

PLUMS ARE GONE

Chamberlain Has No More Places to Give Out.

RENEGADES GO UNRECOGNIZED

Appointments Made Without Much Regard to Geography and Fitness Has Had to Do With Selection of State Officials.

BALEM, Or., Aug. 4.—(Special.)—All the plums which hung upon the Democratic political tree as a result of the election of George E. Chamberlain to the Governorship have now been picked. The Democratic party has lost the last of the tempting fruits to be handed to one of the faithful. An examination of the list of places which fell to upon Democratic candidates, and the victory shows that Marion County, which departed from its usual custom and gave the Democratic candidate a majority, was duly remembered. Marion has two appointments and almost claim three. One of the best appointments the Governor had to make was that of Adjutant-General, and this fell to W. E. Finer, of Woodburn, which is a Democratic place. Of course, at the Soldiers' Home at Roseburg, by the appointment of W. E. Elder, of Stayton. The office of State Land Agent was at first given to J. S. Morrow, of Marion County, but upon his resignation, the date for age it was passed to Oswald West, of Astoria. While West is now a Clatsop County man and was a worker in that county in the last campaign, the fact that he was a resident of Marion County and the Democrats of this county are pleased to see him remembered.

Eastern Oregon was the beneficiary of the appointment of W. J. James, of Baker City, and that section is further represented in the person of Second Wardman Smith, who came from Umatilla County. Eastern Oregon also has some minor appointments. Multnomah County was remembered in the appointment of W. N. Gates to the office of private secretary. E. A. McPherson to the office of clerk of the court, and W. J. Wilson to the office of bookkeeper at the same institution. The patronage which attaches to the Governorship was not extensive enough to permit all sections of the state to be represented in the appointments. It does not appear, however, that the Governor looked in the geography when he made his distribution of offices, for the appointments were made with regard to the position of the men for the positions rather than for the purpose of rewarding each locality.

It is a matter of general comment that not a single appointment has been given to a Republican, who knifed the head of their ticket and voted for Chamberlain. Mr. Furnish may find some satisfaction in this. Even employees of state institutions who were made to resign for Chamberlain, although they claimed to be Republicans, were let out when the Governor found good Democrats to put in their places. Not all the Republican employees have been let out, but only a few remain.

It was an open secret after the last campaign that some of the Republicans who worked for Chamberlain hoped for their reward in the shape of appointments, but their expectations were disappointed.

CARDINALS PAY HOMAGE

All Kiss His Hand and Foot as Acknowledgment of Sovereignty.

ROME, Aug. 4.—This afternoon, before opening the conclave, Pius X. repaired to the Sistine Chapel in full pontifical robes and kneeling before the altar, he awaited the arrival of the cardinals on the throne which he so little expected to occupy when he left Venice. There, on the throne, he received the second obedience, or so-called "adoration" of the sacred college, each cardinal kissing his hand and foot as a sign that he acknowledged the pope's sovereignty.

Meantime, the oration super pontificem elation was recited in low tones. Then the new pontiff rose, and extending his hands, his powerful and magnificent voice, which is much stronger than that of the late pope, reverberating through the chapel, pronounced the apostolic benediction, amid profound silence. Then the great door of the conclave opened.

At about 5:30 P. M., Prince Chigi, the marshal of the conclave, and many ecclesiastical and lay dignitaries went to the Sistine Chapel to kiss the pope's hand and foot. They were received with great benignity. The commandant of the Noble Guard and the officials of the Noble Guard also went to perform this duty. Among these officers were Count Camillo Picci, the Brigadier-General of the Noble Guard, and a nephew of the late pope. The new pontiff received him with special graciousness, saying a few words of welcome.

Pope Pius then retired to his cell, while the cardinals left the Vatican and returned to their respective apartments in Rome with a feeling of particular pleasure after their confinement in the small rooms of the conclave. In his cell, which was very small and dark, the pope received the picket of guards on duty, the imposing figure of the new pope seeming to embellish the modest surroundings. His pontifical robes, a mere handkerchief, changed him to a truly stateful embodiment of the Catholic idea, the gorgeous robes adding dignity to his person. Pope Pius, from his benevolent manner, is gaining friends from moment to moment.

The military bodies of the Vatican have assumed their full uniform and hoisted the white and yellow papal flag at the bronze door.

