RAT IN HER CLOTHES

CAUSES WOMAN TO THINK SHE HAS APPENDICITIS.

Episode Which Followed East Side Fire — Keeps Burnside-Street Lodging-House Awake.

Two young women, who went to the fire on the East Side Saturday night, caused a great commotion in their boarding-house, which is but a block away from the Burkhard building on East Burnside street. It was well after midnight when they reached their apartments. One remarked:

"I feel very queer about my side. I am afraid I'm going to have appendicitis."

"Oh, no. I guess it is not so bad as that, I hope," remarked her companion.

"Yes, but it is hurt right here," said the afflicted one, pointing to her side just below her waist. She then proceeded to disrobe slowly and carefully so as not to cause any irritation, while her sympathetic companion stood by with some ointment. Then came the development and the sensation and commotion, which caused other lodgers in the house to quake with fright.

Just as the young woman got her dress off out jumped a big rat which had snuggled himself well in the folds of her garments. The rat was not at all to blame. He had made a run for it to escape the fire, and, as any port is good in a storm, had gone inside her dress. But as Mr. Rat jumped out his appearance was anything but assuring to the two unprotected females. They jumped on the bed first and then on the table, while the rat, as badly scared as they were, was scooting about the room trying to find a way out, but there was none. Finally, when the situation was getting desperate, the companion of the young woman, who thought she had appendicitis and not a rat, managed to kill the rat with her shoe. It was a big rat, and enough to cause a commotion when shut up in a room with two young women. However, the young woman who had unconsciously sheltered it said that she would about as soon have had the appendicitis.

HALL MUST PAY THE FEE.

Cannot Dodge Legal Expense of His Late Family Row.

In his suit to recover $100 attorney fees against Mrs. Sophia Hall, tried yesterday afternoon before a jury in Justice Waldemar Seton's Court, Walter Wolf secured a verdict of $50. Mrs. Hall is the wife of Thomas Hall, who was recently arrested in the Municipal Court on a charge of threatening to kill his wife, and it came out that Hall was intimate with Mrs. Powell, who occupied his house on Grand avenue. In the case in the Municipal Court, Walter Wolf was Hall's attorney, and his claim for $100 attorney fees from Mrs. Hall was based on the assumption that he induced Hall to deed to Mrs. Hall property valued at $3000, situated on First and Hall streets. In the trial yesterday, Mr. Wolf found the whole family had formed a combination, notwithstanding the family row they had been in, to defeat the collection of his fee.

Mr. Wolf was the only witness who testified in his behalf. He detailed how he had induced Thomas Hall to deed the property to Mrs. Hall. Mrs. Hall and her son Edward had come to his office and employed him to do so. It was then agreed that his fee should be $100. Wolf told Mrs. Hall and her son that he would not touch the case for anything less. The deed was signed by Hall and delivered to his wife. Wolf communicated with Edward Hall over the telephone about his fee, when the latter said he thought the fee of $100 was too much. Wolf agreed to accept $75 to get settlement. Wolf then called up Mrs. Hall and asked for his fee, but she refused to pay, and said she owed him nothing. Two attorneys testified that $100 was a reasonable fee for the services Wolf had rendered, provided his story was a correct version of the case.

For the defense Mrs. Hall, Thomas Hall and her son Edward testified, and denied point blank practically every statement Mr. Wolf had made on the witness stand. Mrs. Hall declared that she had never employed Wolf for any purpose, and the transfer of the $3000 worth of property had been talked over and settled between her husband and herself for six months, and Wolf had nothing whatever to do with it. Mrs. Hall said that she never received the telephone message from Wolf on the subject of the fee claimed. Edward Hall corroborated this evidence. Thomas Hall testified that he gave the deed of the property in question to his wife without any assistance on the part of Wolf except that Wolf drew up the deed. He said that he paid Wolf $100 for defending him n the Municipal Court, and $17 for services in a civil action in Justice Seton's court. Some pointed questions were asked Hall as to his affair with the Powell woman, and he caused a laugh in the court by the remark, "I am not done with her yet." He said that he was living with his wife.

