

HEAVY GALE'S SWEEP

Heavy Storm Sweeps Pacific Northwest

TELEGRAPH LINES GO DOWN

Wind, Snow and Rain Delay Trains.

A FRAME HOUSE IS WRECKED

Storm Warnings Keep Ships From Going to Sea—Wind Reaches a Velocity of Thirty-Four Miles an Hour.

The Pacific Northwest was swept yesterday by the most severe and destructive storm of the winter. Wind, snow and rain created havoc from British Columbia to California and from the Coast as far east as Colorado. Telegraphic communication was almost completely destroyed throughout the storm-swept district and during the greater portion of the day Portland was telegraphically isolated from the entire world. It was not until last night that wires could be raised in any direction beyond local joints. Business interests suffered accordingly. The railroads in Portland suffered delays in almost every line. Snow is reported to have fallen to a depth of four feet in use on the lines that traverse the mountains. Light snow was reported from Eastern Oregon and Washington, with heavier snow on Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado and Utah. Heavy winds have been blowing, laying the wires low in every direction. The storm developed more rapidly, was of shorter duration, greater extent and more severe, than any storm that has been recorded on this part of the Coast for some time. In Portland there was an absence of snow, but there was heavy precipitation and a wind that attained the magnitude of a gale. The unusual velocity of 34 miles per hour was recorded at the local weather bureau. The wind and rain caused considerable damage locally, but none of a serious nature. Wires were cut out of service, trees were blown down, and some places were flooded by water. The streets flowed like rivers for a time, and the washing of mud and debris into the sewers caused considerable trouble from choking up.

The wind blew with such force for a time yesterday morning that light houses were shaken as if they would be blown down, and there was considerable uneasiness among occupants of flimsy structures.

Frame House Wrecked.

During the storm a frame cottage being built by J. E. Boydston on Ivy street was wrecked. The house was just about completed. The loss is about $1900 with $1000 insurance. Trees were blown down in several parts of the city, according to reports that came in during the day.

Considerable damage was done to telephone wires by the wind and as a result a number of phones were out during the day. Considerable trouble from this source was experienced by the City & Suburban Railway Company. There was some delay in street car service, and the water washing mud and debris across the tracks in portions of the city, but this delay was of no serious consequence.

The railroads suffered considerably on account of the severity of the storm. The Northern Pacific managed to arrive from California about on time, but the Northern Pacific was delayed to some extent, especially during yesterday afternoon. The O. R. & N. was troubled by soft tracks that caused several hours' delay. The morning train from Ogden did not reach this city until after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The evening train was delayed about three hours. The dispatcher at the Union Depot stated last night that practically all trains into Portland were behind time owing to the storm.

Telegraph Lines Down.

The storm was felt most severely by the telegraph companies. Their lines were out in almost every direction. The trouble commenced yesterday morning, and grew worse as the day advanced until last night. During the greater portion of the day no messages could be sent to or received from points outside of the city and the southern part of Washington. For awhile last night all wires towards the Sound district were out. The Weather Bureau was unable to get reports from but a few of their outside stations yesterday morning. For a few hours last night the Associated Press wires to Portland were out in every direction, and it looked as if no news could be secured from the outside world at all. By 9 o'clock, though, most of the wires were reported "O. K."

This trouble was not experienced by Portland alone but throughout the district visited by the storm. During part of the day the whole Pacific Northwest was telegraphically off the map.

Storm Was Foretold.

The first indication of the storm reached Portland Tuesday evening in the form of a rapidly falling barometer. Owing to the fact that very few reports had been received by the Weather Bureau that day because of disabled wires from the previous storm, the local forecaster was unable to tell what the extent of the approaching disturbance was. To be on the safe side, however, he ordered storm warnings hoisted at the mouth of the Columbia and along the Sound district that evening. As later developments have demonstrated, his action was fortunate. The storm broke over Portland early yesterday morning in the form of heavy rain accompanied by wind. The latter increased in fury until by 4:30 A. M. it had reached the maximum velocity of 34 miles per hour. Rain fell in torrents, flooding the streets, until they looked like flowing rivers of murky water. The precipitation continued at intervals throughout the day, but the wind abated before noon.