WILL NOT SHOW MESSAGES

Telegraph Companies Cited to Appear in Court in Boudle Cases.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 4.—The Cole county grand jury, which is investigating charges of bootlegging in the Legislature, wants to secure the telegrams that passed between Daniel J. Kelley, legislative agent of the Baking Powder Trust, and former Lieutenant-Governor Lee and other members of the Legislature during a certain period of time. Representatives of the telegraph companies refused today to furnish these telegrams to the grand jury for its perusal, and the refusal was reported to Judge Hazell. Judge Hazell then gave Superintendent G. E. Payne, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and Superintendent George J. Frickel, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, until Thursday to produce the messages asked for by the grand jury, or show cause.

Colonel Fred J. Piessens, of Kansas City, was a witness before the grand jury today.

In Search of His Parents.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—In an endeavor to find his father, mother, brother and two sisters, whom he has not seen or heard of for 20 years, Rev. Thomas Ringland, of Perth, Ill., notified the police that he will pay a liberal reward for information which would aid him in his search.

Rev. Mr. Ringland, when but 10 years of age, in 1881, was placed in a New York orphan by his parents, who were poor. Through the agency of the asylum he was apprenticed to an Illinois farmer. He remained there several years and finally decided to become a minister. He entered a Methodist Church in Ferrie, of which he is now pastor. After a long search, it has been discovered that his father returned to his old home in Ireland in 1881, taking his two little girls with him. It could not be learned what had become of the mother.

WHITE CAPS SLAY NEGRO.

Another is Fatally Wounded Without Apparent Cause.

LEWISBURG, Tenn., Aug. 4.—A negro preacher named John Milliken was killed and another fatally wounded by a band of whitecappers last night. When the mob made its appearance at Milliken's home the preacher had his exit through a back door. He was brought down by a volley, dying almost instantly. John Hunter, a son-in-law of Milliken, was made to accompany the mob on a fruitless search for another negro, and in an attempt to escape was fatally shot in the back. No cause was assigned for the killing, as both Milliken and Hunter bore good reputations.

Ammon Goes to Sing Sing.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Justice Geiger, in the Supreme Court today denied the application of Robert A. Ammon, the lawyer who was convicted of a charge of having received $50,000 of the moneys of the Frankford bank, which he had "rich quick" concern, of which W. V. Miller was the ostensible head, for a certificate of reasonable doubt. Ammon was sentenced to an indefinite term of imprisonment, and was to be held for two years and not to exceed four and a half years. The result of the decision is that Ammon will be taken at once to Sing Sing.

Officer Shot by Negro Will Live.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 4.—Constable James D. Wright, who last night was seriously wounded by Fletcher Holis, a negro desperado, whom he was about to arrest, will probably recover. The search for Holis is still being vigorously continued, and it is probable he will be shot to death if he is apprehended.

NO "SCABBY" SHEEP.

Oregon Short Line and Union Pacific Demand Clear Bills of Health.

SALT LAKE, Aug. 4.—Both the Oregon Short Line and Union Pacific railroads have announced that hereafter, owing to the "scabby" sheep about the flocks of the West, they will refuse to carry over their road consignments of sheep not accompanied by clean bills of health from the United States Bureau of Animal Industry.

The Department of Agriculture, for a number of years, has been endeavoring to stamp out this disease, which is both contagious and annually causes immense losses to sheepmen. The expense of disinfecting the cars, which must be very thorough, and the loss of time required for this purpose, has led the roads named above to make even more stringent measures than have been used before. Traffic on both lines having become too heavy to spare the cars.

Colorado Road to Be Sold Soon.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 4.—The Colorado & Northern road, operating between Boulder and Wray, a distance of 200 miles, will be sold within the next 30 days under a decree of foreclosure. The Mercantile Trust Company, of New York, trustee of the Colorado & Northern, has announced that it will sell the road.

NATION MAY SEIZE BRIDGE

Root Gives St. Louis Men a Chance to Show Cause Before Taking Action.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Secretary Root has addressed a communication to the Merchants' Bridge Company, the owners of the large bridge across the Mississippi River at St. Louis, asking the company to show cause why the United States should not take possession of the bridge under the statute which provided for its construction. Under the law the Secretary of War can take possession of the bridge without legal proceedings of any kind, if any of three things happened, namely, if the bridge company consolidates with any other bridge company; if the company pays its earnings with any other company; if the company officials of another company become officers of the Merchants' Bridge Company.

In the allegations presented to the Secretary of War, it is declared that leases made by the Merchants' Bridge Company constitute a consolidation with another company.

FIGHT ON 1904 FAIR.

