Up to this point the voting of the convention had been of the unanimous order, but when the time came for selecting a candidate for the office of State Dairy and Food Commissioner, it soon became evident that there was a division of choice.

When nominations for the candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court were called for, Judge C. H. Carey, of Multnomah County, arose and offered the name of Justice F. A. Moore.

"I have not been requested to present the name of Justice Moore," said the speaker, "but I feel that it is a privilege to do so. I take pleasure in presenting his name and move that the secretary be instructed to cast the ballot of this convention for him."

NAMED IN CAUCUS

Multnomah Delegates Make Nominations.

CLELAND AND FRAZER WIN

Sanderson Reed for District Attorney, C. W. Hodson for State Senator, and George W. Holcomb, Jr., for Representative.

One ballot renominated Judge Frazer and Judge Cleland for the Circuit bench in Multnomah.

Early in the day the delegation had chosen C. H. Carey chairman. Judge Carey now took his place in front of the gathering and called the caucus to order. A. L. Mills arose. He moved that all persons but delegates be excluded from the sanctuary. Then Mr. Mills sat down. At once all strangers were objects of ocular examination. J. C. Moreland, candidate for District Attorney, was one of those who were not invited.

Clackamas delegates were not admitted to the caucus, or rather, were not invited. Consequently the patriots from those counties raised their voices last night—Multnomah was a high-handed sister, too stingy even to let them smell the pie or see it cut.

The Multnomah stalwarts held their caucus in a sequestered corner of the High School. About 3:30 o'clock the word was whispered among them and they fled out of the convention hall and up Morrison street to the schoolhouse. The stories high they climbed before they arrived at the appointed place. Meanwhile the convention was proceeding with district nominations, two blocks away.

Mr. Howell's sentiments sank deeply into the hearts of the assembled giants. Under the added weight of John Gill's advice they sank still deeper. "This meeting should be open to the press," said Gill.

By common consent long-winded speeches were tabooed. This was done because several big-eyed patriots looked as if they were wound up to nominate candidates with oratory.

Next came District Attorney. For that office Sanderson Reed was presented by A. L. Mills; J. C. Moreland by L. Kuhn; B. S. Pague, by H. Devers; C. F. Lord by F. W. Valentine, and S. H. Gruber by John Gill. L. A. McNary had pulled out and thrown his strength to Lord and Moreland.

PLANKS FOR PLATFORM.

Direct Primary Nomination Clause Left Out of Report.

All afternoon the committee on resolutions was fitting planks into the platform. When the committee had finished its handiwork the plank relating to the direct primary nomination law had been left out.

Palma Entertains Diplomats.

HAVANA, April 14.—President Palma gave a dinner to the diplomatic corps at the palace last evening. Those present included the Ministers of the United States, Germany, Great Britain, France, Spain and Mexico, with their ladies; the Charges d'Affaires of Belgium, China and Santo Domingo; Jacob Elzeper, first secretary of the United States Legation; Vice-President Esteves, the members of the Cabinet, the Supreme Court Judges, the presiding officers of both houses of Congress, and Senator Montero, Minister of Cuba to Great Britain.

NOMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR CIRCUIT JUDGESHIP AND PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS.

ships gave rise to several contests, but these took place in caucuses and added no interest to the proceedings of the convention. In every case the retiring Circuit Judges were renominated, except in the Third district, where one of the Judges is a Democrat.

In the Eighth district there was a lively contest over the nomination for Prosecuting Attorney, Leroy Lomax, of Union County, defeated F. L. Moore, of Baker. In the Ninth district J. W. McCulloch won out over William Miller by 11 votes to 5. Grant County gave the nomination to McCulloch, thus breaking the deadlock in that district.

EDDY AND BURNETT WIN.

They Are Nominated Judges in Third Judicial District.

The nomination of B. L. Eddy for Circuit Judge in the Third Judicial District was a big surprise. The nomination of George Burnett for District Attorney was predicted Wednesday evening by those who were familiar with the preferences of many of the delegates.
