KNEE LONG BROKEN

Lane Could Not Deceive Dr. Rockey.

PORTLAND SAVED A LARGE SUM

Physician Aids Astoria in Attempt to Mulet That City on the Game Tried in His Home Town-Seattle Paid Good Sum.

ASTORIA. Wash., July 17 .- (Special.)-It has developed from the testimony given in the Smith perjury case that John Lane, the professional victim of the defective sidewalks, and Josiah Smith, his business manager, planned to mulct the City of Portland out of a big sum of money at the time they began their operations in the Northwest. The Portland scheme falled because Dr. A. E. Rockey. who was called by the two to attend Lane, recognized the broken knee-cap as an old fracture. The two became frightened at the discovery, and Smith took his "victim" and fied from Portland about daylight the next morning, deserting a room for which rent had been paid a week in advance.

The Portland episode is three years old, and it is likely that the case with which the fraud was detected deterred them. from trying their personal damage bunco in Northwestern cities for a while. But a comparatively short time later Seattle fell a victim, and only a few weeks ago the courts gave the two a judgment for $550 against the City of Astoria. To fill in the gaps, Smith and Lane buncoed a San Francisco woman, and they may have operated elsewhere. That broken knee-cap owned by Lane opened the doors to affluence for the two schemers easier than diligence in following a chosen pur-suit could have performed the task.

Aside from the fact that Portland es-caped a suit for damages by Dr. Rockey's prompt discovery of the decepiton, Smith and Lane will probably mark the Oregon metropolis off their visiting list for another reason. Dr. Rockey recognized the two men in a telegraphic dispatch from Astoria to The Oregonian telling of the result of their suit against Astoria for damages. He promptly notified the City Attorney, and along about the same time Seattle officials recalled their own experi-ence and notified Astoria. Before the judgment was paid the city officials here believed they were being swindled, and the two men were brought north to answer for perjury.

In his story to the jury yesterday Dr. Rockey told of the Portland experience of Smith and Lane. He was summoned to Nau's drug store by a telephone message, and taken by a greatly excited man to a room at the residence of Mrs. Caswell, on room at the residence of Mrs. Caswell, on Salmon street, near Sixth, where Lane lay groaning on the bed. Between his groans Lane told of a mishap which oc-curred in front of the City Hall, where the sidewalk was being torn up. Lane claimed he had fallen through and broken his knee-cap, Smith substantiating the story. As Dr. Rockey lifted the bed-clothes to examine the fractured limb.

cause of a defective sidewalk, and the cil gladly compromised a $5000 claim 2000. Thereupon Business Manager Smith took his patient to Astoria and repeated the performance, with the result that, after a suit for damages had been tried, he was in possession of a judgment It was the fact that the judgment had not been satisfied, and the address of the schemers was left with local officials so the money could be forwarded, that made it easy for Sheriff Linville to locate them when criminal proceedings

During the course of yesterday's trial the testimeny of Mrs. Mary Hinton, of San Francisco, shed a new light on the resourcefulness of the man with the broken knee-cap. It appears Mrs. Hinton was erecting a row of flats and had left a gap of eight inches between the walk and Lane, known then as Anderson, his fractured knee and won $300 for his performance. The money was sent ness Manager Josiah Smith, of Mrs. Caswell supported Dr. Rockey's story, and A. M. Harmon, claim agent of the City of Seattle, told of the two's Puget Sound deal. Two California scqualntances asserted the fracture was of several years' standing.

TESTIMONY IN SMITH TRIAL.

Alleged Victims Make a Strong Case Against Prisoner.

ASTORIA, Or., July 17 .- (Special.)-Th taking of testimony in the trial of Josiah S. Smith, on the charge of perjury, was completed late this afternoon and a ng chain of evidence was produced Mrs. Mary Hinton, of San Francisco testified that in April, 1899, she was build ing some flats on her property in that city. Owing to an error in the survey a space of eight inches was left temporarily be tween the sidewalk and the building stepping into this hole, Bock, or Lane, to then called himself Anderson, claimed to have broken his kneecap. She told of two men, whom she identified as Smith and Lane, coming to see her about the claim for damages, how Lane cried when exhibiting his injured limb, saying that he would be crippled for life. She offered him $50, but not having the money at the time, she finally compromised by giving her note for $300, which has since been paid, the greater portion of the money being given to Smith.

Dr. Rockey, of Portland, said that in August, 1800, he was summoned by the defendant, Smith, to visit a man whom he recognized as Lane, and who had a proken kneecap, having been injured, it was claimed, in front of the City Hall in that city. After examining the limb he ced the break an old one and told Lane be should go to a hospital and have the tones wired. Lane then aditted that he was hurt about three years before that time. Later the doctor went to see Lane again, but he had gone, although on his first visit the patient was groaning and apparently suf-fering great pain. He said that when he examined the break the fiesh was irri-tated, as though it had been rubbed with

C. L. Perkins, of Contra Costa County, California, and Deputy Sheriff Thompson, of the same county, testified to knowing both Lane and Smith for years, and during all that time Lane had been lame. They also said the two men had been intimately acquainted.