Chile Finds Part of Its People Strongly Oppose an Exhibit.

SANTIAGO DE CHILE, Aug. 4.—A strong movement against the participation of Chile in the St. Louis Exposition has been instituted. The principal persons oppose any official representation at the fair, and the tendencies of the parties considering the matter is also unfavorable to it.

Well-Known Tobacco Millionaire.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 4.—John Doerflinger, aged 54, tobacco manufacturer of National reputation, died at his home today of a complication of diseases. In 1891 he sold the National Tobacco Works, an immense concern of which he was president, to the American Tobacco Company. Shortly afterward he started another large factory, which he sold to the same company in 1900. He was married and had an independent for the third time, and remained there until his death. He started in life as a tobacco-stemmer. He became a millionaire.

Corbin Will Retire August 15.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Major-General Henry Corbin will relinquish his duties as Adjutant-General of the Army, when the General Staff law goes into effect on August 15, and an officer of the Adjutant-General's Corps will be assigned as acting Adjutant-General.

Kansas River Is Falling.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 4.—The Kansas River here, and west, is falling and all danger of a flood is over. At Abilene and Salina, Kan., the Smoky Hill River is rising steadily, but that stream is still several feet below last May's high water point.

Bishop Meets President.

OYSTER BAY, Aug. 4.—President Roosevelt today received a call from Bishop Doherly, who was recently appointed to the see of Newark, N. J. The bishop decided to pay his respects to the President before leaving for Manila and to talk over the situation in the archdiocese.

Art Glass Manufacturers Unite.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The art glass manufacturers of the country perfected an organization today to be known as the National Ornament Glass Manufacturers' Association. J. W. Wittman, of Pittsburgh, was elected president.

Total Abstinence Meet.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 4.—The thirty-third national convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Society convened here today. It looks as though St. Louis will secure the next convention.

To Relieve Summer Weariness.

Take Horst's Acid Phosphates. It relieves the summer weariness and nervousness caused by summer heat. It strengthens and invigorates permanently.

SARTO SOUGHT NO TIARA

(Continued from First Page.)

The two principal parties were losing ground, Sarto gradually gained, drawing strength from both ends and the middle, until the ballot on Monday afternoon, when his vote had increased to 25, with six of the necessary two-thirds.

New Pope First Refuses Tiara.

When the result of this ballot was announced to the conclave, Cardinal Ruffini was so overcome with emotion and so touched by the unlooked for confidence reposed in him, that he could no longer control his feelings, and to the surprise of all he broke down, declaring that such responsibility and honor were not for him, and that he must refuse it, if elected.

Tears Rolled down his cheeks and he swayed in his determination to refuse the dignity. He was so palpably sincere that conclamation reigned among the conclave, and the cardinals spent the whole evening and much of the night in convincing him that his election was the will of Providence and that he must accept. Several times he almost fainted and had to be revived by the use of salts. He seemed happy but broken down even after all the other candidates had retired and after the final ballot he looked a statue of resignation.

Cardinal Cusani, as scrutineer, was reading out the vote. When 22 votes had been recorded for the patriarch of Venice, the scrutineer arose and lifted his red zucchetto, saying: "We have elected a pontiff."

Accepts the Pontificate.

But from many sides cardinals cried: "Continue." As the vote approached 50, however, the cardinals, as of one accord, surrounded the new pontiff and, according to tradition, demanded to know if he would accept the pontificate.

Cardinal Sarto, who had been sitting in the conclave, trembled so that he could hardly articulate, but after a visible effort, he said:

"If this cup cannot pass from me—"

There he paused, but the cardinals around him insisted that it was necessary for him to answer "yes" or "no."

Thereupon he replied firmly, "yes."

Cardinal Gibbons, speaking to a representative of the Associated Press said:

"The election of Cardinal Sarto had produced the best impression in the entire Sacred College since the election of Pius IX."

Cardinal Gibbons, a man of great piety, tact and culture, he was best fitted to be the head of the church at the present time. Cardinal Gibbons hopes that the coronation of Pius X. will take place soon, so the foreign cardinals may be able to assist. Others think the coronation may be postponed for three months, to a more propitious time.

POPE VISITS ILL CARDINAL.

First Act of His Pontificate Is a Compliment to Herrero.

ROME, Aug. 4.—Pius X. accompanied by Cardinals Satolli and Sanmichelangelo, and Monsignor Ruffini, master of the ceremonies, this afternoon went to the cell of the sick Cardinal Herrero, saying he wished the first act of his pontificate to be a compliment to a brother cardinal. Cardinal Herrero, transfigured by such thoughtfulness, and exclaimed:

"Let me kiss your hand. Now I shall die happy."

