Attorneys Manning and Mc-Ginn Lock Their Antlers.

M'GINN ORDERED FROM ROOM

Desires to Ask Eugene Blazier Whether He Owns the Paris House, and the District Attorney is Quick to Enter Objection.

A rupture occurred between District Attorney Manning and Henry E. McGinn at the close of the trial of Eugene Biazier on a charge of gambling, in Judge Frazier's court at 5 o'clock yesterday aft-

Mr. Blazier, as a defense, testified that he sold the gambling business and paraphernalia three years ago to E. J. Heilly for $1200 and that Hellly paid him $500 per month rent for the use of the gambling rooms. The information against Blazier sets forth that he conducted a game of roulette as proprietor on July 21

Mr. Manning, on cross-examination asked Blazier concerning the particulars of the sale, and if he had hired any men work in the gambling-house after the date of the sale, and went over the ground fully.

After he had finished, Mr. McGinn, who is assisting in the trial as a private prosecutor, asked the privilege of asking the witness a few questions.

Two Attorneys Clash.

"I object," said Mr. Manning. "The examination has closed."

Judge Frazier ruled that the District Attorney had charge of the case, and the questions could not be saked unless he consented. Then turning to Mr. McGinn, the District Attorney inquired: "Is there anything you want me to ask him?"

"Yes," replied Mr. McGinn. "Ask him if he owns the Paris House. Ask him if he sold the Paris House at the same time he sold the gambling-house."

Mr. Manning declined to do so, and Mr. McGinn protested, and Mr. Manning shouted: "Will you please go out of the room until I have finished with this witness?"

ness?"
Mr. McGinn walked towards the rear door, tearing a plece of paper as he went, and returned a moment later to ask that the case be continued for argument until the case be continued for argument until this morning, which request was granted. Asked later by a reporter what trouble there was between himself and Mr. Mc-Ginn, Mr. Manning responded: "None whatever; only that was not evidence. The Paris House has nothing to do with this that Heilly was the man who employed them.

J. L. Sperry testified that he knew Heilly and that he was in the gambling-house business.

For the prosecution, E. Quackenhush and W. H. Markell testified that they visited the place on July II and witnessed what they supposed was roulette, craps, faro and other games in progress. There were from 160 to 250 men in the rooms. They saw the name Blazier on the street sign. Mr. Quackenhush said he was interested in suppressing rambling. As a citizen he was interested in the good name of Portland at home and abroad.

Deputy Sheriff John Cordane testified to having seen Eugene Blazier about the place and thought he was the owner. Officer Gibson gave like evidence.

The jury selected to try the case is comprised as follows: August Urwyler, Phil Neu, C. M. Proud. August P. Paulson, J. H. Lambert, H. Terwilliger, John D. Kelly, George Hartness, Samuel H. Carter, Joseph Frakes, S. Bates and D. D. Neer.

When the Martins were divorced several months ago, the court granted the cus-tody of the child, a little boy, alternately to the father and mother, a year each at a time. Martin now wants the decree modified so that he will have entire control of his son. He says in his petition that the mother is not a proper person to have the care and education of the boy. She took the witness sland and denied this assertion, and stated that the father ran away with the boy, and she had to bring habeas corpus proceedings in Astoria to get him. She said Reid was a better father than Martin clothed the boy much better and gave him a better home. She admitted on cross-examination by J. E. Magers, the attorney for Martin, that Reld bit her arm once, and she had to go to a doctor, and that they quarreled sometimes, but not often.

He was in my house and I could have put him out, but I didn't, and Martin has come to the house and abused his former wife, and wanted her to run away. I give the boy a good home and I am able to give it to him. There was some other evidence sub-mitted on this side of the case, and Mar-tin testified concerning his ability to rear and educate the child. Judge George explained that the object of the inquiry was to ascertain if the home the boy now has is a good one.

Exporters Think It Likely a Fleet of Outside Steamers Will Be Brought In This Winter for Oriental Trade.

The news of the chartering of the British atsamship Elliamy by Balfour, Guthrie & Co. to load flour and grain here for the Orient at a #1 rate aroused great interest among shippins men yesterday. They look upon it as but a beginning, and expect to see a feet of framp steamers brought here this Winter to engage in the business. The #4 rate is #1 under the tariff of the Portland & Asiatic and other trans-Pacific lines. Should other vessels be taken at the same rate for this purpose, it would mean a demoralization of the taken at the same rate for this purpose, it would mean a demoralization of the existing Pacific schedule and a lively time would follow. The big shippers are not all in harmony with the management of the Portland & Asiatic Company, aligning not only an inadequate service, but also too high a rate. The engagement of the Ellamy at a low figure thus handicaps them to a certain extent, and it is considered probable that some of them will follow the lead of Balfour, Guthrie & Co. and put on an independent steamer on their own account. The views of the shippers was thus expressed by a leading exporter yesterday:

"Rates are entirely too high between the "Rates are entirely too high between the Pacific Coast and the Orient. Five dollars a ton is excessive for a haul of 4600 miles when we remember that the rate from New York to Liverpool—about 2100 miles—is only $1.25. And yet the Harriman and other lines say they are losing money at the 'low' rate of $5. These rates on this side must be put on a more moderate basis, or we cannot expect to do business with the Orientals."

Shenandoah Not Chartered.

It was reported yesterday that the big American ship Shemandoah had been chartered to load flour and wheat at this port for New York, but an inquiry made of John Rosenfeld's Sons, of San Francisco, the agents of the vessel, brought the reply that no such deal had been made. It is considered more likely that the Shenandoah may be laid on at San Francisco, where she is now lying, for this purpose.

There are many varieties of such animals, the kangaroo being probably the best known. The Virginia opossum was the first known, having been discovered about 200 years agg by Captain John Smith, an English adventurer, who located one of the first colonies in Virginia and who in his journal described it as having "a head like a nal described it as having "a head like a nal described it as having "a head like a swine, a tall like a rat, and as of the bignesse of a cat, and under the belly she hath a bagge." The oponsum's cousin, the kangaroo, and other animals akin were discovered some 50 years later by Captain Cook, the great navigator.