There were three witnesses against Mr. Wolf, but Justice Seton instructed the jury that it was the judge as to who had told the truth, no matter how many witnesses there might be on one side. He instructed the jury not to consider the question whether Hall had employed Wolf.

Rev. W. T Kerr in New Home

Rev. W. T. Kerr, retiring pastor of the Central M. E. Church, of Albina, and wife have made their home in the cottage at No. 189 Morris street, Albina, where they will remain till next Spring. Mr. Kerr put up a neat and comfortable cottage at this point. Next Spring they will go East on a visit. Mr. Kerr has retired from active work for the year. He and Mrs. Kerr have many warm friends, whose good wishes go with them in their retirement.

Hail the Coming; Speed the Parting.

MAY JOIN NATIONAL BODY

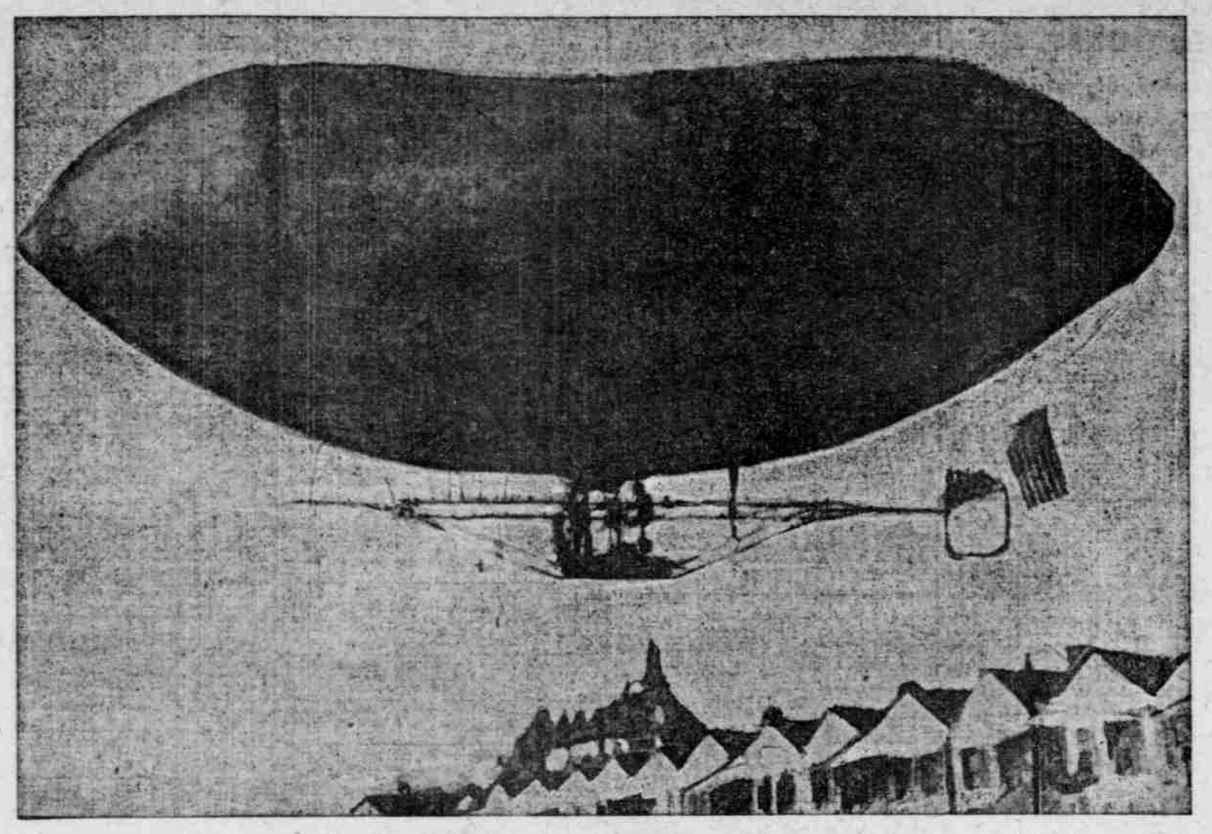
Portland Board of Trade Considers Invitation.

