This was a suit to recover a balance of $418.30 alleged to be due upon a sale of paper boxes. The defense was that the boxes were warranted to be grease-proof, but were not, and that the failure in quality could not be discovered until the boxes had been placed upon the market. As soon as it was discovered, the boxes sold were paid for and the remainder to plaintiffsy Defendant claimod $418.30 damages for breach of warranty. Judgment in the court below was for de

The plaintiff proved the sale and delivery of the goods. The defendant in-troduced evidence tending to show that a certain quality was warranted, but that the goods were not as represented. No evidence was offered to show the difference in value or damage sustained. The court was asked to instruct the jury in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount demanded, but this was refused, and the jury was instructed that if the goods were not as represented the plaintiff could not recover. This the Supreme Court holds was error.

"The defendant had a reasonable time to inspect the goods after their receipt, and if they did not correspond with those ordered, the warranty in respect thereto might have rendered that part of the contract tantamount to a condition prece-dent, thereby authorizing the defendant to repudlate its agreement. The defendant having sold a part of the boxes be vering that they were not suitable for the purpose for which they were intended, thereby accepted them, and was $45.
