ON GUARD AGAINST ROBBERS.-A YOU woman from a town in the Willamette Valley, who had come to the city to pur-chase a wedding outfit, created a sensation yesterday in an establishment when tion yesterday in an establishment where such outfits are sold. She was accompanied by a friend of her mother, with whom she was staying and who, having attended to the outfitting of several daughters, had been requested to give the young woman the benefit of her experience. The young woman carried an ornamented and comfortably-filled purse tucked under or slung across her belt which was rather noticeable, but this did not trouble her. After several hours spent in selecting her outfit, the young woman asked for her bill. It was handed her and, instead of taking the purse from the belt. instead of taking the purse from the belt, she asked to be excused for a inoment and stepped into an alley. After strug-gling with her skirts for a moment she raised them some distance from the floor and asked her friend to unclass her garand asked her friend to discuss her gar-ter, under which was fastened a much plainer purse than the one at her belt, in which neatly and compactly folded were several $100 currency notes. A wooden building occupied the larger part of the quarter block and this served all purposes for a number of years. Finally it was replaced by a four-story brick and the two-story section, built before, was run up to four stories. Now it is decided necessary to tear up the cement walk in front and dig down for an area and to place better foundations and columns under the section which was built higher. When the end of the excavating and hauling and scattering of earth required, will be done with no one knows.

Are the Carp Guilty?—The sportsmen of this region charge the destruction of the washpatoes and the disappeirance of the canvas-back ducks, which used to feed on them to the unlesses and mudwallowing carp. Among these is George Otten, who imagines that he has practical proof of the carp's innocence. He has a pond in his grounds in which he several years ago placed several carp and at the bottom of which he planted several wahpate bulbe. He has kept the carp there ever since and says the wapatoes have gone on increasing all the time and now about cover the entire bottom of the pond, and he has never known his carp to molest them. He further says that he has taken pulns to keep vegetable food from the carp, so that they might not be deprived of any natural appetite for wapatoes. Many sportsmen tell a different story, and have duck lakes formerly matted with wapatoes and visited by thousands of canvas-back ducks, in which neither are seen any more. COMING ATTRACTIONS.

Amateurs Were Great.

The amateurs at Shields' Park last night were about the limit and no mistake. The first to appear was a silly-looking youth, who attempted to do a monologue. He had scarcely opened his mouth to speak when an apple came whitzing down from the balcony, and Mr. Monologuist took to the woods. The next number on the amateur list was a tall young lady, who wore a blue walat, a short skirt and a determined look that was changed to a most scared look that was changed to a most scared expression as soon as the gatling batteries of the audience were turned loose. She first gave an imitation of a child reciting Mary's Lamb, and then she gave an imitation of herself singing. The audience demanded an encore, but she developed symptoms of cold stove in her pedal extremities, and would not make a bow.

There were several other numbers on the aftermath programme.