The Portland Board of Trade is considering the matter of becoming a member of the National Board of Trade with headquarters at Washington, D. C. As to whether or not the local organization will join the larger one, will probably be decided at the next meeting of the body.

Letters were received by the Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce some time ago, inviting both bodies to become members of the National organization. In both instances the members of the local commercial bodies received the invitation with favor and instructed the respective secretaries to write for copies of the constitution and by-laws of the National body. These have been received and have met with favorable consideration at the hands of the Board of Trade.

The National Board of Trade was organized for the purpose of promoting the efficiency and extending the usefulness of the various commercial and manufacturing organizations of the United States, securing unity and harmony of action relative to business usages and laws, and especially the proper consideration of and concentration of opinion upon questions affecting the financial, commercial and industrial interests of the country at large, and to provide a concerted action regarding National legislative measures and Governmental department affairs.

WOULD BRING HIS AIRSHIP TO THE LEWIS AND CLARK FAIR



DR. GRETH'S DIRIGIBLE BALLOON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 20.—(Special.)—The San Francisco airship invented and built by Dr. August Greth is to be taken to the St. Louis Exposition.

"I am going to compete for the $100,000 prize and gold medal to be awarded for the most successful airship," said Dr. Greth today, "and I shall win the prize, too, unless I have some competitor more formidable than Santos-Dumont, whose exploits have been talked about all over the world.

"In case I am successful there, or even if I should not be, I have in mind certain improvements which I shall make and if proper arrangements are made I shall make a trip with my machine to Portland for the World's Fair in 1905."

Dr. Greth is very confident of the success of his airship, though personally he is a modest sort of inventor. He is not a typical airship crank, for he refrained from talking in advance of performances. Now that he has succeeded in displaying control over his aerial machine, even in the strong winds of San Francisco, he is anxious to show what he can do in competition with the air-traveler made famous in France.

"I will sail from here to Chicago," says the inventor, "and from there I will go to St. Louis. We will keep that $100,000 prize in America.

"No arrangements that I know of have yet been made by the management of the Portland Fair, so it is too early for me to say positively that I shall go there. However, I will be only too glad if opportunity is presented to show the possibilities of my perfected machine there in 1905."

Dr. Greth says his machine differs materially from that of Santos-Dumont. He plans to take another trip over the housetops in San Francisco next Sunday.

TO DISCUSS GOOD ROADS.

State Convention Meets in Portland Friday.

The annual meeting of the Oregon State Good Roads Association will be held in this city on Friday and Saturday. The purpose of this meeting is to plan improvements of the roads of the state, and it is expected to be one of importance because of the fact that some noted authorities on good roads will be present to tell the Oregon men what they know about building roads. It is expected that there will be a large attendance of members of the association and others interested.

The local committee on entertainment has not yet selected a hall to hold the sessions in, but this will be done in ample time. The business of the convention will consist of reports from the various officers, the election of officers for the ensuing year and the consideration of matters relative to the construction of roads. Addresses will be made by a number of prominent men.

It is now being planned to have an object-lesson in road-building, given by those versed in the business, at some place in or near the city. Addresses on matters pertaining to good roads will be made by Governor Chamberlain, James H. McDonald, State Highway Commissioner of Connecticut; J. B. Killerbrew, of Nashville, Tenn.; James W. Abbott, Commissioner of Public Road Inquiries of the Rocky Mountain district, and M. O. Eldredge, assistant director of the office of Public Road Inquiries, of Washington, D. C.