According to the few reports that could be got by the local Weather Bureau, the storm extended from the southern part of Oregon to British Columbia, and swept from the Coast over Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah and to Western Colorado. Heavy winds were a characteristic of the storm throughout the district affected. At Fort Crescent the highest velocity recorded was 41 miles per hour. The storm was central yesterday over the Straits of Fuca, but by last night the point of activity had moved towards the Rocky Mountains.

No Damage to Shipping Reported.

So far no reports of damage on the sea have been received and it is not considered likely that there will be much damage to shipping, owing to the fact that the storm warnings were put out in time to prevent vessels from going forth into the teeth of the storm. As to what damage may have resulted from the storm further towards the East, nothing has been received by the local weather office. From all indica-

LOUISE LEA IS RELEASED

Decision Holds That Law, Under Which Deportation Was Ordered, Was Passed After She Came to This Country.

After a rehearing of the case, Judge C. B. Bellinger, of the Federal Court, rendered a decision yesterday in the habeas corpus case of Miss Louise Lea, by which he allowed the French woman to be released from the House of the Good Shepherd and set aside the order of George Bruce Cortelyou for her deportation from this country. The case was immediately appealed by the District Attorney and the and was taken back to his stable in a feeble condition. The transformer on a pole at the east end of the Burnside street bridge, carrying several hundred telephone wires, burned off yesterday morning. It made a blaze and knocked out telephone wires almost without number. Four men were employed yesterday in restoring order at the transformer.

Executive Board Has Difficult Task in Pleasing All Interests.

The accompanying drawing illustrates the situation as it now stands relative to the installation of the new Albina ferry. Whichever way the authorities turn they are met by opposition from some source. To every suggested settlement, there has been some objection and the views regarding the establishment of the ferry seem as varied as the number of property-owners in the district.

The interested in the Northwestern Door Company and Montgomery dock are said to want the landing removed to the new site above the dock. Residents above the present site object to its sale and the establishment of a single landing place for the old and the proposed new ferry, saying that the consolidation would affect the value of their property, and that they have spent considerable money in improving the street leading up to the landing. Again the O. R. & N. Co. objects to the opening up of Randolph and Russell streets through their terminal grounds and has thrown out dark, vague hints about plucking up their "40 and dishes" and leaving the vicinity if the streets named are opened.

The ferry committee of the Executive Board after considering all sides of the case, decided recently to sell the present site and buy the one above the Montgomery dock for $17,000 for use as a landing for both ferries. For a time, it was thought that the difficulty had been settled. However, City Attorney McNary discovered that under the law the city has no right to sell the old site. The city's jurisdiction is limited to expanding the $5000 appropriation of the Legislature for building the new ferry Mr. McNary found. The Council endorsed his opinion.

And there are still other complications. The proposed new landing has an additional 30 feet in length over the present landing. The present landing has just enough length to allow of the proper grade to the dock without allowing any space between the landing and the dock. In increasing the grade and allowing plenty of room for a free landing. Five feet would be sufficient to decrease the grade and would leave 35 feet outside the harbor line. Landing Agnes Subbridge has entered more or less objection to the existence of the ferry cable in the river, declaring that they are unable to drop anchor in the vicinity for fear of grappling.

The final solution of the problem is one that the ferry committee of the Executive Board is dealing with. Both the single and double landing places have their adherents, and whether a happy medium will finally be decided upon remains to be seen.

BLANKETS, COMFORTERS.

THE CHRISTMAS DELINEATOR.

We sold blankets and comforters yesterday. We will sell more today, and the day after at prices lower than the manufacturers. We guarantee this. McAllen & McDowell, The Wrecked Corner, Third and Morrison.

The Delineator for December represents the very highest excellence that has been attained in magazine-making. It will have a larger circulation than ever before. In addition to innumerable pages of charming fashions there are many striking articles and features, among them: four pages in color, representing Babyhood, Childhood, Girlhood and Motherhood; the work of Bernard Shaw, Lowmeyer and Jules Guerin's interpretation of Clinton Scott's fine poem, Nazareth Town; Andrew Lang, Richard Le Gallienne, W. A. Fraser, Albert Bigelow Paine and Harriet Prescott Spofford. In addition there is the third installment of 'The Evolution of a Club Woman,' the poignant narrative by Mrs. Lavinia Dobson, and special articles by Gustav Kobbé and N. Hudson Moore; also the last of the interesting photographic series by J. C. Hemment and the concluding 'Militant' paper. There are stories and pastimes for the children, and for the household, reasonable suggestions in cooking and in other departments of the home.

