STENOGRAPHERS AND TYPEWRITERS.
WANTED.—The United States Civil Service Commission will hold a stenography and typewriting examination in this city on October 12, 1903. The commission reports a continual demand for competent stenographers and typewriters for the government and the examination will be held to fill vacancies as they occur in the federal service in this city and Washington, D. C., as well as in the Philippine service. Most of these appointments will be assigned to Washington, where the service is considered very attractive, that city now being a literary, art and scientific center, and with its libraries and educational institutions giving splendid opportunities for study and development. The entrance salary there will range from $24 to $220 a year. A large number of stenographers and typewriters are, however, required for the Philippine service, where the entrance salary is $250 to $1000 a year, and a career is open to bright and energetic young men. Applicants should apply to Z. A. Leigh, secretary of the local board of examiners, at the postoffice in this city, or to the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., for application forms and a copy of the Manual of Examinations, containing information relative to the character of the examination.

FRED FORB TO GO INTO BANKRUPTCY.—Fred Forb, proprietor of the Delicatessen grocery store, at 373 Morrison street, will today make application to the federal court for an order of bankruptcy. His liabilities are about $4000 and his assets, consisting of the stock and fixtures of the business and $500 in notes, are estimated at about $3000. The principal creditors are Wachauer & Co., 373 Morrison; Allen & Lewis, 225; Olds, Worman & King, 100; Blake-McCall Company, 175; Hazelwood Creamery Company, 130; Pacific Coast Biscuit Company, 110; Portland Trust Company of Oregon, 500; Stein Bros., of Chicago, 150. H. K. Sargent, attorney for Forb, said last evening that he was preparing the papers for bankruptcy proceedings and expected to have them ready for filing this morning. "The matter was precipitated," said the attorney, "by one of the creditors bringing an attachment action for $2000 and putting a keeper in charge of the store. The bankruptcy proceedings will dissolve the attachment and all creditors will share equally."

It is said to be the intention of the new company, which is controlled by George J. Gould, to place free messenger call boxes in all cities where the system is desired. The dispatch states that the system will be in full force within 60 days.

THREE SAILORS DROUGHT.—Three sailors have deserted from the gunboat Concord and the unprotected cruiser Marblehead while in Portland. One of the deserters was captured in Roseburg yesterday and is now on his way back to the ship. The other two have been furnished with the descriptions of the three men and captured one, a man named Owen, who was returned to his vessel. The Concord's men were paid last Saturday, while last Wednesday was payday on the Marblehead. A number of other sailors have stayed on shore leave longer than the regulations permit, but after a joyous time in the gladsy part of town returned of their own accord.

REV. J. W. BROUGHER ARRIVES TODAY.—Rev. J. Whitcomb Broucher, D. D., now the pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Chattanooga, Tenn., will arrive in the city today and will fill the pulpit of the First Baptist Church tomorrow. Dr. Broucher came to this coast to consider a call extended to him by a Seattle church, and also to fill an engagement to lecture before the Chattanooga Association at Gladstone Park, where he was greeted on his last appearance by an audience of 2000. Since then he has been visiting California, his native state, and is now on his return trip to Chattanooga, where he takes up his work again on the first Sunday in September.

BLIND MAN FALLS INTO A CELLAR.—While groping his way along Washington in his blind state, Charles Houston, the aged father of "Chick" Houston, fell into a cellar opening near Fourth street. A number of persons who saw the accident declare that there were no safeguards of any kind around the opening, and that the old man through his blindness walked into the pit while believing himself upon the sidewalk. City Physician Zane was hastily called, and after an examination of Mr. Houston's injuries pronounced them not fatal or dangerous. He was, however, severely bruised and sustained several small cuts.

In a Little Time.

ONTARIO, Or., Aug. 28.—(To the Editor.)—Eastern Oregon teachers have waited with no little solicitude to hear from some one of the various committees appointed to look after the exhibit of education at St. Louis and Portland. They'd like to know what is being done, and would esteem it a privilege to be allowed to help in the work.