Mr. Abbott's lecture will be illustrated by stereopticon views, showing what has been and is being accomplished in various parts of the country in the matter of road construction. The convention will close Saturday night with a banquet.

The present officers of the association are:

J. H. Scott, president, Salem; J. E. Magers, secretary, Portland; C. J. Trenchard, treasurer, Astoria.

Executive committee—J. H. Scott, Salem; H. M. Palmer, Albany; C. J. Trenchard, Astoria; George C. Blakeley, The Dalles; W. W. Travillion, Baker City; L. A. Rood, Hillsboro; J. E. Magers, Portland.

Vice-presidents for the several counties—W. W. Travillion, Baker; Virgil E. Waters, Benton; Thomas H. Ryan, Clackamas; O. J. Peterson, Clatsop; J. B. Doan, Columbia; C. B. Cathcart, Coos; M. Riley, Curry; W. A. Booth, Crook, A. C. Marsters, Douglas; Edward Dunn, Gilliam; J. R. McHaley, Grant; H. C. Levens, Harney; Charles Prim, Jackson; J. O. Booth, Josephine; G. T. Baldwin, Klamath; Bernard Daly, Lake; F. W. Spencer, Yamhill; A. C. Woodcock, Lane; C. M. Brown, Lincoln; H. M. Palmer, Linn; J. F. Stevens, Malheur; H. B. Thielsen, Marion; A. G. Bartholomew, Morrow; L. R. Webster, Multnomah; J. E. Sibley, Polk; John Fulton, Sherman; W. W. Conder, Tillamook; G. A. Hartman, Umatilla; R. Blumenstein, Union; G. W. Hamilton, Wallowa; G. C. Blakeley, Wasco; L. A. Rood, Washington; W. W. Hoover, Wheeler.

TALK POLITICS TO MR. CLEVELAND

Chicagoans Fill Ex-President Full of Third-Term Idea — He Discreetly Talks Art

Chicago Tribune, October 16.

"Mr. Cleveland, I'm hoping to live long enough to see you President a third time."

"O, Mr. Cleveland, won't you please run again? My husband says—"

"Say, Mr. Cleveland, my pop says three times an' out's all right, but you've got to be three times in first."

They hailed him with it, sped him with it, whispered it, and flung it—in fact, did everything but sing it to him at the Art Institute yesterday afternoon, where 2000 Chicagoans shook the hand of the ex-President. And thereupon Mr. Cleveland broke his rule and consented to talk politics to the public. He told each and every enthusiast over the Presidential proposition that is was "so kind," that it was gratifying "to hear such an expression of confidence," but that, really, and this with a deprecatory wave of the hand, he was "quite content to remain a private citizen."

After a morning of personal calls, a luncheon given for him at the Chicago Club by James H. Eckels, and the public reception at the Art Institute, Mr. Cleveland left the city at 6 P. M. for Princeton. To Mr. Eckels and Martin A. Ryerson, who accompanied him to the Union Station, the distinguished visitor summed up the impressions of his two days in Chicago in these words:

"If any city on this earth has a better lot of fellows than Chicago I would like to see it produce them."

The Art Institute was crowded all the afternoon with the people who came to shake hands with the ex-President, and who lingered to catch another glimpse of him as he passed out. The reception was held in the Field memorial room on the second floor. Mr. Cleveland was accompanied by President Charles L. Hutchinson, of the Art Institute, and by Mr. Eckels. Other members of the receiving party were Martin A. Ryerson, Arthur Caton, John R. Walsh, John P. Hopkins, William J. Onahan, R. A. Keyes, Dr. J. B. Murphy, A. A. Sprague, E. A. Bancroft, A. C. Bartlett, A. J. Earling and David R. Forgan.

"My name's Grover Cleveland Jackson," piped an eerie voice from somewhere in the line of citizens pressing toward the ex-President. Mr. Cleveland, who had been shaking hands for five minutes with the old Presidential handshake scarcely the worse for seven years of disuse, stopped in momentary mystification and then, peering down, caught sight of an urchin.