Visitors to Portland. Should not miss the delightful trips up and down the Columbia river. Parties at special rates. I. N. G. G. B. Office, Third and Washington.

LOUISE LEA IS RELEASED

Decision Holds That Law, Under Which Deportation Was Ordered, Was Passed After She Came to This Country.

After a rehearing of the case, Judge C. B. Bellinger, of the Federal Court, rendered a decision yesterday in the habeas corpus case of Miss Louise Lea, by which he allowed the French woman to be released from the House of the Good Shepherd and set aside the order of George Bruce Cortelyou for her deportation from this country. my profession, and was brought in many operas as a mere chorus girl. "I had a high soprano in those days. I studied under many teachers; my voice became powerful, and I soon could take the leading roles. Two years ago while in this country, I became sick with a fever, and after I was able to accept an engagement again my voice had changed. It had become a contralto. I was surprised and astonished when the manager of the opera company was started. My voice gradually became deeper and richer, and today I am a baritone. My mother could listen to me all night and not recognize her daughter's voice."

Women and children take great pleasure in hearing Miss Hayden, as well as the other star singers of the bill—Mozart, the musical genius; the two pretty Melnot Sisters; the Great Two and One-Half act, a comedy skit, and L. C. Lamar, a clever basso and monologist. There are matinees at 2:30 and 3:30; evening performances at 7, 8 and 9. The admission is 10 cents.

"Tennessee's Pardner."

Bret Harte, the author of the story from which "Tennessee's Pardner," now playing at Cortley's Theater, was without doubt one of the most gifted writers the Pacific Coast ever produced. The characters in "Tennessee's Pardner" were taken from real life. One of the principal characters died in California less than three months ago and was buried with honors by the "California Pioneer Association," many of the members attending the funeral in a body. The play is a beautiful story of the California hills, and all who have witnessed it are loud in their praise of the excellence of the production given by Mr. Alston's company.

Mason and Mason in "Rudolph and Adolph."

There is no funnier team of comedians on tour than Mason and Mason, the German Emperors, and the reception accorded them in every city visited last season was simply an ovation. Theaters were crowded everywhere, and the most enthusiastic audiences. In many instances all previous records for receipts and attendance were broken and it was the unanimous opinion of all critics in every city visited that Mason and Mason "Rudolph and Adolph" were the laughing hits of the season. They will appear at Cortley's Theater for the week commencing Sunday, November 14.

"The Prisoner of Zenda."

"The Prisoner of Zenda," which will be produced next week, beginning Sunday afternoon, by the Baker Theater Company, is one of the greatest plays on the American stage today. The royalty alone is equal to the entire receipts of some theaters, and when there is added the necessary large number of people in the cast, extra scenery, settings, etc., it makes "The Prisoner of Zenda" nearly as costly a play to put on as "The Christian" and other large first-class attractions seldom seen at other than the highest-priced theaters. Although several of these strong productions will be given from time to time during the season, the regular Baker-price will always remain the same.

Sale for Herrmann the Great.

The advance sale of seats will open tomorrow (Friday) morning at 10 o'clock for "Herrmann the Great," the most wonderful of all modern necromancers, who will appear at the Marquam Grand Theater next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, November 16, 17 and 18, with a popular price matinee Saturday at 3:15 o'clock.

Herrmann is truly a remarkable man. Without preparation he accomplishes the most astounding feats of sleight of hand ever prestidigitated. Skill, dexterity and inventive genius, these are his marked characteristics. His feats far excel in wonderful results those of all other magicians, past or present.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Judge F. D. Winton, of Astoria, is in the city.

Arthur Buckner, a mining man from Boise City, is at the Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Nichols have just returned from an extensive trip from the West.

William A. Pinkerton and his party left last night for Chicago after spending a week in the city.

C. E. Jones, a Wasco merchant, and one of the largest sheep raisers in Eastern Oregon, is a guest at the Pericles.

Archbishop Alexander Christie returned yesterday from Helena, Mont., where he officiated at the funeral of the late Bishop Brondel.

The Portland delegates to the State Irrigation Convention at Pendleton returned yesterday. They report an interesting and profitable meeting. A. H. Devera, of this city, was re-elected president of the association for the ensuing year.

