FILE NOTICE OF APPEAL

DEFENDANTS IN MARQUAM CASE NOT THROUGH FIGHTING.

Attorneys for Title Guarantee and Trust Company Carry Suit to the Supreme Court.

Another step towards the appeal to be heard before the Supreme Court of Oregon in the suit started by P. A. Marquam against the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, the Title Guarantee and Trust Company and others, was taken yesterday in the Circuit Court when Wallace McCamant, attorney for one of the defendants, filed a notice of appeal and bond. He also filed a number of affidavits, moving the court for this order:

First—Numbering and identifying the three exhibits offered by the defendants which are not numbered and identified in the record and which are described in the affidivit of Wallace McCamant.

Second—Authorizing the substitution of a carbon copy for the lost original of defendants' exhibit No. 56.

Third—Directing the transaction by the Clerk of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for the County of Multnomah to the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the original judgment roll in the case of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company against P. A. Marquam et al.

This is the text of the notice of appeal and bond filed:

Whereas, the defendants, the United States Mortgage & Trust Company, the Title Guarantee & Trust Company, Oregon Company and J. Thorburn Ross, have taken their appeal from a decree rendered and entered in the above entitled court and cause on the 4th day of August, 1904, wherein and whereby it is adjudged that the defendants, the Title Guarantee & Trust Company, Oregon Company and J. Thorburn Ross, are trustees for plaintiff in the holding of the title to certain real property in the said decree specifically and at large set forth; and,

Whereas, in and by said decree judgment is given in favor of plaintiff and against the said defendants and appellants for the costs and disbursements of this suit.

Now, therefore, in consideration of the said appeal, we, the undersigned, the United States Mortgage & Trust Company, the Title Guarantee & Trust Company, Oregon Company and J. Thorburn Ross, defendants and appellants aforesaid, and the American Surety Company, of New York, as surety, do jointly and severally undertake and promise that the said defendants and appellants will pay all damages, costs and disbursements which may be awarded against them on the appeal, and inasmuch as appellants are desirous of staying execution and proceedings upon the said decree, the said appellants and their surety as aforesaid do jointly and severally promise and undertake that, if the said decree be affirmed, the appellants will pay the said costs taxed in this court against them, and in favor of the plaintiff as aforesaid.

UNITED STATES MORTGAGE & TRUST COMPANY, by Snow & McCamant, its attorneys.

THE TITLE GUARANTEE & TRUST COMPANY, by T. T. Burkhart, its secretary.

OREGON COMPANY, by John K. Kollock, its secretary.

J. THORBURN ROSS, American Surety Company, of New York, by R. L. Durham, resident vice-president. Attest: Robert T. Platt, resident assistant secretary.

CHILD MAY NOT BE DEAD.

Mother Does Not Believe Divorced Husband's Story.

Although it is impossible to tell whether one kidnaped child of the marriage is alive or dead, a decree of divorce was granted in the case of Mrs. Sarah M. Boyer against her husband, Benjamin F. Boyer, now a resident of Glen Rock, Wyo., on a charge of cruel and inhuman treatment. The parties in the suit were married in Nebraska in June, 1895, and Boyer deserted his wife in November, 1900. One interesting point in the evidence is that Mrs. Boyer does not know whether her infant son, Lloyd B. Boyer, is living or dead. All she does know is that the child was kidnaped by her husband, who afterward told her that the little boy had died suddenly.

"In August, 1898, my husband choked me until I was nearly insensible and on another occasion he struck me with a heavy rope," proceeded Mrs. Boyer in giving evidence. "He often called me vile names, and during the time he lived with me, although he was capable of supporting his family, he spent most of his time in loafing, gambling and carousing, compelling me to work to support him, myself and our child."

A deposition was read from Mrs. Minnie Rivers, Deuel County, Nebraska, stating in part: "The child, Lloyd B. Boyer, was in my care when he was kidnaped by his father. The latter told me he would take the child to a place where the mother would never find it, and Mr. Boyer lately intimated that the child was dead. Afterward he told me that the child was still living. I asked him if the child were really dead. His answer was: 'Anyway, it is in good hands, where she won't be able to find it.'"

EXAMINER WILL NOT RETIRE.

Dr. R. L. Lincoln Alleges His Appointment Is Valid.

