SEATTLE, Wash., May 16 .- (Special.)-It will be decided definitely within the ext four days whether D. E. Dugdale, formerly owner and manager of the Sent-tle Baseball Club, is to be in full control of the Portland team.

Despite the fact that the Portland dictors deny it and Dugdale absolutely efuses to discuss the matter it can be tated emphatically that negotiations are nding for the transfer of the manageent, and perhaps, an interest in the Portland franchise to Dugdale.

Tonight Dugdale returned from Portand where he went very quietly last mday. He kept out of the way in this city as successfully as he did in Portand, but was found at his home in Dunap. He could not deny that he had been to Portland, and had met the directors of ugdale was not enthusiastic over the oposition, because the club is low down the race, and he realizes that to build up he will have a very difficult task will have to take a lot of old players d go through the work that should be done prior to the opening of the season.

This and the fact that he likes to live in Scattle explains why Dugdale was not erly anxious to jump at the proposi-in. Several programmes were brought o for discussion, and it is up to the ortland Club to decide the question e time this week. Dugdale Sees Local Stockholders, but Keeps Mission Secret.

D. E. Dugdale, of Seattle, once more ns upon the baseball horizon. Dugdale rrived in Portland yesterday mmorning, ras seen on the streets by a number of sople and then disappeared. His mison to Portland was baseball, this much s a positive fact, but whom he saw and what may become of his hurried trip is shrouded in a mystery. Dugdale admitted to several of his riends that he came to look over the ical baseball situation. It is not known whether he came on an invitation, or hether he had grown restless as a bloken farmer and is once more about to naswer the call of the diamond. The fat seattle mogul saw some of the present stockholders of the club—this is just as ure as there is to be a June election.

Mrs. Ben Ely, answering the telephone for her husband, stated positively that neither er husband nor Fred Elv had seen or had been in consultation with Dugdale Mrs. Ely said that they did not even know that Dugdale had been in town. When it became noised around-and the news spread over fandom like wild-fire-that Dug was in town, a number of fans searched the town over in hopes of find-ing him. But whoever had him in tow kept him out of sight until train time. He was seen, however, talked with and ad-mitted that he was in Portland to talk ascball business. He would not state that his visit had accomplished. Dugdale's silence was the same high
