A mistake was made in the time of yesterday's notice of meet-ing of John Ivey Water Color Club that will be corrected on receipt of postal cards signed by the president of the club that have been mailed to each member. Committee. (Signed) Mrs. J. P. Wager, President of Club.

Mrs. G. W. Simpson, at whose home the meeting was supposed to be held, was asked the reason for the contradictory notices.

"Well, really, I don't know much about it, but I understand that there is a division in the club, and that there may be two meetings at my house. I have offered my house to them and if they come Monmy house to them and if they come Mon-day, all right. If there is another meeting Wednesday that will be all right, too. I haven't been to one of the meetings for a haven't been to one of the meetings for a time, time, and I really do not know the time men are opposed to the parade feathe president is the one to insert a notice of a meeting."

'Did you insert the first notice?" Mrs. Wager was asked.

"No, I did not; it was done by some e without any euthority." "But I understood it came from the press committee," persisted the inquisitive

"I am the president of the club, therefore I am the press committee," replied the president of the circle of harmony and water colors. "I believe that the memhas water cools. I beneve that the mem-bers who put that notice in the paper have all been members of the club but three months." Then Mrs. Wager gave the names of press committee No. 2, but for the sake of peace they are withheld.

"It is utterly impossible to take up the "It is utterly impossible to take up the amendment which they propose just now when most of the members are out of the city," continued Mrs. Wager. "There is nothing in the constitution to compel me to close the business of the club for the Summer. The regular meetings are upon the first and third Saturdays and all spethe first and third Saturdays, and all spe-cial meetings must be called by the presithere are 60 in the club who believe about ns I do, but there are five or six who are opposed.

"One person cannot rule our club, as Mrs. Wager will soon find out." This came from a member who was not named by Mrs. Wager us among her opponents. Apparently the seeds of rebellion have been scattered broadcast.

"There's nothing in her power to allow her to do so," continued the irate member of the John ivey Water Color Club, "She is angry because of the amendment we have offered to the constitution. Thirty members signed a petition asking her to call a meeting, but she refused and said she would sham the door in the face of any one whom she had not invited. At the last meeting she had invited five or six. Ten others went and she wouldn't let them In.

"What did you say? Write a little story about the trouble in our club? Oh, you mustn't do that. All I wish is the regular notice in the society column." It looks as though John Ivey, of Monterey, the organizer of many clubs of amateur indy painters along the Pacific Coast, will soon be called in as an arbiter to pour off upon the angry waters of the Portland organization.
