THE LARGEST CARP ON RECORD .- The theory that fish transplatited from the streams of the East to the broad waters resurfaced and put in good order. This of the Columbia grow and expand to a magnitude they never attain in the East, time and now a gang of pipe-layers in the is likely to be proved correct. Mention was made a few days ago of a black bass caught in Columbia Slough which was in inches in length and weighed seven pounds. This, old bass fishermen say, is larger than any ever caught in the East. Now comes the largest carp on record. It was caught off the wharf at the foot of this street restance and the street look as it did before it was torn up and there will be a depression the East. Now comes the largest carp on record. It was caught off the wharf at the foot of Alder street yesterday, and weighed 27 pounds. Two boys were seen toting it up the street on a stick, to which it was attached in the usual manner, by a string made fast to the big spine on the back fin. They were offering it for sale to all they met, and several Chinese and a market man who had no use for it except as a show, were bid-ding for it. The price was run up to 40 cents, which was hid by a Chinaman, and as no effort could secure another 5 cents, it was knocked down to him. Duck hunt-ers and fishermen all despise the carp, say that the black bass will soon him them out, but as they are very pro-uctive, this remains to be seen. A whitewash man who happened along when this big carp was sold, remarked that they were not so bad eating as many suppose. He said he had his brains near-ly knocked out by one a week ago, and had a chunk of it for his dinner. He was whitewashing a barn for a farmer down near Holbrook, when a blue crane came flying over with a carp in its bill on its way to its nest to feed added that after the Lake Washington its young. A boy took a crack at the bird with a toy gun, and it dropped the carp, striking the whitewasher on the side of the head and knocking the bucket of wash out of his hand. He said he was mighty glad the fish did not weigh I pounds, or he would have been done for.

SLEEP FLEES BEFORE & HOWLING DOG .-Mention was made yesterday of a number of sleep-destroying nuisances of which there is much complaint. The worst of the kind, worse even than the bandsman who practices on the cornet, came to light yesterday morning and is a genuine case of crueity to animals, but human and ca-nine, and has so destroyed the slumbers of a neighborhood as to affect their health and call for the action of the Health Department. It appears that the owner of a ferocious buildog and his wife as well have been stricken with fever and are in a ospital. Their residence, at the end of Third street on Marquam Gulch, is vacant and the buildog has been left chained on the premises and is not provided with sufficient food or water. A relative of the dog's owner calls to see him occasionally, but the brute is nearly starved and howls day and night. The residents on both sides of the guich have made formal complaint and yesterday morning Health Inspector Beutelspacher went out to investigate the case. He was sorry he had not taken his fundgating medicine along so that he could have asphyriated the dog and put an end to the troubles of the dog and the and end to the troubles of the dog and the neighbors, but he caught the relative there and gave him a piece of his mind and ordered the dog removed. Few appear to know that a howing dog is a health-de-stroying nuisance under the ban of the law or more such peaks would be removed.

Busy Our or Orrich.-"There is no rest for the wicked," said W. B. Chase, ex-City Engineer, yesterday. After two months of steady work in the field he is BODY OF BRUGGER FOUND making a short stay in Portland and en-joying seeing old friends. "I have been kupt on the go steadily ever since I was out of office," said he, "and have not even had time to inquire into the political situation. First I went over to South Bend, Wash., and surveyed and located s district sewer for that town, which is making rapid strides of progress. Then I went up in the Molalia country and as chief engineer of the Electric Light & Power Company surveyed a canal line from a point on the Molalia River six miles from the mouth through a rich agricultural region to the Williamette River. The canni has a fall of about 100 feet in the six miles and an electrical power sta-

Next I went up to Bend, on the Des-chutes River, and made preliminary sur-veys and computations of the cost of works for supplying that town with a system of waterworks." Mr Chase also has charge of the proposed Tillamook waterworks, and has made surveys and propaged estimates of the set of the prepared estimates of the cost of the

IMPROVE STREETS, THEN LAT PIPES The property-owners on Sherman street west of Second street have lately gone to the extreme of having that thoroughfare employ of the gas company has put in an appearance and has dug a trench along the north side of the street between there and the large pieces of crushed rock will be on the surface and the benefit of the improvements made by the propertyowners will be nullified. Some of them wonder why the gas pipes could not have been laid before the street was surfaced, but are told that this is one of the things which no one can find out and that this style of doing things is the usual one here. If property-owners are anxious to get gas or water pipes laid in a street or a newer constructed there, they will find that the quickest way to secure these im-provements is to make a costly improvement on the street. MISSING HIGH SCHOOL TEACHER HAD BEEN DROWNED.

