Jumped Into the River.

In a moment of despondency, probably due to liquor, Casper Hinkle, an aged German who lives with his son on the East Side, jumped into the river yesterday morning from the steel bridge, but was promptly rescued by two men in a boat who rowed from the steamer Vulcan. He was taken on board the steamer, and it was seen that he was suffering from a scalp wound, possibly caused by his head striking the water. More dead than alive, he was rolled over a barrel until he was able to walk, and was afterward taken to the Police Station and then to his son's home. Hinkle expressed sorrow for his rash act.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our many friends for their kindness and sympathy in the late bereavement of our dear son, Mr. William H. McKinnon.

Mrs. W. H. McKinnon.

Those who were fortunate enough to be in the Marquam Theater last night saw one of the greatest American actresses of her time, undoubtedly the Bernhardt of this country, Mrs. Clara M. Bruns, in the much-heralded romance, "Urona," a dramatized love story of a strange, interesting and mythical type.

"Urona," a dramatized love story of a strange, interesting and mythical type. The theater was crowded, and Mrs. Bruns fairly astonished her audience by the inherent excellence of her acting, emotional power, wealth of costume and genius. She received curtain recalls at the end of each of the four acts.

The second attraction at Coridray's Theater this week, "California," the latest state-named play. It is a picturesque and romantic melodrama, well staged and acted by the capable company of players, headed by Miss Rae Brownson, a young, emotional actress. The play carries with it a breath of the Sierras, exhilarating, and a highly interesting story.

The character of Dolores, a wronged woman, is the central figure. As the name would imply, the heroine is a Spanish girl with strains of Southern blood in her veins. This will give any actress possessing talent or genius, sufficient opportunity for splendid emotional acting, which, according to the press reports, will be an interesting and dramatic event.
