RAID ON POOLROOM

Sheriff Finds Quiet Hand-book Being Run.

PROPRIETOR IS ARRESTED

J. V. Fleshman Says He Was Merely Taking Bets for Seattle, but Sheriff Says He Was Selling Pools.

Another raid was made on poolselling yesterday afternoon, when Sheriff Word and Chief Deputy Sheriff Morden arrested J. N. Fleshman. The arrest was made in room 22 of the Tacoma lodging-house, and the charge is that of selling pools. The Sheriff received a tip that the law was being violated, and he at once swooped down on the place. There were about a dozen men in the room at the time, but the officers saw nothing going on to justify them in arresting any of the number, and so contented themselves with taking Fleshman into custody. He was released by Judge George on a bond for $100 requiring him to appear when wanted before any court.

Was Intending to Open.

Fleshman was indignant at his arrest, and to a reporter said: "They say I was running a handbook pool business, but I was not. I was thinking of opening tomorrow. I took a few bets and sent them to Seattle. If I bet my horse will beat yours, there is nothing wrong in that. I bet between $2000 and $3000 on the prizefight the other night, and a deputy sheriff was present. They ought to arrest me for that. They had no warrant."

Says It Is the Worst Kind.

Chief Deputy Morden said: "Fleshman was running a handbook pool business of the worst kind. There were at least a dozen men in the room when we got there.

As there was no information on file against Fleshman, nor an indictment, Judge George said the only way in which he could act in accepting a bond was as a committing magistrate.

Fleshman was formerly employed as a bookkeeper in the Warwick Club poolrooms. There is already an indictment pending against him under the nuisance statute on account of his connection with that establishment. The present case will probably be referred to the grand jury, which is still in session.

MADE HER GO HUNGRY.

Myrtle Howard Says She Was Mistreated by Her Husband.

Myrtle Howard has filed an amended complaint in her divorce suit against her husband, Harry Howard. In this she charges him with cruel treatment, failure to provide, and says she was compelled to leave him. She alleges that he choked her and, on one occasion, locked her in a room and refused to let her have any breakfast. They were married at McMinnville in February, 1904. She asks to be restored to her maiden name, Cockerham.

Hop Cases Continued.

The suit of Lilienthal Bros. vs. J. R. Cartwright, brought under an alleged failure to fulfill a hop contract, came up for hearing in the United States Court yesterday, but was postponed until January 9 to allow the filing of an amended answer. The plaintiff strongly opposed the postponement, but Judge Bellinger allowed the time asked for in consideration of the fact that the defendant was willing to pay all additional costs occasioned by the extra traveling and expenses of the plaintiff's witnesses. The suit of Lilienthal Bros. vs. H. Hirschberg et al., covering another hop contract, was set for hearing on January 10.

Legal Jottings.

In the suit of Mary A. Acton against Alison Acton for a divorce, a motion for a plea in abatement was filed in the State Circuit Court. Acton says his wife, in April, 1900, filed a similar suit against him in Umatilla County, which has not been dismissed, and therefore this last case should be abated.

Articles of incorporation of the Morris Mining & Milling Company were filed yesterday in the County Clerk's office by William J. Morris, Morgan A. Zeller and S. E. Stansberry. The capital stock is $100,000.

Incorporation articles of the Wood River Zinc Company were filed yesterday by J. J. Chambreau, William H. Dunckley and John Williams. Capital stock $150,000. The objects announced are to mine for gold, silver, zinc, etc.

GROOM WAS RESOURCEFUL.

Mere Legal Trifles Could Not Baffle Young Newberg Couple.

B. W. Taylor, of Newberg, turned the tables on Deputy County Clerk F. W. Prasp yesterday and secured a marriage license for himself and Mary F. Parks, after having been refused the coveted document. Mr. Taylor came to Portland for the license in preference to driving from Newberg to McMinnville, the county seat of Yamhill County, over a muddy road. He was not aware that the statute provides that the bride shall reside in the county where the license is issued.

This technicality of the law, probably intended to prevent the issuance of licenses where there has been an elopement, is not strictly observed, as almost daily one or more marriage licenses are issued where both parties to the contract come here from California, Washington, Idaho or some interior county in the state. But in such cases, when the Deputy County Clerk asks whether the woman in the case resides in Portland or Multnomah County, the answer given is affirmative. This complies with the law; the affidavit of the accompanying witness is taken, and the license made out. If the woman is not a permanent resident of the city she is here to be married, and the person who, in response to the question, says she is a resident, stretches his conscience to the extent that she is residing here at the time he so affirms.

It was the groom's lack of knowledge of the law and how to get around the obstacle which caused Deputy Prasp to decline to issue the license when it was first applied for by the applicant. When Mr. Prasp asked: "Does the lady reside in Portland?" Taylor promptly responded "No." The Clerk then explained that under the law he was not permitted to grant the required legal document, and Mr. Taylor reluctantly walked away.

He proved, however, to be a man of resources, for, instead of leaving the Courthouse, he hung around in the hallway until Mr. Prasp went to lunch. Seizing the desired opportunity, Taylor marched back into the County Clerk's office with his witness, and this time Deputy A. C. Bamford came to the counter.

Taylor asked again for the coveted license, and when the interrogation came, "Does the lady reside in this county?" the proper response was given, and the license was soon made out, signed, sealed and delivered. Taylor, with a knowing smile, left the building to have the ceremony performed. Mr. Bamford, of course, knew nothing of the previous incident, and the county is $3 ahead on the transaction.

Under Two Flags

Italian Colors Fail to Save Miscreant Seaman.

Seaman Harita and his Italian flag bid fair to leap into fame almost as enduring and great as Mrs. Woodcock and her "Rosenfeit" ensign, for when Mounted Policeman Croxford attempted to board the ship Celeste and arrest the third mate for shooting seagulls in the river and for discharging firearms in the city limits, the colors of Italy were thrown across the gangplank and the officer's progress stopped there.

Harita, in temporary triumph, laughed in glee. He watched the retreating form of Policeman Croxford, then stooped and picked up his country's tri-colored flag. Under it he had long sailed the foamy seas and now, in a time of need, it had saved him from arrest in a foreign port.

But bold! The dramatic unfurling and throwing down of the red, white and green banner across the gangplank and the hasty retreat of the policeman were but the first chapter in the affair.

Policeman Croxford hastened to the office of Harbormaster Ben Biglin, to whom he told his story. He had seen the haughty and race-proud third mate shooting seagulls from the main deck of the Celeste, and had heard the report of the Italian's gun as it boomed on the air. Forth to Deputy City Attorney Fitzgerald went Harbormaster and policeman. Warrants were issued for Harita.

When the officers again approached the ship, Harita did not repeat his previous antic, but accompanied them to the City Jail. All his defiance departed when he discovered that his game had failed. At work at the critical moment and today he will explain to Municipal Judge Hogue all about the trouble he has dreated.