Aside from the excellent address of Professor Young, at the State Teachers' Association in June, and the stirring communication of Brother Peddicord, the other contributions to the exhibit have been nothing whatever on the subject. If Professor Young is correct in his opinion (and we believe he is) that a creditable educational exhibit would do more for the cause of education than any other one means toward the future progress of the state, it is certainly time that the exhibitors were getting their material ready for the St. Louis Fair, especially since the educational building is now ready and will be open for exhibits in five days from date. How much of the seven-acre building at St. Louis is to be occupied by the Oregon exhibit? When will the state begin the work of getting its material into place? These, and cognate inquiries, are moving the mind of Eastern Oregon pedagogy. We are not exactly from Missouri, but we won't mind "being told" for all that. Talk to us—somebody—tell us all about it, through the Oregonian, or by any other means, to every agency for the general good of the state. We cannot afford to ignore or slight the opportunities now open to the state. Eight months remain for the state's preparation. What are we going to do? Talk? B. L. MILLIGAN.

There is something about the appearance of Ezra Kendall, before he opens his mouth to speak, that makes you laugh, even if you are a fat man and usually express your mirth by chuckles. Last night Kendall opened a two nights' engagement, with matinee, at the Marquam Theatre, in presenting Herbert Hall Winslow's character study, "The Vinegar Buyer," and it is safe to state that all in the audience laughed at the clean, genuine fun, until they were positively exhausted. There was a large attendance, and all had their money's worth. Kendall struck a popular chord when, in making one of his amusing speeches before the curtain, he said: "We are here to try to make you laugh. I never give a lecture that the theater should be used as a night school."

It is some ten years since Kendall last appeared in this city, and at that occasion his attraction was "A Pair of Kites." Then he became a great vaudeville star, one of the highest paid performers. On one occasion he appeared in vaudeville at the Orpheum Theatre, where he was, in fact, to get the best out of a man it only seems necessary to put him in a Portland climate, and then if he develop the bath habit you have it.

There is quite a lot that deserves look-up as to the science of hydropathy. For instance, while lying in a bath of tepid water, whether the water be in motion or quiescent, makes all the difference in the effect on the system produced, as in the former case it will have a revivifying, freshening effect, and in the latter a depressing effect. Such a little fact as that one who is cold and languid, if he can only get into a bath, it can make a difference in the world. So that the whole principle (the physics and physiology) of hydropathy should be studied and completely understood.

As to the art of bathing, like every other art it follows idiosyncrasy; but certainly there can be little art when it comes to the bath. It is in a clean and even the habit is just a matter of a first experience for certainly those who have once become accustomed to it are rather ruthless in their behavior about it. Why, I once knew a man who cold-bloodedly and calmly took a chunk of the show drawing-room of his house in order simply to enlarge his bathroom into a good lounge-room. Benjamin Franklin, that great reckoner of moments, has recorded that he spent half an hour daily walking about naked taking an air bath. It so happened, too, though rumor only recorded this, that in a fit of the blues, he walked into the garden, one while air-bathing; the housemaid saw him, but naturally did not like to go and mention the fact to him, and she went back to her work. He, however, did not know it, and so came down the rumor; there was little of the beautiful about the doctor in that walk. Great as the man was, he had nevertheless at some period of his life made a hog of himself, for it is a great telltale in this respect, is the body. Along with Franklin a great many men have recorded their fondness for the air lounge; most of Beaconsfield's bright thoughts came to him in his bathroom, and Balzac, another careful reckoner of moments, devoted two of his hours daily to the bath and its lounge. And as to the Romans of old, they simply lounged about en masse, until at length they fell into the monotony of the thing, and it (the monotony) ruined them.

