Board of Trade Banquet Speakers Are United

FOR A GREATER PORTLAND

Governor Chamberlain and Other Distinguished Citizens Call for Concerted Action - Local Knockers Arraigned.

The Portland Board of Trade held its annual banquet last night in the dining-rooms of the Commercial Club. More than 150 members of the board were pres-ent, besides many invited guests from different parts of the state. Governor Chamberlain made the principal address of the evening, though there were several other speeches of great interest and power.

George W. Allen, the new president of the board, acted as chairman of the evening and presided over the meeting with a large state of the control of the president of the properties. ming and presided over the meeting with great tact, especially in his introductions, which were timely and interesting. In the short address made by Mr. Allen in closing the evening, the plan of the board for the year to come was briefly outlined and the work to be adopted as best suited for the upbuilding of Portland was point-has passed and urging all to unite in the promotion of the work for the future.

Governor Chamberlain, as the first speaker, commenced his address with a threat and ended with a prediction, but since the first was in jest and the last to sarnest, it served to bring out what was meant to be the point of the speech. The Governor said in part:

The Governor's Speech.

The Oregonian said this morning that any se who would read my message through as a public benefactor, and I have a was a public benefactor, and I have a mind to read it to you this evening in order to make of you all public benefactors. I tonight am like the boy who was asked by his teacher who it was that led the children of Israel out of the land of Cansan. At last the boy answered: I disn't, teacher. I came from Missouri with my folks.' And so I am from Salem tonight, and I have no message to bring to you, but I want to say that It gives me pleasure to meet with the people who put their shoulders to the whese of public endeavor."

The Governor then spoke of the portage coad and of the effort the people had made to secure the appropriation and of what they had done to build the road since that time. He said he was confident that May 15 would see the road complete. Then he hit at the spirit of Portland

"Portland is the only town in the Northwest," he said, "where the citi-mens knock their town. They don't do It in Seattle and we should not do it here. The spirit of loyalty is responsi-ble for the prosperity of Seattle, and a similar spirit among the Portland people would bring Portland rapidly to

There should be unity of action on e part of the people of Oregon to sw the rest of the United States nat we have done our part in the greement concerning the construction the Cellio Canal, and to convince the rument that it should do what it has promised to do. We have promised the right of way for the canal and have given it, and now the Govern-ment says it will do nothing. We should our part of the bargain, and now you you follow what you have been dobg and are now doing, in a few years british will not be, as it is today, to fourth in rank among the exportaction of the United States, but well years close to the top of the list."

ber of Commerce, was the next speaker of the evening. Mr. Wheelwright in opening his address spoke of the harmony which happily prevailed between the commercial bodies of the city and predicted great results during the rears to come from this co-operative spirit. Then he paid a compliment to flowering Chamberlain. ernor Chamberlain.

"Mr. Cotton said to me a moment ago," he confided, "that one reason we of Oregon are able to get no more than we do from the Government is bewe do from the Government is be-cause we have no more Democrats than we have. I do not know that the presence of a great number of Demo-crats is desirable but if we had a few more like the one who has just sat down the state would be much better

Mr. Wheelwright called for unity of action in the work of the commercial hodies of the city. He asked that the Board of Trade join with all other hodies in asking for a good appropriation for the Cellio canal, for the deepening of the Columbia River at its mouth and asked for ening of the Columbia River at its mouth, and asked for co-operation in all questions tending to the good of the clip and of the nate.

H. M. Cake, president of the Commercial Club, opened his address with a little history, telling how he happened not to be a member of the Chamber of Commerce.

"I always had a great deal of interest in the development of Portland," he said. "In the past I had a great deal of interest in the work of the Chamber of Commerce until I was, with all the rest of the lawyers, excluded from the membership by resolution, since which time I have still retained my interest in Portland, but have lost track to a certain degree of the work of the Chamber. I have long had an interest in the city," continued the speaker. "and I have long seen the necessity of unanimity of sentiment, which, if we had it, would have made us, as we should be the head and seet of news to the best. it, would have made us, as we should be the head and seat of power in the Pacific Northwest. What we have lacked in past years in Portiand is public splirt and pub-lic pride. In pulling together for the adwancement and upbuilding of the city and state we need to build up public spirit. It is not in organization. It is in spirit and character and carnestness, with these all clae will follow as the night the day. Talk is cheap. Platitudes around the table are all right, but it is work that counts. You have not to de and here. You have got to do and have got

It is one thing to roll up hig majorities, but if there were more Democrats we would not have to wait until we had built a few more battleships before we could get money for the deepening of the river at the bar. Mr. Cotton then detailed conditions at the bar where no deep-draught ships could pass with certainty when loaded to the limit. He showed that Portland was thus bottled up and could not find a sure outlet to the sea. He showed that if the river was open at the mouth the interior for a thousand miles to the east would be tributary to the city.

