SWEENY IS SHOWING STRONG

Denial of Senator Ankeny That He Is Supporting Foster Gives Great Joy to Backers of Man From Spokane.

OLYMPIA, Wask., Jan. 9 .- (Staff Correspondence.)-The ninth session Washington Legislature was launched at noon today, getting under way with hardly a ripple to mark its course. There were usual scenes attendant on opening day. Galleries and lobbies were well filled and all of the members to outward appearances, at least, were on the best of terms with each other.

It was a great day for some of the members, who, for the first time and rubbed elbows with public life, but the old-timers were not thinking of the stereotyped organization proceedings, all of which had been cut and dried the night previous. Their minds were wandering away to the time a week or two hence when bit-terness and rancor would take the place of the smiles and good humor which was today manifest on all sides. The atmosphere was heavy with aurcharged Senatorial lightning and under the shadow of what has always been a paramount issue at Washington Legislatures, the work of getting the two houses into shape for business semed dull and commonplace. The only deviation from the ordinary run of events in the House was when Martin Maloney most ungraciously refused to make the nomination of that Nestor of Washington politics, J. G. Meg-ler, the ununimous choice for Speaker, insisting on the recognition of one of the four lone Democrats.

In the Senate a slight diversion was ereated by the emphatic manner in which Senator Palmer was turned down in a fight he made against the appointment of a committee clerk. The session was soon over and immediatebusy over the Senatorial fight.

Foster Loses to Wilson.

The only apparent change in the sitsation is further slight gains in the Wilson strength, the deflection coming from the Foster side of the house. The Foster men do not take these gains of the ex-Senator very seriously and playing the role of a target at which the rest of the state is heaving brick-

The of employes. Files management is distressed over the growing strength of Wilson, although not a vote that John L. has annexed since his arrival could be turned over to Piles or any other King County candidate, except Wilson.

For Piles All the Time.

In order to try and force Wilson out of the fight, an effort was made today to obtain the eignatures of the King County delegation to an agreement never, under any circumstances, to vote for John L. Wilson. It was figured that this action would remove the ex-Senator from the fight and leave an open pathway to success for Piles. Some of the members refused to entertain the proposal and it was dropped. In fleu of such an agreement the delegation innanimously signed up the following:

Be it resolved by the King County Representatives in caucus assembled, that this delegation is for Samuel H. Piles for United States Senator first, last and all the time; that we hereby bind curselves to the unit rule on all questions relating to the clerific of a United States Senator, all such questions to be settled by the majority vote.

Be it resolved by the King County Repre-sentatives in caucus assembled, that this delegation is for Samuel H. This resolution is a very plain intima tion that the delegation does not propose to be pounded on the back several times a day by visiting delegations from Seattle, as was the case during the Ankeny-Preston fignt. It is also a pretty hard folt for Wilson, providing the action is not reconsidered, and yet it is now more apparent than ever that if King County secures a Senator this ecosion it will of necessity be John L. Wilson, for he alone is in command of some fairly good outside support.

Wilson Far Short of Enough.

With the Seattle delegation and his outside support Wilson could mass as cutside support Wilson could mam as many and perhaps more votes than Poster. Even then he would be so far short of the required number that it would be unsafe to predict success but the fight would then lay between him and Sweeny, it may seem strange to treat thus lightly the claims of a man who at this writing apparently has the assurance of more votes on the first ballot than any other man in the race, but a careful study of the Foster strength since the primaries last Summer has not impressed me with its staying qualities.

The rabid railroad com ission men are making a great effort to stave off Senatorial action until their pet measure becomes a law, and as there are about a dozen of these bills to be threshed out before one satisfactory to all can be passed, there is not much danger of a speedy Senatorial election unless this feature can be passed up.

Sweeny Needed No Club. Of course, all of the Senatorial candidates favor a railroad commission, but among them all Sweeny stands in the best light with the commission men. He is the only one of the candidates who recognized and acknowledged without be

The nomination was seconded by Gleason of King, Liudsley of Spokane, McCoy, Lewis, Dickson of Elititas, McNichol of Pierce, Williams of Pacific, Mohistadt of Island, Rudio of Walla Walla, Morgan of Snohomish, and Blackmore of Clark.

Martin Maloney then arose and announced that in order to prevent it being unanimous, he would present the name from Megler. As Maloney's candidate had voted for himself, he was somewhat confused over his apponent's gracious action and when the result 30 to 3 was announced he hastily asked permission to change his vote, stating that he had voted for himself for fear that otherwise he would not set a start vote.