In the old Roman colonies, such as Britain, every now and then the foundation of the villa of a colonist is unearthed, and the bathroom is found, and every time occupying a large portion of the face inclosed. At sight of these villa foundations it has been asked, when the legion withdrew, how the power of Rome failed, how far the owners of these villas among the barbarians, or at least what did the barbarians do with the villa and all its goods? Why, the old Roman colonist, he invited the roving, lawless barbarian Celt into the warm room, then gave him a cold-water douch, and then, in the fine feeling that followed, the bonds of friendship could be sealed forever on the spot. The climate of Great Britain, and by must have proved quite a revelation in the way of a good bath climate to the Roman emigrant, something in the way, say, that the climate of India reveals itself to the present-day Briton as a third-rather.

But perhaps the most serviceable bath of all is a tepid bath taken when the body is cold and weary before supper. It removes all the dust of the day from the body and mind, leaves one feeling refreshed, peaceful and contented, ready to make the most of any amusement the evening may bring forth, and finally, if one into the world of sleep without a single regret of the other world (as dreams have been called) to disturb us.

TWO WOMEN WITH SAME DELUSION.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Dominated by the same delusion, haunted by the same fear of unknown enemies, inseparable even in their mental weakness as they had been for years, Mrs. Augustus and her daughter, Ada, have been committed to Dunning by Judge Wheatley and a jury in the insane court at the Detention Hospital. Mrs. Chas. Olvovich is 53 years old; her daughter is 30. They are Russian Jews. The girl was born in England, and the father has been dead many years. The daughter became seized with the delusion that some unknown enemy was endeavoring to suffocate her by blowing a deadly powder through keyholes and crevices and under doors and windows. The mother sought medical aid and worried herself until she was seized with the same delusion.

NEW BILL AT SHIELDS PARK.

The new bill at Shields Park commences tomorrow night, when the head-liners will be the ever-popular Brownsons, who made such a sensation when at Cordey's several months ago. Another team new to Portland is that of Mackey and Corey, travesty stars. In addition to these Manager Shields has arranged for a long programme of good things, concluding with the moving pictures taken of the Ringling circus parade.

TONIGHT THE LAST.

Tonight will be the last performance of the present bill at Shields Park. The attractive features which have been the talk of the local theater-goers will close their engagements with the bill this evening.

EMPIRE'S GREAT BILL NEXT WEEK.

Rarely is so great a number of performers gathered on a vaudeville stage as will appear at the Empire Theater next week, beginning on Monday, August 31, and troupe of six Japanese jugglers, gymnasts and magicians, known as the Teisawari, gives the bill a good start, and the three Kuhn, singers and mandolin players, add both music and numbers to the programme. In addition to these artists, Mount and his whimsical and hilarious comedian; Lou Durbelle, the woman shadowgraphist, and a host of other clever people will appear.

BATHS AND SUCCESS.

How the "Tub" Has Played a Part in History.

HOOD RIVER, Aug. 28.—(To the Editor.)—One of the results of living in Portland, I should say, seems to be a craving for a bath. I wonder if others have found it so? Of course, the reason is that the strong, humid air is unfavorable to perspiration, and a bath is as good as a help.

This craving for a bath, seems to be a pretty good falling, by the by, other people have had it. In the flowery days of Egypt's civilization the spirit of the bath (the lotus) used to be worshiped; the Emperors of Rome could find no better way of ingratiating themselves with the people than in building a grand public bath-house. The Englishman (I suppose a lot of craves) wants a bath the first thing in the morning, and invariably has a tin bathtub at the foot of his bed (somewhere near where he says his prayers), and it is noticeable that the inhabitants of a moist climate, or at least, it should rather be said, the inhabitants of moist climates who have indulged in baths have always been great doers of good.

Four moist, humid atmosphere, as is the atmosphere of Western Oregon, seems to support, seems to nurse and sustain and seems to fit the human body for the long, heavy, earnest struggle of the winter, in fact, to get the best out of a man it only seems necessary to put him in a Portland climate, and then if he develop the bath habit you have it.

When spring comes with all its wealth of opening buds and new flowers, the ant is preparing for a season of profitable industry.

It comes out of its winter quarters and locates a new home where it can store away, during the summer months, the sustenance for the long winter days. Just as industrious as the ant—but in a different way, are the countless infinitesimal germs which burrow into the scalp and eat away at the roots of the hair.
