HE BROODED ON HAMLET

THE CAUSE OF SALO'S SUICIDE FOUND IN HIS POCKET.

A Mad Prince's Famous Sollioquy Voiced the Sorrows of Disappointed Finnish Socialist.

No more; and, by a sleep, to say we end The heartsche, and the thousand natural shocks

That fiesh is helr to-'tis a consummation Devoutly to be wish'd. To die:-to sleep:-To sleep! perchance to dream: sy, there's in that sleep of death, what dreams When we have shuffled off this mortal coil.

Brooding over Shakespeare's famous so-illoguy and finding no relief from "the whips and scorns of time," and "the op-pressor's wrong" at the Socialist colony on Puget Sound were undoubtedly the cause of Karl Salo's taking a trip Satur-day morning to "the undiscovered coun-try, from whose hours no traveler retry, from whose bourn no traveler re

At 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning Salo jumped into the Williamette from the top deck of the Steel Bridge, and, refusing to grasp a rope thrown directly across his body to rescue him, succeeded in endin his life. Hugh Brady, the diver, recovered the body Saturday evening, and search of the dead man's clothing brough to light a manuscript written in Finnish Coroner J. P. Finley was unable to translate the verse, but Mrs. A. C. Bock, at whose lodging-house at 166 North Eighteenth street, Salo had been living, translated to the Coroner the above portion of Hamlet's soliloguy from Shake-life after broouing over the famous lines. Friends who had associated with him of late say he appeared very despondent. He came here from the Socialist Colony on Puget Sound, having falled to find at that place relief from "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune." A short time ago he lost his job at the Eastern & Western lumber mill, and at the time of his death had no money. He was a member of the Portland Laboring Man's Union. He has a brother in Hoquiam, whom Coroner Finley has notified of his death and the body will be held at the morgue until the brother arrives.

DOLLS FOR PRINCESSES.

Wonderful Gifts for the Baby Yolanda of Italy.

Paris Correspondent London Truth. Since last October a maker of dolls' furniture has been busy executing an order from M. Loubet. The articles or dered were submitted to him and the pres idente on their return the other day from Mazenc, their place in the Drome, and met with their fullest approbation. They are for the youthful daughters of the King and Queen of Italy. The Princess Yolanda is to receive an ancient Rouen dining-room in carved oak, old, hardgrained, and exquisitely carved with a projecting mantel over the wide fireplace. The tables, chairs, and bahuts are of the same period (early fifteenth century as the room, and not less finely carved One of the bahuts-or massive diningroom presses, that in the olden time preded the buffet-is filled with table in en tankards, and ewers in ediyer, and few knives and two-pronged forks, which began to creep into France from Milan and Venice in the time of Valen Visconti, Duchess of Orleans Knights then cut their food with dag-gers, and if they dined in the company of ladies, cut theirs also to oblige them, and they used bread to sop up grave and take up bits of meat to the mouth Table napkins, in strong linen, resembling fine canvas, have openwork hems. The delft dinner service is imitated from the old Rouen at the Ciuny Museum. Red roses that would bear examination under the magnifying glass form the principal decoration. By the way, did the rose of the house of Lancaster come, not from the Temple Garden, but from Normandy? The Orient window of the toy diningroom is in colored glass, and is a poem The Princess Yolanda, a bright, preco-cious, complex little being who lays dow

the law to her father, will be pleased at this present. The Anjou Princess, after whom she is called, married a Duke of Savoy in the period the Rouen diningroom represents. The gift for the Prin-cess Mafaida—a thorough Savoy Caris-nan, to judge from the photo just sent to M. and Mme. Loubet by the French district. She rides to market on a care fully made horse on wheels, and sits be-hind panniers filled with all sorts of toys. Mme. Loubet, in her fear the baby princess might swallow some apples on a branch, had them taken out, and begged M. Loubet to warn the governess not to let her put them in her mouth.
