Since the shooting of Sheriff Daniels and their subsequent disappearance, the men had spent the time in the coal mines, secreted from their pursuers and the bloodhounds that were put on toeir trail. During this time they were without food and drink. The officials took the men around the town of Montgomery, and, by a round-about way, brought them to Charleston to avoid a riot or lynching, which would have evidently occurred had the dizeas of Montgomery discovered that the Jacksons had been apprehended. Louise and Valerie Abel. 44 and 33 years old, respectively, were found dead today. In the mouth of each was a rubber tube which connected with the chan-

In the hand of the younger woman was an open letter, written in German, which stated that the aisters had decided to die together after talking over the matter for a week, and requested that they be buried in one grave.

"For this consideration," the letter continued, "we give our bodies for the benefit of medical science."

The two women had failed to pay the rent for the flat they occupied, and on Friday were dispossessed. At the same time their furniture, which they had bought from an installment company, had TENDER JUMPS THE TRACK. Fourteen Hurt in Wreck of Wabash Passenger Train.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 18.-A northbound Wabash passenger train was partially wrecked today in the outskirts of North St. Louis on a sharp curve of the Belt Line tracks of the Merchants' Terminal Railway Association near the west approach to the Merchants' bridge over the Mississippi, injuring 14 persons. The accident was caused by the wheels of the tender leaving the rails on the curve. Among the injured are:

None of those in the special car were hurt. The tender jumped the track which almost cleared the track.

scenes a bitter struggle is waging for imperial support. During the coming week the first test of strength is likely to occur, the result of which may mean much for the history of Russia.

The policy of reaction which has grown tradily store the contract of the policy of reaction which has grown tradily store the policy of reaction which has grown steadily since the accession of Alexander III seemed suddenly to lose its main bulwark when Minister Piehve fell. With the advent of Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky and his frank appeal for a policy of mutual confidence between government and people, a tremendous liberal rebound occurred and people.

In the meantime about the head of Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky has raged a storm of opposition. All the reactionary elements, including the solid bureaucracy, repeatedly charged the mob, barricades were erected, water and gas mains were cut, plunging the city into darkness and street cars were burned. The demonstration has every chance of revolution. The President's palace was strongly guarded president's palace was strongly guarded to court circles are creditable, autocracy and orthodoxy will both be in danger if the most properly movement is not stopped prompting the city of the court movement is not stopped prompting the city of the c present movement is not stopped prompt-ly. A week ago it was actually believed that Prince Sviatopolic-Mireky had been overthrown, but subsequent developments overthrown, but subsequent developments proved the contrary.

Nevertheless, his enemies persistently keep reports affoat that the health of the Minister of the Interior is bad and that the nature of the campaign which he is fighting is enough to shatter the health of a strong man. In the character of the elements which have rallied to his support, however, hes Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky's strength. They include neither radicals nor revolutioniats but the great mass of conservative Heeral-minded, loyal Russians. servative liberal-minded, loyal Russians, who believe that the salvation and progress of the Empire lies in larger liberties, but who have not a particle of sympathy with violence or revolution. It is fortunate indeed, that Prince Sviatopolk-Mirwith violence or revolution. It is fortunate indeed, that Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky has not attracted the support of the radicals, for that would place a powerful weapon in the hands of his adversaries.

The enemies of the Minister of the Interior are now moving heaven and earth to postpone the meeting of the presidents of the 35 provincial Zemstvos, which is scheduled for next Saturday, and in the present circumstances some of the Minister's own friends are counselling him to allow a postponement until January, fearing that a too radical expression of views in the agitation raised might furnish too much ammunition for the opposition.

M. Shipoff, president of the Moscow Zemstvo, who will preside at the meeting, favors this temportains policy, it is even reported that Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky is wavering, though his friends declare that this is untrue. The whole question will be decided by the Emperor early in the week.

Some of the presidents already here are week.