Sheriff Linville was called to introduce a letter which he had taken from the defendant since he has been in jail. Objection was made by the defense to the presentation of the letter, but the objection was overruled. The missive consists of two pages, but only the first one sists of two pages, but only the first one and the initials signed to it were introduced. It was written on a letterhead of the Sheriff of Alameda County, Cali-fornia, was dated Astoria, June 12, but was not addressed. It reads as follows: I think you had better get out of the way. as these people are apt to look for you. I do not want you here, as it would be dangerous to both of us, as the people are against us here. I suppose Lewis is trying to find out where you are. I understand that they have Delbert's name in the extradition papers. They would recognize you, very likely; if so, it would make a h-i of a mess. J. S. S. The attorneys for the defense made a hard fight for their client by opposing the introduction of a great portion of the testimony, but in the majority of in-stances their objections were overruled. During one warm discussion as to certain evidence the court said:

"If there was ever a time on earth when the truth was needed to be brought to light it is now. Proceed with the witness."

For 29 years Peter M. Arthur had been grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and in that time had not only seen that noble organization of railway employes increase nearly tenfold in membership and an hundredfold in power and influence, but had also man-aged his own personal affairs so shrewdly that he had amassed a fortune and could have railed from his service of the could have retired from his service of the order and lived in elegance the remainder of his days.

When Mr. Arthur was elected in 1874, it was a promotion from the footboard. For years he had been a locomotive engineer, running on the New York Central, and having his home in Utica, N. Y. He went to Cleveland immediately upon his election, with scant savings indeed, and made a humble home on the West Side. In a short time he moved to the East Side, taking an unpretentious house on a modest street, and, with innate Scotch thriff, beginning to lay by more and more for a rainy day from his salary of $2000 a year. his days.

His skill in piloting the order through difficulties was masterly, and he won and and held the confidence of the thousands of honest, capable men who came into the organization. At the end of each three-year period he was a candidate for re-election, and rarely has there been a word of objection raised to him. It is a unique and remarkable record, with hard ly a parallel in the history of labor or ganizations in this country.

Under his leadership the order has grown to a total of 30,000 members, with 485 subdivisions, covering every railroad in the United States and Canada. Ill-feeling has been rare, and Chief Arthur's principle of the arbitration of differences has not only been applied with success in the settlement of difficulties between the Brotherhood and railway managers, but in a notable way within the order itself. Along with the order has grown a flourishing mutual tosurance s with a present membership of 13,000, of which Mr. Arthur is president, and the monthly organ of the order, the Journal of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, has been steadily increased in sixe and excellence, until it is now a fine octavo of about 100 pages. In all this thrift Chief Peter M. Arthur has been a leading factor, and to it his clear judgment and moderate counsels have contributed much. The same sagacity which has been manifested in direct-ing the affairs of the order has enabled him to accumulate a fortune. When he settled in Cleveland his total savings were little more than $900. Today good local judges estimate his wealth at $300,000. He bought a small block of unimproved real estate on Wilson avenue, one of the finest residence streets in the city, and made considerable money by building and seli-ing several houses. It was approximately at this time that his salary was increased to $5000 a year.

During the next few years members of other labor organisations came to think very hard of Chief Arthur for his opposin to the strikes and boycotts that were then so prevalent, and his unswerving adherence to the principle of arbitration. Particularly was this the case at the time of the great Southwestern strike on the Gould railroads in the early Summ of 1886, when Chief Arthur's counsels kept the Brotherhood from joining the strike. and was thereby very instrumental in eventually causing its failure. The Knights of Labor did not hesitate to hint ugly things concerning the sources of Chief Arthur's prosperity, but his own order was not influenced by the talk and the confidence of those who knew him best was unshaken.

Mr. Arthur disposed of his Wilson-ave-nue property and purchased an elegant home on Euclid avenue, which is valued at $25,000. His daughter and two son have married well, the younger son being wedded to the daughter of a prominent lumber dealer. He has set both boys up in business, and they move in the society in the city.

Mr. Arthur has been a prominent mem ber of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has frequently identified himself with church work. Formerly he held his mem-bership in the modest little Central Church, at the corner of Wilson and Prospect, but, with growing prosperity, he and his family found it more agreeable to go to the larger and wealthier He was always a man of First Church. He was always a man or frugal habits and shrewd business capa-city, and is often mentioned as an in-stance of what thrift and good manage-ment can do for a man at the head of a large and prosperous labor organization. Without doubt, he was the only labor leader in the world who was able to accumulate a great fortune in less than 20 years without losing the confidence of his order and being forced to give up his
