Exhibit of Nicely-Packed Fruit and Demonstration in Proper Cooking Proves Good Method of Advertising the Fruit.

BALEM, Or., Nov. 28.—(Special.)—Oregon prunegrowers who contributed fruit to be given away at the St. Louis Fair will be gratified to receive tangible evidence that this scheme of advertising was sflective, and that they will reap some harvest from their sowing. Members of the Willamette Valley and Rogue River Prune Association were the chief contributors of prunes sent to St. Louis. The prunes were cooked according to the most approved methods and given to sistiors in order that they might learn the merits of the Oregon prune. The people not only ate the prunes and were pleased, but when they returned to their homes they bought, or tried to buy, similar fruit for use on their tables. SALEM, Or., Nov. 28 - (Special.) - Ore people in all parts of the re unable to find Oregon prunes country were unable to find Oregon prunes in their local markets, and have written to the Willamette Vailey Prune Association inquiring where the fruit can be purchased. From the letters received, it is evident that retail grocors all over the country have been informed by their customers that Oregon prunes are the kind to buy, and if they don't keep them already they will be encouraged to do so. One example of how this plan works will suffice to show the effectiveness of it as a means of advertising. The association received a letter from a woman in a town in Tennessee, saying that she had eaten the Oregon prunes at the Far and wanted to buy them, but could find none in the stores. The association sent this letter to its broker nearest the place from which the letter came. The broker sent it to a wholesale dealer, and the traveling salesman of the wholesale house took it with him next time he visited that traveling salesman of the wholesale house took it with him next time he visited that town. By that means he showed the retail grocers that they are not carrying a stock of goods which will find a sale among their customers. The retail dealer some sees the point, orders the pruncaputs them on display in his windows and recommends them to his patrons.

What difference advertising makes is shown by the following letter written by a man who could find California pruncaput couldn't find Oregon's:

Wees Exphery, Mass. Nov. 18.—Williamette

West Resbury, Mass., Nov. 18.—Williamette Valley Prans Association, Salem, Or.—Dess Sire: I sew and sampled some of your fine prunes, Pheasant brand, at the St. Louis Pulr, and desire to get some for family use. Are they for sale here in Boston? I have been onable to find them at three pieces where I have asked for them; the California prunes seen to be the only ones they know. If you can direct me to a place where I can find them I will have a lost at once. A. F. HUNTER.

By return mail this man received a pleasant letter telling him exactly where he could buy the prunes, and his letter was sent out to dealers in cured fruits was sent out to dealers in curred fruits to convince them that they also, should be handling Oregon fruit. In view of the success of this venture at St. Louis, it goes without saying that visitors at the Lewis and Clark Fair next year will be given an opportunity to learn the superior qualities of the Oregon pruss. Said Manager Gite, of the Willamotte Valley Prune Association:

wholessie houses are taking praises packed in 10-passed boxes. We have just begut pucking them in that size this year, and naturally met the opposition which the wholessier has to the We wanted to pack in 16-

Why do we so often refer to the family physician?

Because we make doctors' medicines. We give doctors

the formula for Ayer's

Cherry Pectoral, and they

prescribe it for coughs, colds, bronchitis, consumption. We trust them; they trust us. Ask your doctor about this medicine 10.45