Some of the presidents already here are excited over the possibility of postponement, declaring that if the meeting is formally postponed it will be held surreptitiously. Undoubtedly postponement would be a crushing blow and create and exceedingly bad impression. This is due to the fact that the meeting has been clothed with a sentimental importance hardly justified by its actual powers. It is purely tified by its actual powers. It is purely unofficial, without direct authority to act; but it is the first time of an authorised assembling of representatives of the assembling of representatives Zemstvo from all over Russia.

Set-Backs From Profit-Taking Ar Quickly Recovered.

LONDON, Nov. II.—Foreign Minister Lansdowne's pacific speech at the Guild Hall banquet on Wednesday and the victory of President Roosevelt in the election on Tuesday gave a tone of greater buoyancy to the stock exchange, where the markets were already recovering gradually from the North Sea scare. Americans and South Africans have shown unusual activity, but the advance has been general in all branches of the market.

Movement Is Gaining Strength

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 13.-Russia is facing a great internal crisis, which, in the minds of intelligent Russians, overthe minds of intelligent Russians, overshadows in importance all questions relating to foreign politics. A new, broad and liberal movement seems not only under way, but gaining momentum daily, and the beat features of it is that it is entirely divorced from any radical revolutionary propagands.

Prince Sviatopolit-Mirsky, the Minister of the Interior, has given the movement impetus, but has done so against the most powerful influences, and behind the scenes a bitter struggle is waging for im-

Russian policy as regards Finland, if not reversed, has been greatily ameliorated, and the Finnish National Diet will meet next month. Only yesterday prominent Finlanders who were exiled under the Plehve regime received permission to return to their own country or to go abroad if they desired to do so.

The oppressive activity of the police throughout the empire has been largely relaxed; banishment by administrative order has been abolished; hundreds of political prisoners exiled to Siberia have been recalled; the Jews have received assurances of the dawning of a brighter day; the doors have been thrown open at two of the biggest trials proceeding in Russia (the Schaumann treason trial and the Jewish trial at Gomel), and the method of treating student demonstrations has been radically changed. Persuasion is being substituted for Cossack charges.

But nowhere are the changes so marked as in the matter of the press. After years of the strictest censorship, Russian papers suddenly found their voices within the last fortnight and were remarkably plain-spoken in the discussion of internal affairs, and especially in connection with the forthcoming meeting of the Zemstvo presidents. All accounts of the Schaumann and Gomel trials have been printed, and even particulars of student demonstrations, with resolution offered at the Polytechnic Institute declaring that what was wanted was not confidencee but an end of the war and the immediate convocation of a national assembly.

Such an unprecedented publication made the Russian public rub its eyes in amassment. Prince Ouktomsky, editor of the Viodomosti, said to the Associated Press today that never within his memory had Russian newspapers been allowed such liberties; yet these things had been done quietly and without public proclamation. As a rule, he said, the laws had not been modified. For instance the old press law is still hanging above the heads of editors like the sword of Damceles. The machinery of repression exists, but is not in operation.

A Washington dispatch in yesterday's Sun ringed with rosy light Professor Henry Parker Willis, the "student of conditions" in the Philippines, whose wild imaginings about them were soleminy quoted by Judge Parker in his homily dated October 15. October 25 the Judge again brought forward the professor, five anti-imperialists vouching for his skill as a trained investigator, his judgment in weighing evidence and his reliability as a witness. Governor Luke Wright denied all these discoveries categorically. October 28 Judge Parker patted the professor on the back and asked, "Which is likely to be preju-diced, the man having no motive but to learn the truth, or the Governor"? Our Washington dispatches show the Judge's star witness as a Washington cor-respondent who made himself a laughing stock by his guillbility and his meddle-someness. He investigated the press gai-leries of Congress to their lasting joy; brought unfounded charges against the statistician of the Agricultural Department, and was a redhot anti-imperialist. As an investigator, he was a joke. Flygobbling and mare's nests were his spechairy.

This hasty and impulsive young antiimperialist is described by our Washingion correspondent as "Buttinski," and
