SALEM, July 10 .- (Special.) - Neither the referendum amendment nor the referendum movement is dead, as will be evidenced by the great struggle that will take place in the next few weeks or months. The case involving the constitutionality of the referendum amendment has yet to be heard in the Supreme Court, and the friends of the amendment are preparing to make the greatest possible efforts to convince the Supreme Court that the amendment is constitutional. If they fall in that, they will at once start a movement for the readoption of the amendment, and will carry the fight into the next campaign. They will try to make the referendum the great issue in the next election, and will compel every candidate for the Legislature to declare his position upon this question. The first fight will be made in the Supreme Court, W. S. U'Ren, of Oregon City, one of the stanchest and most ardent friends of the referendum, has asked the Supreme Court to permit him or other friends of the amendment to be heard in that tribunal when the case involving the validity of the amendment comes up for trial. While the court has not indicated what disposition it will make of Mr. U'Ren's request, the practice of the Supreme Court makes it almost certain that preme Court makes it almost certain that the request will be granted. Mr. U'Ren is not a party to the proceedings in the Portiand charter case, so he is not entitled, as a matter of right, to be heard. It they always been the custom, however, it is selected in the Philippines. The circular further says:

"The Secretary of the Treasury authorizes the statement that these certificates has always been the custom, however, where a man shows that he has some inperson appears as "a friend of the court." Even in civil actions of no public importance such appearances are permitted. Thus, in a hop contract case to be tried next Monday, an attorney will appear and present arguments. Although neither he nor his clients have any connection with the case, they have shown that they are interested in cases which involve the same points of law, and that the decision in this case will probably govern in the decision of their case. Desiring to hear all the arguments that can be offered, the Supreme Court permits the attorneys to appear and be heard.

Can't Be Heard Before Vacation. A few days ago Attorney R. R. Duniway, of Portland, addressed a letter to Chief Justice F. A. Moore, asking whether the Portland charter case could be heard before the Summer vacation. He expressed a desire that the case be heard early, because of its public importance, and said that if it could be heard soon the attorneys would prepare and file their briefs before the time required by law. Chief Justice Moore replied that since the transcript in the case had not been filed, the case is not before the court, and he could make no order. He intimated his opinion, however, that it would probably not be possible to hear the case before vacation, and indicated his desire that the attorneys take time to present briefs thoroughly discussing every phase of the questions involved. No date has been fixed when the Supreme Court will adjourn for the Summer vacation, but, as there are but about a dozen cases undecided, it is probable that all work will be finished in about two weeks. Briefs could hardly be prepared in that time, especially if new parties should be permitted to come in

The friends of the referendum are not a bit discouraged over the decision of the Circuit Court in Multnomah County, but believe they will be able to secure a reversal. They believe, in the first place, that the validity of the referendum amendment was not necessarily involved in the Portland charter case, and that that case can and should be disposed of without a decision upon the question whether the mendment was legally adopted. They contend that the requirements of the constitution were followed in the adoption of the amendment, and argue also that even if the prescribed steps were not followed strictly, the amendment is valid, since it was adopted by an overwhelming majority and has been recognized by the legislative and executive branches of the government as a part of the constitution. No argument, no principle of law and no authority will be overlooked by the friends of the amendment which can aid them in their effort to convince the Supreme Judges that the referendum was legally

To Pass New Amendment

The political significance of the referendum question has been the subject for discussion in the last few days. The friends of the referendum, assuming that the present amendment is defeated, have strendy begun work to secure another submission of the referendum by the next two sessions of the Legislature. What the importance of the issue in the next campaign would be may be understood by its significance in the last campaign No candidate dared in the campaign of 1902 to utter a word that would indicate bostility to the initiative and referendum amendment. It is very clear that the referendum is not as popular as it was 15 months ago, and yet it has ardent advo cates in every party. The Democrats next Spring will be looking for an issue, and could find nothing more to their liking than the initiative and referendum. If, therefore, the Democrats should pledge all their Legislative candidates to favor and work for the resubmission of the amend ment or a constitutional convention, and the Republicans should fall or refuse to do so, the Democrats would have a tremendous advantage. Probably the amendment, if resubmited, would fail of adoption, and yet by means of that issue the Democrats would be able to draw enough strength from the Republicans to win where the party vote is close. Issue of the Campaign. Some of the strongest lenders in the Republican party in 1902 were opposed to the referendum, and yet for the good of the party they kept their opinions to themselves. In the next campaign there will be but a few state officers to elect, and whatever state issues are presented must be fought out over the election of members of the Legislature. While the Democrats would lose some votes by advocating the referendum, they would gain a far greater number, and the anticipation of this would tend to induce the Republicans in close counties to reaffirm their allegiance to the referendum amendment.

Just now, the friends of the referendum are more concerned with questions of law than with political issues or the merits of the initiative and referendum amendment. In the trial in the Supreme Court the question whether the amendment was wisely adopted is not presented. The only question is whether it was adopted at all, and this is purely a question of law, to be determined without regard to the merits of the referendum itself. If it be determined that the amendment was not lawfully adopted, an effort will be made to adopt it again.
