GOES TO CALIFORNIA AFTER APPLE PACKERS. - Another mark may be scored to the credit of the Willamette Valley as an apple-producing region, as Millard O. Lownedale's orchard in Yambill County has this year produced considerably over 20,000 boxes of Spitzenbergs and Baidwins. Mr. Lownsdale, whose strict attention to the business of apple-growing keeps him on his rather extensive farm most of the time, arrived in Portland yesterday morning and he left for California last evening. To a friend who met him and inquired what he was doing so far from home he stated that he was going to California to employ a gang of a dozen or more expert apple-packers to pack his crop. Surprise being expressed that he could not find ex-perts here to pack his apples, he said this had been a source of tromble to him for everal years and he had been obliged to break in a gang of Japanese every year, which required constant supervision of them and was more than he could submit to again, so he had concluded to secure a gang from California. He said the Chi-nese were considered the most careful and reliable of packers by California orchardists and he was determined to give them a trial. Mr. Lownsdale set out his orchard some 13 years ago and chose the Spitzenberg and Baldwin for practically the only trees in it. As he has between $5,000 and 40,000 boxes of these choicest varieties 49,000 boxes of these choicest varieties from this season's crop, he is entitled to consider that he exercised good judgment. In mentioning the fine crop of apples pro-duced by the Wallace orchard, near Salem, a few days ago it was stated that more Spitzenbergs were comprised in it than were produced in the entire Hood River Valley this season, and now to this is to be added a still greater amount of Spitzen-bergs produced by Mr. Lownsdale. It does, however, seem strange that he finds it necessary to go to California to find packers to suit him. Perhaps the lateness of the season may have something to do with this, as probably few orchardists have many apples on hand still unpacked. Mr. Lownsdale has, however, always been inclined to hold on to his crop till the last

RECORD-BREAKING VAUDEVILLE.

The greatest and best vaudeville bill ever presented in the City of Pertiand is shown at the Star Theater this week. Never before have the people had an opportunity to see such a grand array of vaudeville talent. Every set on the bill is a distinct feature in itself. Think of such acts as the Molassos and Bimm Bomm Berr, whose reputations are known the world over as being headliners on every bill they have ever played.

To see these acts alone is more than worth the price of admission. No one should miss seeing this record-breaking bill, for never in the annals of the vaudeville world has such a manster aggregation of stars appeared in Portland on the same programme. It is a genuine 50-cent show for 10

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER.

The Great Horserace Scene From the "Prodigal Daughter" at Columbia.

The moment of intense excitement! They're off in a bunch! Nothing like it since the great meet at Irvington racetrack last Summer! The audiences at the Columbia this week, and especially all those who are lovers of the greatest American and English sport, are thrilled to the highest pitch during the great racing scene in the fourth act of "The Prodigal Daughter." The stage is crowded with between 50 and 60 people, and three horses are in the race, aided by the throng on the stage who follow every moment of the racers around and round the track, the people in the nudience catch the contagion and at the finish are invariably worked up to the same state of howling excitement that is al-ways present at a genuine horserace. Every one who has been to the Columbia this week has gone away more than delighted not only with the effect of this strong scene, but with all the rest of the popular stock company's earnest efforts in one of the very best plays they have produced this season. It is one of the first of a series of real dramatic treats that are to be offered by Manager Ballard to his numerous patrons all through the coming season.

Their plan was not then adopted, but it engendered a long debate, and will probably be approved next Tuosday night. The report proposed to separate the question of precinct prohibition from that of county prohibition in elections so that electors may vote their home precinct "dry," and still vote their county "wet." It proposed further to allow county elections on prohibition only after three-fourths of the precincts had been "cleaned up" within the county, and to require 10 per cent of the registered electors in a per cent of the registered electors in given precinct or group of precincts as a given precinct or group of precinct or county to sign a petition for an election.
