BARRERS PREPARE TO FIGHT.-The Bar BARRERS PREPARE TO FIGHT.—The Barber's Union is prepared for any attack on the Sunday closing law or other attempt which may be made to break the present berber regulations in this state.
It has framed a memorioi, copies of which have gone far and wide throughout the state and have come back footed by the names of many burbers. These copies Secretary Leabe has pasted in a long string that unrolls for the 40 feet and if anyone goes before the legeislature with a bill in any way affecting the barber string that unrolls for the 40 feet and if anyone goes before the legeislature with a bill in any way affecting the barber regulations, he will take this scroll to Salem and, unrolling it before the legislature assembled, impress that body with the fact that the great majority of barbers in Oregon think the present law is just about right and they wish it left as it is. The boas barbors and journeymen are as one on the question of the present law. They are both protected from interlopers and mere "face-scrapers" and they believe the Board of Barber Examiners has only reasonable power: They have gotten along very will under present conditions and they wish no change, believing that in serving themchange, believing that in serving them selves they serve the public as well.

GADSKI'S RETURN. Greatest German Soprano of Younger

Generation.

Portland music lovers are on the qui vive over the news that Mme. Gadski will be beard again in Portland in a song recital. The date set for the recital is Wednesday evening, January 18, at the First Baptist Church, under the direction of Lois Steers.

The San Francisco Bulletin of January 4. under the heading, 'Rare Voice of Gadski is Heard in Concert—Great Singer Thrilled a Large Audience at the Alham-bra Theater Last Evening in Music of the Mastera," says of her concert:

The Alhambra Theater forms a very poor setting for a great prima donna like Gadski, except in the matter of size. It seemed large, cold, bleak, wintry and desolate tast night, even after the hun-dreds had filed in to listen to the awest strains of the famous singer. But the of the lovely songs of the Fatherland, the matchiess lyrics of Schumann and Schu-bert predominating, so that she seemed to dwell in a special atmosphere of the music of sentiment. If it had not been for the aria from "Nozze di Figaro" and the aria from "Freischutz" a person hear-ing Mme. Gadski for the first time would ing Mme. Gadski for the first time would hardly have suspected her tremendous dramatic gift. It is, in fact, a proof of wonderful versatility to be able to go from the intellectual depths and majestic harmonies of the Nibelungen ring to the portrayal of the simple sentiment of "Haidenroslein" and "Nussbaum."
