TOY NAVIES OF THE WORLD

BELGIUM'S 17 WARSHIPS OF LIT-TLE USE IN A FIGHT.

Mexico's Feet of Eight Insignificant, but Uncle Sam Is Close By-Few in Sout's America.

Chicago Chronicle.

while the great maritime powers are triving might and main in the struggle or naval supremacy, there are one or two mportant countries to whom a navy, in the modern sense of the word, is unnecesmary and useless, says the Chicago Tribune. Such countries are diplomatically known as "neutral powers."

The most typical instance in this connection is that of Belgium. Although sandwiched between France and Germany, apprehensions of annexation by either never perturbs the minds of the Belgian politicans. The great powers mutually guarantee Belgium's integrity. The Belgian firet, however, comprises 17 vessels, but the last thing they would be fit for is fighting.

The larger number are employed as mail packets, and any traveler who has journeyed between England and Ostend in a packet flying the red, yellow and black tricolor has really made the trip on a Reigian man-of-war. The two crack warships are of 798 tons and have a speed of 21 knots. The officers navigating the vessels comprise the navai reserve.

Those vessels which are not employed in the purely pacific capacity are maintained for the protection of the fishing along the coast. In addition to this fleet, however, there are a number of shallowdraught, stern-wheel boats patroling the rivers of the Congo, but this navy is distinct from that of Belgium proper. Yet the country has ambitions toward naval supremacy, for there are two coast defense vessels and six torpedo-boats pro-Sected.

In view of the large extent of the sea line of Mexico the navy possessed by that country for the defense of its coast verges upon the ridiculous. The inhabitants cannot complain of being ground down by taxation to support their navy, since it comprises only eight vessels, and four of these are woefully obsolete. The four largest and most recent were constructed in 1902-2 and are of 1280 tons and 16 knots

Still, Mexico has no fears. "Hands off!" is the cry of Uncle Sam when any power casts longing eyes upon Mexico and its wealth. But the extent of Mexico's interests and her reviving prosperity demand extra naval force and a programme has been elaborated for six cruisers and eight torpedo-boats, spread over five years, at an outley of $1,000,000 a year. Egypt is another country which has been saved the necessity of building up a navy by its protection under Engla comprising a fleet, but the majority of these may safely be placed in the same category as the Thames steamboats they are about as ancient and efficient. One Egyptian man-of-war, when not belching forth shot and shell, serves as the Khedive's yacht; another as a transport and several in the capacity of coast-Many of the South American states, though immune from European aggression, thanks to the Monroe Doctring, yet maintain navies—just, as it were, "to keep their hand in," for quarrels between them are of almost everyday occurrence. Per-haps the smallest and most bizarre are those of Paraguay and San Salvador. The former has one gunboat of 440 tons, carrying four three-pounder guns, and two smaller steamers, while the latter power is still worse equipped for her solitary gunboat is only 75 tons, and the armament consists of one small quick-firing Some of these powers—such as Ecuador and the effervescent Venezuela—possess cond-hand warships. Ecuador has two old wooden and iron tubs, purchased from France, while Venezuela acquired an oblete Spanish torpedo gunboat, which

It would be interesting to learn the salaries which the Admirals of the navies of Liberia, Cambedia, Corea or Persia receive in respect of their duties and. furthermore, exactly what their duties comprise. The Liberian Admiral has probably the easiest office. A year or two ago there were two vessels de-manding his supervision, but one, unfortunately, foundered while at anchor. The remaining vessel, the Rocktown, a steam schooner, is scarcely sufficiently seaworthy to venture beyond shallow water, and the crew, it would appear, pass their time "potting" seagulls. into oblivion, in comparison with the titanic forces that lately met in those Chi Rong of 700 tons and the Bankchef Henrikson of 600 tons. What their speed is would make an entertaining guessing competition. Both warships, by the way, were procured from Norway, and so indifferent is the country to naval affairs that they have not yet troubled to change the name of the second vessel, which still retains its original Norwegian nomenclature.

Another curious little navy is that of Sarawak. The present representalive of Rajah Brooke can not renoun his English desires for a navy, so has gathered together a motley fleet of three vessels—the Lorna Doone and paddle-boat.

Morocco boasts two small vessels, Though obsolete, they are more for-midable than the Costa Rican man-ofwar or those of Johore. Even volcanic the Aline, small screw steamers, each carrying two small guns and a small Hayti maintains a navy, to strike ad-ditional terror into the hearts of its foes. It is a motley fleet in being, and one shot from a six-inch gun would send the whole consignment of hulks to the bottom.

Racial Types in Europe.

One of the most striking differences between Europe and America is the persistence of racial type there, and ere the tendency to amalgamate all races into the American. Time seems to bring only increased bitterness to to bring only increased bitterness to racial antagonisms in Europe, while with us the third generation, at the ouside, is completely merged into the American type. I never have been able to understand just what it is that keeps the rancor of races at such a virulent pitch among near neighbors virulent pitch among near neighbors in Europe, when those races will here renounce language, flag and racial as- 28 hours ending at midnight, February 1: pirations and joyfully and completely merge into the American—all patriotic, all loyal to the Government, all in generation more anxious to cover very trace of foreign characteristics with the mantel of sovereign American citizenship than they are to per-petuate a single one of those racial prejudices which for generations made nemies of their fathers.

In the case of races that are living side by side, that are occupied with the same general problems of life, and that would enjoy the same measure of benefit or endure the same degree of hardship as legislation is economically good or bad, one would suppose that cial dislikes. In Europe it is not so. There are some nine races in Austria, for example, and the most beneficent vised for the benefit of the whole community would be coldly received when compared with the delight with which eight of these races might for a moment unite to bring discomfort to Wednesday evening the ninth. They never unite for the common good-it is only that they may at the moment feel a common hatred for some third race strong enough to harass the common enemy. The economic importance of these ra-cial antagonisms is enormous. With our homogeneous population it is hard for us to understand what a drag and a block an efficient government must follow when sentiment instead of selve must be appealed to in the legis-lative chambers.