The pope remained some time in the cell, encouraged the sick man, and said he would pray for his recovery. He then gave him the apostolic blessing.

HOW CARDINALS RECEIVED VOTE.

Supporters of Pope Are Wildly Excited—Some Preach Are Few.

ROME, Aug. 4.—It is impossible to describe the confusion in the chapel when Cardinal Sarto was elected. The friends and supporters of the new pope gathered around him, complimenting and congratulating him, crying, "Viva Sarto!" and even clapping their hands without ceremony. They appeared to be unable to control their feelings.

The few moments of oblivion gave the opponents time to recover their balance and conceal their chagrin, although the majority, even among them, declared themselves to be satisfied with the result.

Among the cardinals and prelates the expression of opinion was much freer, and two had to be separated by onlookers. There was great rejoicing on one side and great exultation on the other.

"Sarto!" "Sarto!" rang from mouth to mouth, penetrating to the furthest precincts. All hurried toward the Sistine Chapel to see the new pope.

After the election, even when the excitement began to calm down, it seemed to know what to do, it being to all, except Cardinal Gregorio, a new ceremony. He had only seen it 25 years ago. Cardinal Gregorio, a cardinal bishop, called Cardinals Netto and Macchi, the deans, respectively, of the cardinal priests and cardinal deacons, they approached the new pontiff, saying in Latin words of welcome.

"Do you accept your religion according to the canonical law as supreme pontiff?"

Acceptance of Election.

The moment was one of extreme tension of feeling. There was a perceptible pause before Pius X. found and control his voice. Then he answered simply: "Yes." The cardinals thereupon removed their balaclavas, so that of Sarto was the only one remaining, thus marking his acceptance of the office.

While Prince Chigi, the master of the ceremonies, was drawing up the official act of the election and acceptance of the newly-elected pope, the latter, surrounded by his friends, disappeared into a small room near the altar, where he donned, with who can say how an air of triumph and humility, the white robes of his office. Pius X. was assisted by his conclavist, who first knelt and kissed his hand and foot, and then received the first apostolic blessing given by Pius X. The new pope was attired all in white with the exception of red shoes, which were quite regular, but he did not stop to remove his red cardinal's stockings for the white papal ones, and these showed as he raised his gown to move forward.

Red Cap Given Another.

When he was quite robed, the secretary of the conclave, Monsignor Merry del Val, kneeling, offered him the papal white cap, amidst breathless silence. He did not follow the precedent created by Pope Leo, who declined to give his red cap to the master of ceremonies, but a sign that he would soon be created a cardinal, but with a slight smile Sarto took the white cap, placed it calmly on his head, and dropped the red one lightly on the floor. The crowd around him murmured with approval. This action is taken as a certain indication that the happy recipient is soon to be created a cardinal.

Cardinals Pay Homage.

As the new pontiff stepped from behind the altar, the old touch of color about him being his red and gold shoes, he really seemed to be the embodiment of his holy office. His face was pale and clearly suffused by emotion. He paused a moment, came before the expectant cardinals, then seated himself on the throne with a hurried movement, as if he had not a moment to spare. His back was to the altar, and he was looking toward the so-called "first obedience" of the cardinals. They came forward, one by one, some calm and some smiling, others sober and noncommittal. Still others found considerable difficulty even at this hour in concealing their too obvious disappointment. All kissed his hand and foot, while he saluted each with a nod and the words of peace. Then all broke into the "Te Deum" with such effect that scarcely an eye was dry.

Pius X. then rose, and in a very cool, at first trembling, but gradually becoming full and firm voice, administered the papal blessing to all the members of the Sacred College. It was received with bowed and unceasing heads.

The fisherman's ring not yet having been found, a new one designed by Camerlengo Gregorio was placed on the pontiff's finger as a symbol of renewed hope and confidence. The Catholic Church has once more a sovereign head. Sarto bore himself with becoming dignity, and gave no outward sign of exultation in this, the supreme moment of his life.

RESULT MADE KNOWN TO WORLD.

Anxious Watchers Were Many as Ever, Despite a Blistering Sun.

ROME, Aug. 4.—The usual large crowd assembled before St. Peter's at about 9:30 A. M. to await the rising of the smoke from the Sistine Chapel. Hundreds of cardinals stood in the balcony, which seemed hotter than ever. The colonnades were blocked with people, but the anxious watchers could scarcely see from the seventh floor.

