COMBINES DO GOOD WORK. Run at Less Cost, They Harvest Grain That Old Method Cannot Touch.

PULLMAN, Wash., Aug. 25.-Harvesting with the three big combined headers and threshers, the first to be used in this immediate vicinity, is in full blast in the grain fields south of Pullman. All are doing satisfactory work, and the owners think they will revolutionize the methods of harvesting grain in the Palouse country.

J. S. Klemgard is authority for the statement that, with these machines, grain can be cut at a profit at $2.25 per acre. Under the old method it cost $1.75 per acre to nire grain cut with a header and 6 cents per bushel to hire it threshed. Thus a 30hushel crop would cost $2.55 per acre to harvest, while it would cost $4.15 per acre to cut and thresh a 40-bushel per acre crop under the old method.

Pive men and S horses are required to operate one of these big machines in heavy grain, while in light grain but four men are needed. The grain is cut and threshed and the sacks of wheat are dumped off is piles in the field. The straw, if wante for feed, is also dumped in piles of abou a wagonload at a place, and can be easily loaded on wagons and hauled to the barns. Klempard brothers started their machine on some light grain owned by a neighbor who had not intended to cut it, as it had been sowed late, on late Spring plowing, and looked as if it was not worth the ex-pense of harvesting.