"Well, well, my little man, if that's your name I'm proud to know it," replied Mr. Cleveland with a pat on the youngster's head. Once outside the boy related his experience to the crowd at large and confided the further information that he was the son of Policeman William Jackson, who lives at 433 Dayton street.

The bombardment of the third-term enthusiasts began with the first comers and ended only with several prominent members of the receiving committee, who had to whisper a confidential word or two in the ear of the "Sage of Princeton" before they stepped into their carriages. Old men begged him in faltering accents to run again, young men sought the honor of casting their first vote for him, women declared their husbands would mark the ballot for him as they would like to mark it, and girls confided the wish to him diffidently as the prettiest sweet nothing they could murmur in the interval of the ex-Presidential handshake.

"Keep right on talking the way you did last night," exclaimed the Rev. W. O. Waters, of Grace Episcopal Church.

"It was a great speech—the third term idea seems to be popular," said Dean Hollinger, of the Northwestern University Medical School.

Some blurted it out to him before they grasped his hand, some pressed close and whispered the prophecy in his ear, some started to say it, then blushed and faltered and broke off, some turned back before relinquishing the ex-Presidential palm and incorporated their best wishes of success in a hasty farewell.

Mr. Cleveland met a few old friends in the line. Suddenly he found himself shaking hands with Don M. Dickinson, Postmaster-General in his first term. They chatted a moment and were joined by General W. C. Newberry, who was postmaster of Chicago a part of the second Cleveland term.

Then Fernando Jones was espied in the line and promptly seized and borne forward by Arthur Caton and Mr. Hutchinson.

"I am living now for the purpose of seeing you elected again," announced the Chicago pioneer to Mr. Cleveland.

Mr. Cleveland was greatly interested in the pictures in the Art Institute—especially when any one attempted to talk politics to him. He was gazing into the restful background of a fishing scene by Corot when he was asked what he thought about the report that Bryan has given up the fight for silver. In the picture there was a boat and a man sitting in the prow casting a line into a rural pool. Mr. Cleveland had been lost in contemplation. But now from out the repose of his face a smile, or what promised to be one, glimmered through the sparse white mustache, trembled a moment doubtfully as the keen, blue eyes were directed on the interviewer, then slowly crept out at each corner of the mouth and spread like an eddy till it had puckered his eyes into narrow slits and smoothed out an incipient frown on his brow. Mr. Cleveland was plainly grinning—right at the fisherman in the picture. Then he smoothed the wisp of hair on the top of his head and said:

"I get a real joy out of that—"

The interviewer pricked up an ear and prepared to take notes.

"Picture," concluded Mr. Cleveland. I have always said that Corot must have been a fisherman."

At the luncheon given by Mr. Eckels at the Chicago Club there were 85 prominent Chicago business and professional men.

In the morning he called on Mr. Walter Q. Gresham and then visited the Armour Institute, where he addressed 1500 cheering students on the opportunities of education.

LOTS OF FUN AND MUSIC

PRESS CLUB MINSTRELS WILL SURPRISE THE PEOPLE.

They Will Sing the Birds to Silence, and Make Jokes of Refreshing Novelty to Theatergoers.

Newspaper men will prove at the Empire Theater on Wednesday, October 28, that they can do other things besides get the news and write it in spicy style to serve up hot on everybody's breakfast and supper table. They are writing songs on men and affairs with which they come in daily contact and will sing them to music with which the people are already familiar. They will crack jokes from which the bloom of youth has not been worn by frequent repetition.