While Fording Lewis River, Portland Instructor Met Death-Funeral Will Be Held Today.

Just two weeks and one day after the disappearance of Theophil Brugger, an in-structor of the Portiand High School, who structor of the Forthand High School, who started on horseback from Greeham to visit a brother near Woodland, Wash., and never reached his destination, his body was discovered in the waters of the Lewis River by an Indian. The Indian found the body just about daylight Wednesday morning floating near the bank. It was morning, floating near the bank, it was easily recognized and was immediately taken charge of by relatives.

Searching parties had been dragging the Lewis River and scouring the woods in every direction in that locality since the failure of Professor Brugger to reach his brother's home at the appointed time. his brother's home at the appointed time, and the return of his horse the following morning. This naturally led to the be-lief that he had been browned, and the fact that the horse's forefeet were tangied in his reins made it seem reasonable to believe that the animal had pitched for-ward into a hole in the river bed, thus entangling himself and throwing his unfortunate rider into the current. Pro-fessor Brugger could not swim. He be-gan taking lessons at the Y. M. C. A. last Winter, but did not persevere until he had mastered the art, and this may have cost him his life. It is possible, however, that his head may have been struck in the fail, rendering him unconscious. The last person to see Professor Brug ger was a white man whom he met in the vicinity of the river on the trail. He stopped and asked this man how the ford across the river was. He was told that it was just about as it always was, and lived on the other bank of the river to come and conduct him across. The Indian did not come out, so he tried

"Captain Lettarblair."

Pretty stage pictures make the Colum-bia's production of "Captain Lettarbiair" notable. The cleverness of the lines causes notable. The cleverness of the lines causes ripples and roars of laughter. Mr. Dills has an admirable part as Dean Ambrose, and this popular comedian is acting at his best. Mr. Baume, as Captain Lettar-bleir, has many fine lines, and his mas-tery of the Irish brogue is delicious, and not the exaggerated dialect which so oft-en proves offensive. From the moment Miss Countiss appears in a riding habit in the first act she receives round after in the first act she receives round after round of applause, and she acts the part of the capricious Fanny Hadden with of the capitolus rainy range with daz-sie the feminine portion of every audi-ence. The auditorium presents a bril-liant spectacle, the handsome decorations being particularly attractive under the soft light of the electric chandellers.

with the matinee performance, Melbourne MacDowell will give "Gismonda" at the Baker for the first time in the history Baker for the first time in the history of Portland at Baker prices. "Gismonda" will be one of the features of the cur-rent theatrical season, for an especially elaborate scenic production will be given of this immense Bardou drama. The play will be offered in a style and effective-ness never before attempted in the Pa-cific Northwest. The Sardou plays re-quire better scenery than the ordinary clife Northwest. The Sardou plays re-quire better scenery than the ordinary parior play or light comedy, and the Ba-ker Theater is providing the dramas with a mounting in harmony with the merit of their famous pieces. Scenic artists have been at work for days pre-paring for "Gismonda." and something out of the crimerer is promised

New Melodrama at Cordray's. "On the Bridge at Midnight," a new $10,-000 melodrama, opens a week's engagement at Cordray's Theater with the Sunday matinee. This thrilling play has done capacity business throughout the country and comes to Portland with a splendid reputation. It is clever, thrill-ing and while full of dramatic interest, is permeated throughout with a broad human humor that proves a welcome relief to the intense situations of peril and agony which greet the hero and heroine in their struggle through danger and mis-fortune. Manager George Klimt, who has invested $10,000 in this production, has selected his company with great care, and he promises the people of Portland a production that will not fail to please in every respect. Wit takes two carloads of special scenery, all of which the company carries, and it will be necessary to use scale.
