The opposition is al-most solidly opposed to a modification of free trade, and will endeavor to arouse that public ferment which was associated that public ferment which was associated with corn-tax days. Mr. Chamberlain, Mr ur, and such Unionists as agree with them, will try to extract from the public that degree of support which they may interpret as a popular mandate.

All signs point to a long campaign op the lines of protection versus free trade, which is likely to destroy party lines almost as much as did the home-rule question. In all the arguments the le and probable attitude of the United States will largely figure. The op-ponents of the scheme point out that the comparative immunity of the American from taxation precludes his prosperity un-der protection being applicable to the Britisher, who as even the government orchas admit is already so heavily taxed that the initial years of protection, with ligher-priced food, would be a severe strain on him, and possibly create atisfaction among the poorer classes.

The Conservative organ, the Standard, says point blank that the speeches of the two Ministers were evidently prepared in concert, and other government organs recognize the same thing. Little attempt is made at the present stage to discuss the intrinsic merits of Mr. Chamberiain's polley. Attention is rather directed to policy. Attention is rather affected to the possibility of such a political revo-lution which is calculated to effect a new cleavage of parties at home with unfore-secable developments abroad.
