New York Evening Sun. In a foreign paper the other day I happened upon an attack on that best-be-loved of man's garments, the waistcoat. There may be those who would question that laudatory phrase. Centuries have so accustomed us to the waistcoat that only when we are in danger of having it taken away is its real dearness to us brought close home. Is it not the last bit of ornament that convention allows to man, the one bright spot in the unsightly costume that time has woven about him? If allowed but a single garment, if uninfluneed by modesty and the weather, would not cling to it? Into retirement with It would go his choicest treasures, the heavy watchchain that he festoons across his how, his fountain pen, his pocket comb, a half dozen other precious trin-keis, for, besides affording a few square feet for the display of color and design, it is a perfect storage warehouse for his most personal belongings. Now a hue and cry is being raised against it. At first its faint echoes are coming to us, when it rings fuller and stronger, when the hunters of germs, the men of science hurl themselves upon us to di-vest us, then we will realize more fully what this little garment has done to make life more worth living, though it may be shortening it. But man will not part with it without a struggle. We are now being told that it is illogical and unsanitary. But man is only logical and sanitary by compulsion, and it is not altogether dream-ing to fancy the day when there will be

OUTLOOK IN THE SENATE. Few Determined Men Can Prevent Passage of Railroad Bill. OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Wash ngton, Feb. 1 .-- A Senator who has usually been credited with being a railroad man, on account of the fact that he has been an attorney for some of the biggest roads in the country, speaking of the prospects of railroad legislation at this session of Congress, said that it had narrowed itself down to a question whether "two or three men in the Senate shall hold up legislation demanded by the President and the people." It is his opinion, also, that it would be very unfortunate if the House should send over a good bill, to have it defeated by the Senate, either through a combination or because other important business made it impossible to secure action on the measure.

Of course, the Senate could, if it wanted, pass the bill. It ought not to take more than a day to perfect the hill satisfactorily, if it is carefully drawn in the first place. That will be rushing legislation, something the Senate is not accuswaistcoat squad" in the Henlth Board tomed to. It therefore simply resolves itself into a question of determination, first referred to announced and if any number of Senators, three or

St. Nicholas. The woodchuck family best known to me was the one that lived by the old rall fence just back of the orchard on my fence just back of the orenard on my father's farm. The mother introduced herself one morning in the latter part of May, just as old Rover and I had started out for a day's fishing. that burrow. I took care that Rover didn't go with me when I made my visits, and, instead of digging out the inmates boy-fashion, I waited for them to come out of their own accord. Several times the old woodchuck appeared; but, feeling sure that there were 'more to follow,' I patiently watched and walted. Finally my patience was rewarded, for one fine morning five little cubs came tumbling along the narrow passage after their mother to the entrance of the burrow. and looked with their great, beautiful brown eyes upon the outside world. What a marvelous surprise it must have been to them to view the green graze and the beautiful flowers!

When satisfied that there was no danger lurking in the immediate vicinity, the mother led the way into the grass, followed by the cubs, which tumbled along in haste to keep close to her. They tried to imitate her in everything; and when she nibbled a clover leaf, they followed her example; and soon the sharp little teeth had learned to cut the juicy leaves. The real object of their first outing was soon accomplished-that of filling their stomachs-and then they began playing about in the grass, very much like pupples, but the mother was careful not to let them wander far from the en-

United States District Attorney Fran cis J.
