

ANS BALIED

Citizens' Local-Option Committee at End.

PRESIDENT GIVES REASON

Says Law Is "a Redhot Frying Pan."

HAS "PROHIBITION HANDLE"

T. D. Honeyman Says He Perceived the Fraud Before Last Election, and Left the Extremists to Carry on Their Work.

The local-option law is a red-hot frying-pan with a prohibition handle. The Citizens' Committee, organized with 50 odd members, to represent the business interests of Portland in the contest for local option, turned away from that purpose and became, in fact, a prohibition campaign committee.

The citizens' committee, after serving as a link to unite the prohibition party and the Anti-Saloon League, has died, and the two contingents are split as wide apart as China from Peru.

The prohibition party deny the allegation and assert that the organizers of the officers and the workers of the committee were not party prohibitionists at all and that the five members of their party who did belong to it, joined not by butting in, but in response to invitation.

Prohibitionists declare that they gave up their party individually and became drawers of water and leavers of wood in the service of the citizens' committee, which conducted the local option campaign.
