.

Co-operation by States. There are a number of very important questions, such as that of good roads, with which the states alone can deal, and where all that the National Government can do is to co-operate with them. The same is true of the education of the american farmer. A number of the states have themselves started to help in this work and the Department of Agriculture does an immense amount which is in the proper sense of the word educational, and educational in the most practical way.

proper sense of the word educational, and educational in the most practical way. It is therefore clearly true that a great advance has been made in the direction of inding ways by which the Government can help the farmer to help himself-the only kind of help which a self-respecting man will accept or. I may add, which will in the end do him any good. Much has been dong in these ways, and farm life and farm processes continually change for the better. The farmer himself still re-tains, because of his surroundings and the nature of his work, to a pre-eminent de-gree the qualitos which we like to think of as distinctly American in considering our early history. The man who tills his own farm, whether on the prainte or in the woodland, the man who grows what we est and the raw material which his worked up into what we wear, still exists mote nearly under the conditions which obtained when the "embattled farmers" of "6 made this country a Nation than is true of any others of our people.