Dr. R. L. Lincoln fires a broadside into the State Board of Dental Examiners, who wish him ousted from that body, in an answer he has just filed in the Circuit Court. He asserts that his appointment as a member of the board by Governor Chamberlain was valid, and that he took his oath of office and received his commission last April. He says in answer to the suit brought by Dr. Mark Hayter, president of the State Board, and Dr. E. G. Clark, the secretary, that they have neglected to perform their duties as required by law, and that the suit ought to be dismissed. The answer goes over the old ground that the law made it obligatory upon the association to meet in 1903 and select three names of dentists, from which list the Governor would choose members of the State Board, that the association failed to do this, and that the executive committee of the association usurped the rights of the main body in naming three dentists for appointment.

SIGNED BLANK PAPER.

Partner in Manufacturing Business Regrets His Action.

A receiver to wind up the business affairs of the Portland Steel Vault Manufacturing Company, 43 North Front street, is asked for in a complaint filed yesterday in the Circuit Court by L. Neischl against W. W. Waite, copartners in the concern. Mr. Neischl says that the capital stock of the company is $5000 and that it was organized to make steel document files, vault doors, steel dies and art metal work in brass and iron. But the trouble began when Mr. Waite began to neglect the business and secured last June the plaintiff's signature to a blank piece of paper which was afterward altered to make it read as a bill of sale merging all rights in the business in favor of Waite. It is also charged that Waite is trying to sell the business and refuses to dispose of his share.

May Have to Support Child.

Attorney George S. Shepherd appeared before Judge Sears yesterday and filed a petition to modify a decree of divorce granted in the suit begun by Mrs. Lois J. West against Attice W. West, in so far as alimony is concerned. The defendant was ordered to pay $1 per month toward the support and education of his infant child, Elizabeth West, and to pay the attorney's fee, but failed so to do. Now an order has been granted by the court commanding the defendant to appear August 15 to show cause why he should not pay $20 per month toward his child's support.

Court Notes.

Judge George gave a judgment order yesterday in the case where Rothchild Brothers sued B. F. Shambrook to recover $1441, directing that the property of the defendant, who is not now a resident of this state, be attached and the proceeds of the sale applied to pay the debts.

Attorney J. C. Morpland filed an answer yesterday in the Circuit Court in the suit brought by Orville Jennings against Helen C. Jennings, to strike out certain parts of the reply made by the plaintiff. Mr. Moreland denies that he manufactured evidence for his client, after the suit was filed.

Twenty-three years ago Mrs. L. M. F. Benedict and her husband, L. W. Benedict, were married. Yesterday she entered a suit for divorce against him in the Circuit Court, alleging cruel treatment. The couple have several children, but the only one under age is Wesley Harrison Benedict, of whom the mother asks the custody.

A wordy dispute as to the title of lots 1 and 2 of block B and lots 3, 4, 5 and 6 of block C in Martin's Addition occurs in a complaint filed yesterday in the Circuit Court by Bertha M. Hosford against Multnomah County. The charge is made that the county illegally demanded payment of taxes on the property and tried to sell it on several occasions. An order is now asked to enjoin the defendant from attempting to sell the property for taxes during the pendency of the action.

An injunction is asked to restrain the Sheriff of Multnomah County from selling lots 2 and 3 in block 2 of Portland Homestead in a complaint filed yesterday in the Circuit Court by the Portland Trust Company of Oregon. The latter asserts it is the owner in fee simple of the property in virtue of a mortgage executed in its favor in August, 1892, by the then owners, Maria dos Reis Habersham and her husband, to secure a loan of $7000 advanced by the plaintiff. The property was afterwards sold, it is asserted, without sufficient publication, by the county for nonpayment of taxes.

RUSSIAN RETREAT STUBBORN

Action at Mo Tien Pass Was During a Fearfully Hot Day.

GENERAL KUROKI'S HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD, July 15, via Seoul (Delayed in Transmission), Aug. 5.—From later information, yesterday's engagement proves to have been more general and more important than could be appreciated by observers at Mo Tien Pass, whose vision of the field was bounded by high hills guarding both sides, and whose reports were written before the Japanese pursuit of the Russians down the valley was ended.

Today it is impossible to describe accurately some of the most important features of the fight because the number of the Russian troops engaged can only be estimated from the regimental insignia on their uniforms and the conflicting stories told by prisoners, while censorship prevents giving the number of organizations present on the Japanese side. It is believed that seven Russian regiments participated in the battle, to which were opposed at the most one brigade with one or more additional battalions of Japanese troops.

The hardest fighting was done to the right of Mo Tien Pass, that valley approaching the Japanese line of defenses which lay between high wooded hills.

A Russian contingent, consisting of a regiment or more attempted by advancing through the valley to gain the Japanese position by a flanking movement or from behind the pass, but was repulsed after an action lasting until sunset, when the Japanese troops abandoned pursuit, and the Russians, who stubbornly contested the ground as they were forced back, marched away toward the town of Gabato. One Japanese company lost all of its officers in this action, and a Sergeant-Major was finally in command.