Minutes passed on, and still no smoke was seen. When the bells sounded half-past 11 the ministers and others left their carriages and joined the watchers on the balcony. The sun was now at its height, and many also were waiting, and the suspense brought thousands running from nearby streets, the delay on the fourth floor of the conclave being interpreted to mean that a decision had at length been reached.

The troops spread themselves across the square, and nervous anticipation possessed the crowd. The sun was now at its height, and many also were waiting, and the suspense brought thousands running from nearby streets, the delay on the fourth floor of the conclave being interpreted to mean that a decision had at length been reached.

Then the bells of St. Peter's boomed out, as did those of all the churches of Rome, giving the glad news to the world. As Cardinal Macchi returned to the Sistine Chapel, he was followed by his pious duty, the new pope rose, and an effort to form some kind of procession was made, but Pius X. was literally carried in triumph to his cell, followed by a great crowd of cardinals and priests.

He was stopped every step or two by those who wished to kiss his ring and receive the papal blessing, which Sarto accorded with great dignity and in a most impressive manner. The new pope passed along many of those present tried to prove that they had always known what the result would be, and how satisfied they all were.

Any of these compliments reached the ears of the pontiff he gave no sign there. When he arrived at the door of his cell the pope turned, and, raising his hands gave, in a voice almost suffocated with emotion, his benediction to the assembly, which received it on bended knees.

After a short rest, imposed by the fatigue and emotion of his election, Pius X. joined his court in the dual hall for the solemn benediction which he was about to give to the people of Rome. Although to ordinary ecclesiastics the confusion was as great as ever, to those practiced in the mysteries of the Vatican order was a matter of course, and the benediction of the pope was much more formal. The babel of voices sank at his approach, while none addressed him unless he spoke first.

The formal salutations ending, the pope proceeded to the balcony, where he was met by the cardinals, who were in the center was the pontiff in his white robes, his figure standing out above those surrounding him, his silver hair gleaming under the sun. The cardinals still in their violet robes and preceded by the pontifical cross the jewels of which flashed, as though they also triumphed in Sarto's selection, while the cardinals and priests seemed really jubilant in their joy and satisfaction.

The procession traversed many noble halls until it approached the window looking out on St. Peter. From below rose a murmur of voices, which, although subdued, because distant, denoted the presence of a large concourse of people. The pope was seen to grow pale, and then, turning to Cardinal Badier, who stood beside him, he said:

"Now I know the emotion Pope Leo always showed when going into St. Peter's to give the eyes of a great crowd focused on him. It is almost terrifying."

Standing forward in the window, the others having fallen back, he deliberately collected his thoughts and looked across the great Basilica. Nerving himself, Sarto raised his hand, and in a voice paucely tremulous, said, as soon as the cries from below gave an opportunity:

"Adjutorium nostrum in nomine Domini."

"(Hear us, in the name of the Master.)"

To this came in reply from thousands of voices the cry:

"Qui sedet Coelum et Terram."

"(Who made heaven and earth.)"

In a thrilling voice the pope responded: "Soli nomini Domini benedictum."

"(May the name of the Master be blessed.)"

Then raising himself to his full height and leaning forward as much as possible he intoned: "Benedictio vos omnipotens Deus." ("May the omnipotent God bless you.") which called for such applause that several minutes elapsed before the pontiff could retire.

He then drew back, and turned to the dual hall, where he looked across the window Pius X. turned to Monsignor Biletti, who happened to be near, and said:

"I shall never again feel just the same emotion."

CARDINAL TELLS OF CELL LIFE.

Books and the Climbing of Long Stairways Helped Occupy Time.

ROME, Aug. 4.—Soon after the conclave was dissolved, one of the cardinals, who had remained to his home in Rome, said to a representative of the Associated Press:

"We really were very well treated, and I feel better than when I went into the conclave. I was perfectly comfortable. We had good food, and the arrangements for looking after so many people could not have been better. After mass every morning, we entered the Sistine Chapel and transacted our business. I can understand that those outside grew impatient, but I scarcely think we could have been expected to decide so weightily by such a simple method of procedure within a shorter time."

"After each morning session we had dinner. During the afternoon most of us spent our time reading in our rooms. I carried my library with me, and an American periodical, and learned treatises on dogma, and invariably put me to sleep with a headache. Through a crack in the window which were placed over the wall, we could see the people outside."

