"Section 3 of the law requiring compulsory attendance at school during the full school term of children under 14 years of age was declared inoperative by the ney-General of the state, thus rendering ineffective what was intended to be one of the strongest ends in the en-forcement of the law. Careful consideration of this particular feature of the law by the educational authorities, as well as by your commission, has resulted in the recommandation that the child-labor law be so amended that attendance at school during the whole of the school term shall be compulsory upon children between the ages of 8 and 14, and upon children between the ages of 14 and 16, unless engaged in lawful work. Night Work Hurts Boys.

"Especial attention has been paid to the enforcement of section 4, which for-bids night work for all children under 16 years of age. Night work is extreme-ly pernicious in its effects, and in no industry is essential to success. The mes-senger and telegraph companies employ the largest number of boys of this age, and an enlightened public sentiment re-garding the character of night work would surely result in a demand for stricter laws on this subject. Before the enact-nent of the present child-labor law the department store employed children under 14 years of age on Baturday nights and during the holidays. But as far as your commission has been able to deter-mine, the enforcement of the law has resulted in no hardship either to employer

Under the present law there is no provision for the expenses of the commis-sion, and while the several members have endeavored faithfully to perform their duties, yet more effective work could be done were there some provision for the runn' expenses, such as postage, print-ing, traveling, etc., incident to the work."

SUIT FOR CAPITOL SITE.

Heirs of Edmund Sylvester Begin Proceedings for Possession.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Jan. II.—(Special.)— The helps of Edmund Sylvester, owner of the original townsite of Olympia, have commenced preliminary proceedings lead-ing up to an attempt to secure title to the ten-acre tract of land upon which stands the foundation for the $1,00,00 capitol building once started in this city. On this tract also stands the historic frame building erocted in 1856 in which successive Legislatures have met until 1901 The occupant of this frame building is A. B. Allison, who with his family re-sides there as caretaker. Today Mr. Allison was served with formal notice by the Sylvester helps to vacuate the promises.

The ten-acre tract is included in the old Sylvester donation land claim, as is also Capitol Park and the ette of the recreed so long as a legislative hall was crocted at the expense of the Government. In 1892, when the state contemplated building a fl.050,000 building on the site, Assistant Attorney-General James A. Haight made an examination of the state's title to the tract. He deemed it defective, and prepared another deed. This deed Miss May Sylvester, in behalf of her mother. Mrs. Clara Sylvester, and herself, refused to sign until a reversionary clause dictated by horself had been inserted.

Inserted.

The reversionary clause provides in effect that if the state shall ever abandon the tract as a Capitol site or build a Capitol elsewhere the tract shall revert to the original owners or their heirs. Under the act of 1895 providing for the exection of a $1.000,000 building, Governor John H. McGraw appointed a commission which declined afterwards to adopt plans that met with the approval of the Governor.

SALEM, Or., Jan. 13.—(Special.)—That "the child-labor law is persistently evaded by the telegraph and messenger companies" is the statement made by the Board of inspectors of Child Labor in its first blennial report, which has just been filed with Governor Chamberlain. "While the present regulation has served as a cacek against the violation of the law," says the board, "the ease with while the age of a child-worker is changed to meet the requirements is not conductive to good morals." The inspectors therefore recommend "that a system of age and school certificates sign."
