

OUT OF THE CELLAR

Browns Crawl From Sixth to Fifth Place.

SEATTLE NOW THE TAIL-ENDER

Two More Victories Will Relegate Pete Lohman's Team to Fifth Position, Now Proudly Held by the Locals.

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE.

Ring the bells, too the horns, bring out the band, for by winning the game yesterday afternoon the Browns go up in the percentage column and Seattle goes down. Not only that but the Browns this morning are within 12 points of trapping on Pete Lohman's neck.

Low Angeles is taking Parker Wilson down the line, and not wishing any and all luck, but it is the fact that the "Loos" crew may sit on the prostrate bodies of the Swabees until the Browns clinch their position in third place.

It was Jake Thielman's sore arm, the brilliant fielding of the Browns, and a bundle of three errors by the Oaklanders, the defeat of the Swabees by the Loos, and the consistent and timely batting of the Browns that made it possible to locate out of the cellar.

Seattle, that clever baseballist, ground the grist which was the flour in the bin for the Browns. He held the sub-winners of the house of Brown down to eight hits. These were bunched in the third and fifth innings.

Things did not break for the Browns until their third inning. The pitcher, Burson was the only Brownite who could land on Moskiman's offerings.

Nadeau steals home in eighth. She was trying hard to knock the cover off the ball in the fifth chapter. He succeeded in smashing the sphere so hard that it came near unjoining Moose Baxter at second, and Danny got his station while that body-cripled player took a peep into the error column.

PORTLAND, July 17.—(To the Editor.)—The only excuse for noticing a paragraph in this morning's issue is that readers of it are unable to determine how much coloring was given it by the writer, and as evidently takes himself seriously.

AN ADDITIONAL OFFER

You Will Have to Act Quickly if You Come in On This.

As this contest of ours has created such lively interest, and as it bids fair to close within a few days in order to continue the fun until the close of the Carnival, we have decided to make an additional prize offer.

Both the volunteers and the regulars have been making preparations for a joint encampment at American Lake, near Tacoma, but a telegram received by Major Evans, acting commander of the Department of the Columbia, from the War Department, dispels all these hopes.

It was thought that joint encampments could be arranged for every department in the United States to unite with the National Guard, but the Secretary of War has discovered that the appropriation is not sufficient to allow of more than two joint encampments.