The expulsion of the Russian troops from the valley leading to Mo Tien Pass was greatly assisted by a Japanese force consisting of a battalion of infantry and several guns sent from a Japanese brigade stationed on the left of Mofantry Valley, which attacked the Russians on their flank, menacing their rear and line of retreat.

On the morning of July 17, the Japanese outpost line protecting Mo Tien Pass was entrenched on the lower ridge, where the fight occurred on July 4, with a few pickets stationed ahead. Major-General Okasaki, expecting an attack, had ordered the outposts, if confronted by a superior force, to withdraw to the main line of defense on the highest ridge, where the pass was narrowest. The outposts discovered a company of cavalry and a large body of infantry advancing in the darkness at about 2:30 A. M., and retired according to instructions.

When firing began, about 5 A. M., the Russian line, facing the Japanese trenches, was more than a mile and a quarter long. They occupied Tempio and the road leading directly right to Mo Tien Pass, the road being nearly parallel with the Japanese position for a few hundred yards, with a deep chasm a quarter of a mile across at the widest, separating the two forces; also a wooded hillside in front of the Pass.

The firing along this line was severe for more than four hours, comparatively few Japanese being hit. The Russians were unable to employ artillery here, although they were using a battery in another fight on the right, and afterwards in the valley during the retreat they fired a few shots.

The fog lifting at 7 A. M. enabled a Japanese battery stationed on a height to rake the attacking force effectually. The Russians later began to retreat when the Japanese threatened their road of retirement, which was still further endangered by the advance of another detachment of Japanese on their left.

The Russian officers had collected their companies for retreat in close formation, as usual, making them splendid targets, their dark coats forming huge blots against the brilliant green shrubbery. Several shells burst among the retreating troops, scattering them into temporary confusion, and as the Japanese from their trenches saw a dozen men mowed down by a single shell, they stopped shooting and loudly shouted, "Banzai."

From 10 A. M. till noon, the Russians slowly and doggedly retreated down the valley, gathered in close, solid bodies with rear guards deploying to cover their retirement. The shrubbery was so dense with frequent clumps of trees to furnish cover that rapid pursuit was impossible. No matter how sorely pressed, the Russians maintained their formation with admirable discipline.

Some prisoners taken say that it being the anniversary of the taking of Schiweka Pass, and a lucky day in the Russian calendar, the soldiers had entered the fight in the highest spirits, confident of victory, and as European troops determined to prove their mettle.

It was evident that the Russians expected to occupy the pass, because they had struck their tents and packed all their camp equipment in wagons, long trains of which followed the army.

Yesterday was intensely hot, and the wounded of both armies suffered fearfully lying in the sandy cornfields beneath the blazing sun. Many of them spent the night undiscovered and unaided in the woods or underbrush, and the work of searching for them continues today. Burial detachments are yet busy and wounded men are still arriving at the hospitals. Comparatively few unwounded prisoners were taken by the Japanese, and many Russians were rescued by their own forces, whose white-covered ambulance wagons could be seen hurrying about within their lines all day.

Tonight the Russian camps are visible from Mo Tien Pass, and the Japanese troops have undisputed possession of the valley.

STAND LITTLE SHOW.

Inexperienced Purchasers Will Not Profit by Grand Ronde Opening.

SALEM, Aug. 4.—(Special.)—"The ordinary person, that is, one who has no knowledge of the value of land or the timber that is upon it by merely viewing it, will find it a difficult matter to locate a desirable tract of land on the Grand Ronde reservation and be able to submit a reasonable bid upon it," said State Land Agent Oswald West this afternoon, having just returned from a visit to the Grand Ronde reserve, bids for the sale of the surplus of which over and above the allotments to the Indians, aggregating about 25,000 acres, will be opened in the Government Land Office at Oregon City next Monday.

"Yes, hundreds of people are rushing over there to view the advertised land and it is interesting and sometimes amusing to observe the actions of the majority of them. They drive hastily up to the agency and inform the Indian agent that they have called to see the land that is to be sold, and ask of him where it is located. The agent smiles and usually remarks: 'Well, there is some of it over there,' with a sweep of his hand in one direction, 'and some over there,' making a similar gesture in the opposite direction. The prospective speculator looks in the directions indicated, taking a general survey, but all that he is able to see is mountains, high and rugged, on all sides, sometimes barren, and occasionally dotted with patches of timber. Some of the visitors go a little further by taking a drive over portions of the domain, where admissable, but the great majority of them, after looking a good, long look, climb into their vehicles and start homeward. It is safe to guess that none of these people will venture to submit a bid at any price.

