The speaker, bowever, ruled that the fiscal matter was irrelevant to the abject under consideration. Incidentally Lord Hugh Cecil delighted the opposition by caustically commenting on Premier Balfour's dislike of criticism, and Mr. Chamberlain's use of his official position to propagate statements which were largely conjectural. He thought that a protest ought to be entered against Mr. Chamberlain's way of combining his pres-tige as a minister with the liberty of an ordinary politician, in order to forward his views. It was a constitutional scan-dal, said Lord Hugh Cecil, scarcely less than the premier's attitude towards all proposals to discuss the fiscal policy in the House of Commons.