"Our claim regarding Newbro's Herpicide is based on actual scientific facts. A living germ is causing your hair to fall out. It's the most sensible thing to kill that germ."

Newbro's Herpicide does this quickly and effectively. Destroy the cause, you remove the effect.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

POPE BEGINS MARCH TO WINDOW.

Cardinals, Still in Their Violet Robes, Take Places in the Procession.

ROME, Aug. 4.—As soon as the election occurred, masons and carpenters began breaking down the door of the conclave. The cardinals, together with the masters of ceremonies and the conclavists and many others, might proceed to the balcony of St. Peter's. The populace waiting in the piazza had already, at half past 11 o'clock, seen the tiny thread of smoke, almost transparent, which warned them what to expect, so when the windows of the balcony slowly opened, the great gleaming cross was seen, the excitement and impatience heightened to the extreme.

Slowly Cardinal Macchi, secretary of the conclave, apostolic legate, advanced and exclaimed in a loud voice: "Annuntio vobis gaudium magnum. Habemus papam Eminentissimum ac Reverendissimum Dominum Cardinalem, Josephum Sarto, qui sibi imposuit nomen Pius X."

"I announce to you a great joy. We have a Pope, the Most Eminent and Reverend Lord Cardinal, Joseph Sarto, who has taken the name of Pius X."

Then the bells of St. Peter's boomed out, as did those of all the churches of Rome, giving the glad news to the world. As Cardinal Macchi returned to the Sistine Chapel, he was followed by his pious duty, the new pope rose, and an effort to form some kind of procession was made, but Pius X. was literally carried in triumph to his cell, followed by a great crowd of cardinals and priests.

He was stopped every step or two by those who wished to kiss his ring and receive the papal blessing, which Sarto accorded with great dignity and in a most impressive manner. The new pope passed along many of those present tried to prove that they had always known what the result would be, and how satisfied they all were.

Any of these compliments reached the ears of the pontiff he gave no sign there. When he arrived at the door of his cell the pope turned, and, raising his hands gave, in a voice almost suffocated with emotion, his benediction to the assembly, which received it on bended knees.

After a short rest, imposed by the fatigue and emotion of his election, Pius X. joined his court in the dual hall for the solemn benediction which he was about to give to the people of Rome. Although to ordinary ecclesiastics the confusion was as great as ever, to those practiced in the mysteries of the Vatican order was a matter of course, and the benediction of the pope was much more formal. The babel of voices sank at his approach, while none addressed him unless he spoke first.

The formal salutations ending, the pope proceeded to the balcony, where he was met by the cardinals, who were in the center was the pontiff in his white robes, his figure standing out above those surrounding him, his silver hair gleaming under the sun. The cardinals still in their violet robes and preceded by the pontifical cross the jewels of which flashed, as though they also triumphed in Sarto's selection, while the cardinals and priests seemed really jubilant in their joy and satisfaction.

The procession traversed many noble halls until it approached the window looking out on St. Peter. From below rose a murmur of voices, which, although subdued, because distant, denoted the presence of a large concourse of people. The pope was seen to grow pale, and then, turning to Cardinal Badier, who stood beside him, he said:

"Now I know the emotion Pope Leo always showed when going into St. Peter's to give the eyes of a great crowd focused on him. It is almost terrifying."

Standing forward in the window, the others having fallen back, he deliberately collected his thoughts and looked across the great Basilica. Nerving himself, Sarto raised his hand, and in a voice paucely tremulous, said, as soon as the cries from below gave an opportunity:

"Adjutorium nostrum in nomine Domini."

"(Hear us, in the name of the Master.)"

To this came in reply from thousands of voices the cry:

"Qui sedet Coelum et Terram."

"(Who made heaven and earth.)"

In a thrilling voice the pope responded: "Soli nomini Domini benedictum."

"(May the name of the Master be blessed.)"

Then raising himself to his full height and leaning forward as much as possible he intoned: "Benedictio vos omnipotens Deus." ("May the omnipotent God bless you.") which called for such applause that several minutes elapsed before the pontiff could retire.

He then drew back, and turned to the dual hall, where he looked across the window Pius X. turned to Monsignor Biletti, who happened to be near, and said:

"I shall never again feel just the same emotion."

CARDINAL TELLS OF CELL LIFE.

Books and the Climbing of Long Stairways Helped Occupy Time.

ROME, Aug. 4.—Soon after the conclave was dissolved, one of the cardinals, who had remained to his home in Rome, said to a representative of the Associated Press: