AN UNFINISHED HISTORY OF OREGON

Great Work Intended for the Youth of This State to Be Published in The Sunday Oregonian

At the time of his death, a few weeks ago, Homer S. Lyman was engaged in writing a history of Oregon. His special purpose was to interest the youth of the Pacific Northwest and thus stimulate them to reading everything that was available concerning this new empire.

The Sunday Oregonian secured from Mr. Lyman's enter the incomplete manuscript and will begin its publication serially in the next issue. His spirit is best expressed in the first words of the historian's introduction:

"Every boy and girl in Oregon should know the story of his state — which we all love: a land with a heart whose history is a romance, a land whose every child is a descendant of a race which has clung to the soil and made it its own."

In order to aid Mr. Lyman in his work, The Sunday Oregonian is opening its columns to contributions of any kind that may be of use to Mr. Lyman's work.

TIED OF ACTRESS WITH

Native of Utah, Vol. 2. — Becomes a Miner.

AN ENSMALL act of desperation and the suicide of a miner in the little town of Everts, Montana, has caused another murder to be committed.

The mining community was thrown into a frenzy of excitement when the news of the suicide reached them.

The victim, a man of the name of John Smith, was a native of Utah. He had been living in the town for several years and had become quite popular among the people.

The murder was committed by a miner named John Brown, who had been acquainted with Smith for some time.

Brown had been drinking heavily for several days and had become quite aggressive.

He had threatened to kill Smith if Smith did not give him some money, which Smith had possession of.

Smith refused to give Brown the money, whereupon Brown struck him down with a club.

Smith died instantly.

Brown was arrested and is now in jail.

No Woman's Nightmare.

Woman's Nightmare is a beautiful and serene story of a mother's love for her children.

The critical reader should note the way in which the author has managed to make the story appealing, without losing sight of the emotional content.

The story is a great and wonderful reading experience and should be read by all families who have or are expecting children.

PROVIDE FOR ALASKA NATIVES

President Edwards' Report

WAS IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

A MONDAY afternoon was spent in Washington, D.C., by President Edwards, who is in charge of the Alaska Native Service.

He spoke at a meeting of the Alaska Native Service, and was introduced by the Reverend Dr. S. B. Cooper, of the Alaska Department of Education and Territories.

care for the Alaskan Natives.

He said:

"The women of Alaska are the backbone of the nation. They are the ones who must be looked after in order to make the country prosperous.

We have an obligation to provide for the needs of the Alaskan women, and I am glad to say that we are making a good start in that direction.