The attitude of Chief Hunt to the gamblers and the sporting element will form the subject of an opening chorus in which the whole blackfaced company will join. The minstrels will offer a solution for the vexed question, at which the Mayor, the Chief, the Ministerial Association, the Municipal Association, and the gamblers will jump as eminently just. Gilbert Costello will bring out all the weird qualities of "the Congo Love Song" and other members will sing parodies on "Ain't That a Shame" and "Under the Bamboo Tree." Weber and Fields will find that there are others who can mimic the Dutch if they come to hear Rea Irvin and A. L. Hart in their dialect dialogue. John H. Stevenson has been ransacking the dictionary for all the big words of not less than five syllables and has strained his jaws so badly in pronouncing them that he has to rub the joints with liniment every night. He promises that his jawbone and his tongue will be limber enough by today week to reel off all the jawbreakers in his monologue without cracking a bone. What A. L. Morris will talk about in his monologue no one knows, for, whenever he is asked, he simply winks the other eye and says nothing, but from the knowing way in which he winks it is a safe bet that he has something good in store.

But in all this variety of fun the interlocutor and the end men must not be overlooked. Long, lean John E. Lathrop will occupy the center of the stage. Ordinarily he looks so solemn that no one would ever suspect him of the ability to laugh, but when W. G. MacRae, Fred Earp, Gilbert Costello and A. L. Morris begin firing jokes at him he will be seen to expand into a seraphic smile, the dimensions of which cannot be computed. They dare not retail stale jokes, for any man guilty of such a crime will be seized by the other members of the club and flung to the tender mercy of the enraged audience.

But there will be more music, for W. H. Souls has organized a musical aggregation which will silence the birds with its harmony. Carl S. Kelty and Mr. Wallin will give a duo on the saxophone and Mr. Souls and Mr. Wallstein will give a guitar duo.

All this will be merely by way of prelude to the regular vaudeville, which itself draws crowded houses every night. As the minstrels and the vaudeville show are each worth the price of admission, the public will get twice the value of its money.

Tickets are on sale at all the theaters and cigar stores; price, 50 cents.

EXHIBITS FROM SOUTH.

Confederate Veterans Ask Lewis and Clark Commission to Remember It.

At the regular meeting of Oregon Camp, United Confederate Veterans, held on Monday evening, October 19, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The people of the Pacific Northwest are preparing fitly to celebrate the historical events which secured the great Oregon Country to the United States; and

Whereas, It is desirable that all sections of the country be properly represented in such celebration, as all sections were benefited by the acquisition of the territory and its people are made up of recruits from all sections alike; therefore, be it

Resolved, By Oregon Camp, United Confederate Veterans, that we heartily indorse all efforts of those having the matter in charge looking to the proper development of the Lewis and Clark Centennial celebration and pledge them our hearty support and cooperation; and

Resolved, That we would feel extreme pleasure in having the new industrial enterprises and the resources of the beautiful Southland section of the country—the section whence we came—fully represented at our Fair, and to that end would be pleased to be of any service which we might be able to render.

COURT HELD IN WAGON.

Chicago Justice Solves Hard Problem for the Police.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—For the first time in the history of Chicago police court has been held in a patrol wagon. Justice Caverly climbed in the wagon, which was standing in front of the City Hall and administered the oath to two detectives who were armed with a warrant charging Lucy Miles with larceny. The woman lay on a cot in the vehicle, having been brought from the County Hospital. She was held in bonds of $1500 and the case was continued for 10 days. A commitment was issued by the magistrate and she was taken to the County Jail Hospital.

The woman, who is 26 years old, is charged with stealing $700 worth of silverware from the Colonial Hotel at Coney Island, N. Y. She came to Chicago with the stolen property and was found by detectives suffering from appendicitis. An operation was performed on her at the County Hospital and she was discharged. The jail officials refused to take her without a mittimus, and as she needed medical attention, the Harrison-street police station annex could not receive her. Justice Caverly helped the officers out of the dilemma by holding court in the patrol wagon.