Out of town residents of Oregon who are prominent in their respective communities were here in considerable numbers yesterday. Among them were: George Hanson, banker City; N. H. Carpenter and J. M. Dalton, Burns; F. L. Kent, Corvallis; Mrs. John Hayes and Frank Waltee; Henner; Captain J. J. Reynolds, Astoria; C. J. Birdsell, Hillsboro, and William Ambrose, McMinnville.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Sawyer and Mr. and Mrs. Grant Hornaday were at the Portland yesterday on their return from the Bankers' Convention at San Francisco. Mr. Sawyer is president of the First National Bank of Norton, Kan., and Mr. Hornaday is president of a banking institution at Fort Scott in the same state. Both gentlemen are also prominently identified with the politics in their state. They will go East this morning on the O. R. & N. In discussing the financial situation last evening, Mr. Sawyer said: "The consensus of opinion among the bankers who attended the con-

"The Dancing Girl."

"The Dancing Girl," which the Baker Theater Company is playing for its opening week is one of Henry Arthur Jones' best plays—a strong emotional drama dealing with one of those experiences in a woman's life that, while being a story that happens every day, yet is so set in the halo of wealth and refinement that a fascinating glamour of interest and romance is thrown about every situation. It was first produced by Blanche Bates and Frank Worthing, and was one of the big New York successes as well as the beginning of Miss Bates' career as a star. The leading role is a trying one indeed, for Miss Crawford, coming a perfect stranger in Portland, as she has for the sympathies of the audience are not with Brussels; yet, the idealist who leaves her simple home and leads a double life, but one cannot help admiring her charming appearance, and perfect artistic work for she lives the part in every line, and being unobscured by a must, make its natural finish call for that rare quality found only in the true artist.

The Baker Theater has become the home of the best plays and players that money, brains and experience can produce.

Girl Baritone Arouses Wonder.

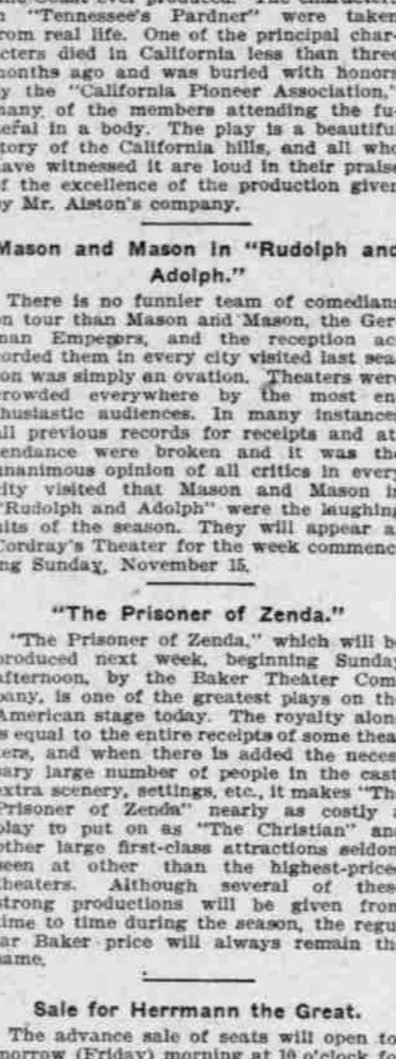

Hundreds of patrons of the Arcade Theater have heard Virginia Hayden sing in a deep baritone voice this week, and every one of them has wondered at the masculine voice of this feminine creature. One of the curious asked Miss Hayden and she said:

"You may be surprised, but when I started to sing, I had a high soprano. I was a girl's birthplace, and my mother is Evelyn Marshall, one of the leading grand opera singers on the Parisian stage; possessing a rich dramatic contralto voice. In early childhood I adopted the stage as

J. W. Bailey Will Attend Meeting to Draft Proposed Legislation.

State Food and Dairy Commissioner J. W. Bailey leaves this morning for Washington, D. C., to attend a meeting of the American Association of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations, State Universities and State Official Chemists.

Mr. Bailey is president of the National Association of State Dairy and Food Departments and has issued a call for the executive committee of that body to meet with the bodies mentioned for the purpose of preparing a National pure food bill to be presented to Congress at the coming session. Mr. Bailey thinks that the same has come when the Nation demands such a bill, and anticipates no
