HOMES ON THE HILLS

NEW RESIDENCES SPRING UP IN THE SUBURES.

Building Permits Do Not Keep Pace With Realty Transfers, but Contractors Are Busy.

The real estate transfers this week are made up mostly of residence property Downtown property is at a standstill. Nobody wishes to sell for a price at which anyone else wishes to buy. There is a feeling of dead certainty among preperty-owners that real estate here is val ued at only 40 per cent of what it ought to be worth and they cannot be touched under the 100 per cent price. Such sales as are made do not warrant prices of this kind and very few are anxious to dabble in downtown real estate at prices asked. But uptown and around in the suburbs here is activity. The Winter has not stopped the building of homes. These range in value all the way from $500 to $15,000. Portland and King's Heights resiiences are getting the most expensive just Everywhere in the suburbs east, west, north and south and even in the hills, at last, there is building going on.

There is even an attempt to start a new cuburb in the valley that lies beyond Council Crest on the West Side line of the Southern Pacific, a virgin country, and the prospects seem fair that it will be a go. People never knew what lay behind the hills until the loop-line was built over Portland Heights last year, but many thousands wandered over those hills during the Summer and realized what the of country was. he building permits as should be ex-ted at this time of year are not keeppace with the realty transfers, but ftects and contract builders are all and the building continues, Winter to. Everybody is sure that house s will be skyhigh next Summer during Fair and many are now building for themselves who formerly

BOOKS ON NEIGHBURLINESS

Portland Library Issues List on Social Topics.

Portland is happy in having no slum but wherever men and women, rich and poor, are crowded together within a city infortunate conditions arise. Perhaps neighborliness in its best sense, though not a cure, is a step on the right road to mending these conditions. The following is a brief list of the books on this subject to be found in the Portland Library:

Addams, Jane. Democracy and social ethics.
1802. This book is pre-eminently one based upon experience during long residence in one of the poorest wards in Chicago. She has not only had her eyes open, but her conscience has always been singularly silert to the moral problems presented

BREAK CHECKED BUSINESS. London Market Depressed in Sympa thy With America.

LONDON. Dec. 11.—The unexpected break in the American market depressed all sections of the London Stock Exchange last week and checked business in every direction. It is believed, however, that the general effect upon the market will be healthful. The last Brittish Board of Trade returns were favor. ish Board of Trade returns were favor able and the opinion here is that trade prospects in the United States are good. It is also considered that the approach of the fall of Port Arthur makes for peace which would steady the markets throughout Europe. Russian stocks, in spite of news from Port Arthur, are still remarkably strong. It is expected the market will remain inactive until the opening of the New Year, when business should rulse.