WELL HOARDS HIS WAGES

Farmhand Spends Only $44.90 in 32 Years, and Now Has $5200.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Patrick Mahaney, of Derby, Conn., has sailed for his old home in Ireland with $5200 representing the savings of 32 years as a farm hand. His wage generally was $12 to $14 a month and board. In the 32 years he had but three employers and took only six days off. His expenditures amounted to $44.90, an average of less than 12 cents a month. This money he spent principally for newspapers. Mahaney said he had enough to live on comfortably and he never would work again.

Examinations at Walla Walla.

OLYPMIA, Oct. 20.—(Special.)—The State Superintendent today announced that examination for State papers will be held at the City of Walla Walla commencing on a day of December to be later selected and continuing three days, or so much thereof as may be found to be necessary. The examination will be conducted by Prof. J. W. Shepherd, of Walla Walla, member of the State Board of Education. It is likely an examination for State papers will be held in Tacoma also about the same time.

HE DECLINES THE CHAIR

CHARLES E. LADD CANNOT HEAD LIVESTOCK COMMITTEE.

Provision Made for Sub-Committees on Entertainment of National Livestock Convention.

It seems probable that Richard Scott will be chairman of the committee for the entertainment of the National Livestock Association. Charles E. Ladd has declined to serve on account of the press of other business and the disposition of the committee at the meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms yesterday was to elect Mr. Scott chairman after another attempt to induce Mr. Ladd to serve. The selection of sub-committees was confided to Mr. Scott and C. J. Millis, the secretary, who blushingly insisted that the committee was doing him too much honor in loading so much responsibility upon him.

When the meeting opened, Mr. Scott, who, as vice-president, occupied the chair, announced that Mr. Ladd had declined, as he could not possibly give time to the work. F. E. Beach suggested that an attempt be made to induce Mr. Ladd to remain, at least for the present, with the understanding that Mr. Scott would be the active head and in the hope that Mr. Ladd would ultimately remain to the end. John E. Lathrop did not think Mr. Ladd would change his mind and maintained that the man who did the work should be the real chairman. J. W. Bailey was of the same opinion. Mr. Millis was deeply disappointed that Mr. Ladd could not serve, although he agreed that Mr. Scott would be an excellent chairman. Mr. Scott said Mr. Ladd had told him he not only declined the chairmanship of this committee, but had intended to resign as chairman of the committee on agriculture of the Lewis and Clark Fair. However, he had induced Mr. Ladd to retain the latter position. Mr. Bailey was opposed to a figurehead chairman and proposed Mr. Scott's selection, with Mr. Ladd as vice-chairman. At Mr. Millis' suggestion it was decided to make another effort to induce Mr. Ladd to serve and, if that failed, to adopt Mr. Bailey's suggestion.

Mr. Millis then read the names of the executive committee and suggested that he be authorized to also appoint a committee of five from each Coast state, as this would tend to secure an increased attendance from those states. As subcommittees of the general committee he proposed a finance committee, which should have subcommittees on collections, distribution and audit; a programme committee, which should have subcommittees on general reception, special reception, excursions, ball and smoker, theaters and music, and finally a press committee. This list was adopted as read.

A further suggestion from Mr. Millis that each county in the state have a committee and be asked to bear a share of the expense was adopted, together with this suggestion that a committee be appointed from each Coast state, and he was authorized to appoint them. When Mr. Beach proposed that the chairman and secretary also name the subcommittees, Mr. Millis protested that this would be doing him too much honor and the general committee should share the work, but in the end Mr. Beach's motion prevailed.

Then came a debate as to the manner of raising funds. Mr. Bailey wished to have the work done jointly by the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Trade, but Max M. Shillock, secretary of the latter body, recalled that both were represented on this committee. Mr. Beach, who is president of the Board of Trade, said he did not believe the expense would be as great as estimated, for each event arranged for the entertainment of the delegates could be made to take care of itself. The delegates would be more likely to go to the ball as spectators and the society people who would do the dancing could take care of the expenses.

