THE MORNING OREGONIAN, TUESDAY, JULY 21, 1903.

Kostal and Engle have found jobs with Roseburg team, and both have won games.

vere going to hand out to all players who jared to play in the Coast League.

Mique Fisher's Senators, tired, endy to continue their struggles for first place in the Pacific Coast League pennant race, will engage the Browns in a series of six games this week, and baseball equally as fast as that furnished during the Los Angeles series is sure to follow. Fisher's "Tads" will arrive this morning. with the exception of Doyle, who made a mistake when he joined issues with the ground-keeper at San Francisco. Doyle will be with the team, but, if stor-ies from the Bay City are true, he will be out of the game for several weeks. He injured his hand trying to knock the nd-keeper's head off.

The Brown management again brought the pruning-knife into use, and this time it was Claud Schmeer who was presented with his release. Schmeer's knee went back on him during the first Los Angeles series, and since then he has not been able to get back into the game. Schmeer, when he is at himself, is one of the best short-stops in the busifiess, and but for the mis-Stops in the blashess, and but for the ins-fortance to his knee, he would have been the ranking shortstop of the league. Schmeer tried hard to get into condition, but the injury was such that only time could cure it. Some time ago, when he and that it would be many weeks, perhaps a couple of months, before he could play, he requested the management to him a month's rest without salary and then at the expiration of a month, if he could not play, he was to be released at his own request. Schmeer went into the game on Saturday. His heart was all right, but his knee was still too weak to stand the strain of fast foot-work, and he gave up trying to play.

The injury, which started from a sprain, has threatened to develop into "water on the knee," and, in spite of care, has not elded to treatment. Schmeer's home is in Portland, and he will perhaps go into business for himself. He has had several offers to join teams playing in the near-by towns, but he will first devote his time to resting his knee.

He Painted Portrait of Canfield, the Gambler, as "His Reverence."

NEW YORK, July 20.-Probably last portrait completed by the late James McNelli Whistler was named "His Rov-erence" by the artist. The original is Richard A. Canfield, of this city, the well-known sporting man. Whistler gave Canfield the last sitting on the afternoon of May 15, in the study of his London residence, and the portrait was finished some time last month. It is supposed to be resting now on the easel which it was painted. Canfield is in city fish had been caught. There are still quotes him as saying of the painter, half a dozen sloughs where there should whom he had known for many years: "I see there is some speculation there over all creation. When the water has as to the discase that carried him off, fallen a little more the fishing will be owing to the reticence of the family. Among to the reficence of the family. Among those who knew him well there is no doubt as to the cause of death. It was heart disease. He discovered that he had a weak heart in Holland last year, when he was there with Cold Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, who has,

by the way, the finest and most com-plete collection of Whistler's etchings in the world. Whistler gave me my first sitting for the portrait in the Spring of 1902, just after he closed his studio in Parts and returned to London. He gave me several sittings, and then, as I had to come home, the work was laid aside until I should return to London the folaged
