ASSISTANT ASSESSOR APPOINTED.-At a representative mass meeting of the tax-payers of Milwaukle precinct last night in Woodmen of the World hall steps were taken to secure equal assessment of p erty there, and Richard Scott was ele assistant assessor for the precinct, sub-ject to appointment by Assessor James Nelson, of Clackamas County. H. The-sen was chosen chairman and J. W. Gras-ley secretary of the meeting. This meeting was called to appoint an assistant as sessor, a man familiar with property valu-ations and conditions, to assist the regu-lar assessor. For a number of years there has been complaint from the taxpayers of the Milwaukie precinct that the prop-erty had been assessed too high, and moreover had been unequally assessed. Last year a delegation went to Oregon

City to ask for justice, but was turn down by the County Court. William Schindler, H. Thessen and Richard Scott called attention to the unequal sessment of Milwaukie property, and declared that it should be reduced om 10 to 25 per cent. Attention was called to acreage in Milwaukie assessed at $104 per acre while land just as good

WHY SHLLWOOD LOST WOOLEN MILLS. Sellwood and Willsburg people attribute the loss of the Portland Woolen Mills to that place to the refusal of the owners to sell 20 acres, comprising that part occupied by the dam on Johnson Creek. The company before the plant was destroyed by fire was greatly hampered by lack of water, on account of the dam at the head of the flume being too low to hold all the water in Johnson Creek, and the management tried to purchase enough of the land so the dam could be raised, but could not do so. After the plant was burned, says a resident, the company sent agents to the owner with an offer of $7000 for the entire tract, but this was refused which made it impossible to increase the water supply. D. M. Donaugh, president of the Seliwood Board of Trade, expresses the opinion that if the mill company had been able to purchase the 20-acre tract the plant would not have been located at St. Johns. Sellwood continues to grow, in spite of her loss. Houses are going up every direction. The woolen mill company still has a large investment in the way of an extensive flume, valuable riparian rights and lands and sidetracks. W. P. Olds said the site will probably not remain vacant long.

HISTORICAL EXERCISES AT CHAMPORG. Next Monday will mark the fist anniver-sary of the Oregon Provisional Government. In memory of the historical event, exercises will be held on that day at Champoeg, when the Government was established, May 2, 1843. F. X. Matthieu Cabin, Native Sons of Oregon, will con-duct the ceremonies. Ex-Governor T. T. Geer will preside and William Galloway, of McMinnville, will deliver the chief ad-dress. Champoeg is 27 miles south of Portland on the Willamette River. Many persons will go thither from this city by steamboats, which will leave early in the morning. Three years ago a monument was raised to mark the spot where the stirring scene of pioneer life had been

TELEPHONE THIEVES IN JAIL.-After baffling all efforts to capture them for several weeks, the telephone thieves are at last in Jail. Detectives Snow and Kerri-gan took up the case a few days ago and landed their men early yesterday morn-ing. The captives are Harry Volker and Albert Gammon, two distressed-looking vagabonds who came here recently from California. There is no doubt of their guilt, as skeleton keys and an abundance of the paraphernalia needed in opening telephone boxes were found in their posnession when they were caught in their room at First and Jefferson streets. Dur-ing the past three weeks the pair have sacked a dozen phone slots and have se-cured about $50 in nickels for their trou-

Enough flowers were handed over the cotlights at the Marquam last night to upply a church wedding. The actors, singly and collectively, were given an vation by an audience which was only imited by the capacity of the house. The ouquets and the ovation were deserved, for the Multnomah Club's amateurs in "The Ameer" were completely successful. They realized the most sanguine expectaions of their friends. The principals and chorus sang well, the comedians were funny, the dancing and drills were good and the costumes attractive. show went remarkably smoothly for a first night and the men who direct ed it may take much credit to them-selves. A comparatively short time has been spent in rehearsing, but with the exception of unimportant hitches it moved along as if in the hands of professionals It is doubtful if the Frank Daniel's pro duction of "The Ameer" ever got more real fun out of it, for the local jokes and the well-known men in the cast were the chief inducement in drawing the peo ple and amusing them after they can Bob McCraken and his legs were much at home in the part of life Kahn, of Afghanistan, and a jolly old potentate he was. The audience laughed at him and with him from the moment he ap-peared until the last curtain ended his nirth-provoking reign. Portland will be talking about George Eastman's Heezaburd for many days. There are a lot of professional comedians who might learn the gentle art of being funny from him. He's decidedly clever and made the hit of his life as the lord high

The best amateur female impersonator who ever appeared here was the general verdict of Edwin Hobson's work as Constance. He sang after the most approved donna fashion and looked the medi cated blonde young lady so perfectly that his name only betrayed him. Hobson has a fine stage presence. He knows how to handle skirts and walks like Stuart McGuire, who was the brigand chief, has the best voice in the company. His solos were enthusiastically received and his recalls were numerous.

Lincoln Hart made a fine impression as the jester. He sang and acted well. Ross Fargo was a handsome captain of the guard, and Louis Bruce made Mizrah, a lovelorn damsel of uncertain years, one of the best parts in the burlesque. Sam Jordan as Fannie did creditably, and H. J. Gaylord appeared to advantage in a female role. in a female role.

A large, well-trained chorus of good voices contributed greatly to the success of the show. The juvenile members of it came in for much-deserved applause, and the dancing "girls" were graceful and agile. The military drill by the guards was a fine spectacle The gentlemen who had charge of the production were W. H. Boyer, musical director; William Bernard, stage director, and Robert Krohn, director of the ballet. There was an enlarged orchestra and spe-

The most ambitious effort so far of the Olympia Opera Company during its present visit at Cordray's Theater was its presentation last night of Auber's pleasing opera, "Fra Diavolo." The offering approaches the region of grand opera and It received a most satisfactory presentation at the hands of the Olympians. One of the vocal gems which received two encores is an interpolated number, the famous sextette from Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," sung by Misses Jenkins and Barker, and E. F. Seamans. J. E. Young, Carrick Major and R. G. Pitkin. This was sung with inspiring dramatic force and feeling, and the rich harmony was very well brought out.
Miss Jenkins took the difficult soprano role and more than pleased with her finished vocalization. She was Zerlina. daughter of Mattee, the innkeeper, and gave a delicate, refined portrayal of that pure-minded village maiden. Mr. Seamans played the principal role of Fra Diavolo, the robber chief, and looked and sang the part well. He made an impressive brigand, and in the death scene, where he is shot walle attempting to escape as he dashes down a cliff, he was strikingly realistic. John E. Young and Joseph Alexander made hits respectively as the two robber assistants to Fra Diavolo, and kept up the comedy end. Carrick Major sang magnificently as Lorenzo, and or sang magnificently as Lorenzo, and Nina Seamans made a charming Francessa.