"Those who are familiar with the means of making selections of land upon an occasion of this kind, have every advantage in the world, for, having the means also, the timber-land speculator hires a cruiser to go over the entire reservation and locate the tracts containing the best of the timber and is prepared to offer his bids intelligently, and it is safe to say that the man who buys the land over the speculator's head, will pay all that it is worth and more, too, perhaps.

"The land is all rough and the north half of the reservation has been burned over. It is covered with a heavy growth of salal brush and is good for nothing except grazing, while the south half carries a heavy growth of green timber, the best of which is located in the southwest corner. This portion of the reservation has been thoroughly cruised over and the timber speculators are prepared to bid up to the limit upon it, so you see there is very little chance for the ordinary prospective buyer."

A "PLAGUE" OF PIGEONS.

The 4000 Birds That Haunt the City of London Buildings.

(London Chronicle.)

There is a legend extant in one of the Inns of Court that many years ago two young barristers, who afterward attained fame and even judicial office at one lean time, before briefs came, lived mainly upon pigeons, which they snared at night within the precincts of the inn. One of them may have been the Judge who, until he retired from the bench, always kept in his room at the courts a bag of seed with which he fed the attendant birds—a kind of penance perhaps for youthful misdemeanors.

Were furtive stewed pigeons a diet in common favor with impecunious juniors, Dr. Collingridge, who periodically makes our flesh creep by the discovery of some new danger to health, might not have found it necessary to embark upon a crusade against the pigeons of the city. The medical officer estimates that within the limits of the corporation area there are 4000 of these birds. Some may be inclined to scoff at the pretentious accuracy of this figure. But it is not at all a difficult thing to take a census of pigeons if one gives one's mind to it, as Dr. Collingridge apparently has; for, though they are nominally ownerless and homeless, they all have their particular roosting places, from which they can only be evicted by its destruction.

The habit indeed seems to be at the root of Dr. Collingridge's complaint against them, because, owing to the demolition of various city churches, some of the birds in recent years have had to seek refuge in other buildings, and have chosen private premises, whose owners do not reciprocate this mark of confidence. Presumably, there is no fault to be found with the flocks which inhabit St. Paul's, the Guildhall and the Tower. St. Paul's without its pigeons would be almost as unthinkable as St. Mark's without its kindred flocks. And the birds have doubtless sought sanctuary at the cathedral of the capital ever since there was a cathedral. In the earliest known view of London, drawn by Van der Wyngarde, for Philip of Spain, in 1540, seven birds, presumably pigeons, are grouped round the spire of old St. Paul's. This may or may not have been the poetic fancy of the artist; but it is certain that directly Wren's great building dominated the city birds began to make it their home.

The pigeons of the cathedral at the present day offer an interesting study to the naturalist. There are two distinct colonies of them—the one on the east and the other on the west, "and never the twain shall meet." As far as observation goes they are as well defined and separate as the two Houses of Convocation, and if a member of one were to stray into the other he would meet with a very unchristian reception. They may meet in the common foraging ground of the churchyard, where, apart from the contributions of the public who gather there during the dinner hour, there are generally casual contributions to be picked up from the horses' nosebags, but the building itself is well delimited. Nor is it at all likely that a pigeon from the Guildhall or the Tower would be welcomed as a recruit to either chapter. Greater hospitality might be accorded to a stray immigrant with good credentials. For it is quite certain that the pigeons of the metropolis both in and outside the city—apart from the few wood pigeons who make their home in one of the parks or on the embankment during the Summer—are "homers" or the descendants of "homers."

A suggestion may be offered with diffidence to Dr. Collingridge. Harting, in his "Birds of Middlesex," which is to be found in the Guildhall Library, records that a pair of peregrine falcons for many years frequented the top of St. Paul's, where it was supposed they had a nest, and he adds, "a gentleman with whom I am acquainted has assured me that a friend of his once saw a peregrine strike down a pigeon in London." This is evidence that would, perhaps, not be accepted in a court of law, but at any rate the peregrine falcon might, as a last resort, be encouraged to return to St. Paul's in order to prey on the pigeons.

It may be hoped, at all events, that the city fathers will not allow the impression to get aboard that a city pigeon is an outlaw which anyone may pluck, for office boys are sufficiently numerous and pigeons sufficiently tame to make the absorption of the latter by the former only a matter of time in these circumstances. And the city without its pigeons would be a good deal less picturesque than it is now.

EXCURSION RATES.