"You must open the mouth of the bottle," he said. "I would be giad to see the river open from one end to the other.

Justice Reid had a busy day yesterday hearing the testimony in the case of John Scheideman vs. the American Investment Company, in which the ownership of a norse was involved. The case presented horse was involved. The case presented many intricate problems of identification and before the testimony was concluded it was very much a case of deep mystery so far as the horse is concerned. The investment Company at pregent holds possession of a horse which Scheideman contends belongs to him. His theory of the matter is that the horse which he owned and which he had out in pasture was stolen and a horse owned by the company which hore a strong resemblance to his bottle," be said, "I would be giad to see the river open from one end to the other. C. R. Griggs, who is wanted by the Federal Court for having obtained between $20,000 and $30,000 under false pretenses, was arrested yesterday afternoon by the Sheriff and his deputy, John Cordano, and is now in the County Jail.

The complaint against Griggs is that, in 1900, he represented to many people in Portland and elsewhere that he and his companions in Alaska had discovered mines of fabulous wealth, and for the de-velopment of which money was needed. Federal Court Holds for Retail Lumber Company.

SHERMAN ACT NOT VIOLATED

Suit Against City Retail Lumber Company for $25,000 Falls Through After a Week in Court_Will Appeal.

After spending a week in listening to testimony and the arguments of the counsel in the case of Arthur H. Ellis vs. the Inman, Poulsen Company et al., and the City Retail Lumber Company, it took the jury but 15 minutes to find that the jury but 15 minutes to find that the charges against the defendants did not constitute a violation of the Sherman act, and a verdict was accordingly returned in their favor.

This suit, in which Ellis sued for $5,000 damages, arose out of an alleged violation

This suit, in which Ellis sued for $35,000 damages, arose out of an alleged violation of the Sherman act in the formation of the Sherman act in the formation of the City Retail Lumber Company, a local corporation, having as its members several of the most important lumber concerns in this city.

The plaintiff, as a base for his suit, alleged that the City Retail Lumber Company was formed for the restraint of trade, and that it did restrain interstate trade. His evidence showed that in 1921, while he was engaged in building houses while he was engaged in building houses for speculative purposes, he had pur-chased a quantity of rough lumber from mills in Vancouver, Wash, being able to secure a better price there. When the finished lumber was required for his houses under construction the Washington mills under construction the Washington mills were unable to furnish it, and he then tried to secure the material in Portland. The alleged combine was then in operation, and it was necessary for Ellis to deal with the City Retail Lumber Company. According to his testimony, he applied to them for the finished lumber necessary to complete his houses, but was refused for the reason that he had purchased his rough lumber from Vancouver. He further stated that the proposal was made to him that the City Retail Lumber Company would, however, furnish the lumber needed, provided he would pay to them the difference between the price paid to the Vancouver mills for rough lumber and their price on the quantity paid to the vancouver mins for rough lumber and their price on the quantity bought, amounting to $350, and that he would promise to purchase all his future requirements from this company. His tes-timony was borne out by several con-tractors, who testified that similar condiions had prevailed with them.

Denies Being Wrongful Combine. The defense, however, introduced host of witnesses, consisting mainly of milimen and contractors. It was established that the City Retail Lumber Company was not formed for the pur-pose of restricting trade or controll-ing the market as to prices, but was merely a selling agency for the con-venience of the city mills in handling their retail trade. One of the strong points brought out by the defendants was that instead of prices being raised under the alleged combine they had frequently been lowered as the condition of the market justified. Another feature of the defense was the concession that Eliis had been refused finished lumber, but this was for the reason that the company preferred to keep that grade for its regular customers. Finished lumber of first qual-

tomers. Finished lumber of first qual-ity is scarce as compared with the rough, and the company followed out the principle that it should only sell such to those who bought their entire requirements from the company. Testimony introduced by the de-fendants showed that finished lumber was available in the open market at the time Ellis chained to have suffered through the refusal of the City Rethrough the refusal of the City Retail Lumber Company to sell to him, and that he could have purchased the lumber needed elsewhere had he de-sired. Several contractors testified they had purchased all kinds of lumber at that time from mills outside of the