The selection of headquarters for the convention was left to the chairman and secretary, the latter to notify Charles F. Martin, secretary of the National Livestock Association, of their action. Mr. Mellis appealed to the members to serve without objection on the subcommittees to which they would be appointed. He was also given the privilege of selecting three assistants and named M. Meessohn, Max M. Shillock and John E. Lathrop.

Mr. Bailey proposed sending a man through Oregon and Washington to arouse general enthusiasm for the convention, and Mr. Millis answered that the suggestion had been considered already and would be acted upon at the proper time.

Mr. Beach presented a letter he had received from E. S. Waterman, of Walla Walla, one of the committeemen from Washington, saying: "In anything I can do here to serve you I am at your service."

The committee will meet again at the call of the vice-chairman.

Writ Too Late for Service.

SEATTLE, Oct. 20.—Desabera Morikawa obtained a restraining order in the Superior Court today to prevent the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Line from carrying his alleged wife back to Japan on the Shinano Maru, but the steamer carried the woman away before the writ could be served.

Morikawa had appealed to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor from an adverse decision of Puget Sound immigration inspectors, forbidding the woman to land.

NORDICA

Tribute of Queen of Song to Kimball Pianos.

The coming of Nordica to Portland with the famous Metropolitan Orchestra under the direction of Conductor Duss himself, is by far the greatest musical privilege Portland has ever enjoyed.

Endowed with beauty, with personal charm and with the most glorious voice ever bestowed on a human being, this great singer is also possessed of an exceptionally thorough musical education and rarely fine judgment in all matters pertaining to music.

The following cordial indorsement by her of Kimball pianos is, therefore, a matter of importance to any one who is hesitating in the selection of a piano.

Waldorf Hotel, March 27, 1900.

Messrs. W. W. Kimball & Co.—I can only repeat of your instruments what I said of the one I have in my London home, that the longer I use it the better I like it. The two Kimballs purchased for relatives give the same satisfaction, and whether in arias or songs the piano supports the voice splendidly. I can cordially congratulate the Kimball Company.

Very truly,

(Signed) LILLIAN NORDICA DOME.

Such a decided and spontaneous expression from this brilliant woman is a standard from which there is no appeal.

The manufacture of the Kimball keep constantly in advance of nearly every other make in improvements and betterments of every character pertaining to tone, to mechanism and also to beauty and detail of artistic finish.

We constantly receive the latest and finest products of the famous Komball factory, and when the merit of Kimball pianos is fully understood, prices asked for them by Eilers Piano House will be found extremely moderate.

A thorough inspection of our entire line of these celebrated pianos is cordially invited. Eilers Piano House, Washington street, corner Park, Nos. 351, 353 and 355.

MOUNTAIN FALLS FROM EARTH'S FACE

Silently as comes the night a mountain in the coast range, 65 miles southwest of Fresno, Cal., has disappeared, raising the bed of the Losgatos Creek that flowed at its base, from 8 to 12 feet and laying bare a ledge of what is supposed to be cinnabar. Disease disappears like this mountain when attacked by Dr. Burkhardt's Vegetable Compound. A 30-days' treatment, costing only 25c at any drug store, will relieve the most obstinate case of Rheumatism, Catarrh, Constipation, Nervousness or Kidney and Liver Trouble. A six months' treatment will completely cure.

NEW SCIENTIFIC PROCESS.

A Preparation Discovered That Will Destroy the Dandruff Germ.

For some time it has been known that dandruff is caused by a germ that digs up the scalp into little white flakes, and by sapping the vitality of the hair at the root, causes falling hair, and, of course, finally baldness. For years there have been all kinds of hair stimulants and scalp tonics on the market, but there has been no permanent cure for dandruff until the discovery of a preparation called Newbro's Herpicide, which destroys the dandruff germ. Destroy the cause the effect will cease to exist. Kill the dandruff germ and you'll have no dandruff, no itching scalp, no falling hair. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10 cents in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.
