Pennsylvania to Exhibit at Portland Fair.

STATE SENATE LIBERAL

Sum of $60,000 Set Apart for Building and Displays.

PAVILION TO COST $30,000

Special Commissioner McIsaac Reports That Appropriation Bill is Sure of Victory—Separate Exhibit in Coal.

The indications now are that Pennsylvania will appropriate $60,000 for participation in the Lewis and Clark Exposition, $30,000 to be expended on a building.

According to a telegram received by Corporation Secretary Reed from Special Commissioner C. H. Isaac, now in Harrisburg, Pa., the State Senate has passed a resolution appropriating $60,000 for the fair, and the House committee has reported favorably upon it.

Half the sum named is to be expended upon a state building. Pennsylvania has at previous fairs built large, handsome structures, but the sum indicates that Pennsylvania's building at the Portland Fair will be equal to the best.

The securing of any appropriation with which to build here is considered so certain that Pennsylvania has asked for a choice location reserved for the building on the fair grounds. The state will also exhibit separately in the mining building with a coal display.

To Send Liberty Bell. The Liberty Bell, Mr. McIsaac reports, will probably be sent out here by the Pennsylvania State Commission to the fair. That matter, however, is not settled yet, and will have to be taken up with the corporation of Philadelphia.

Shipping Exhibit at the Fair. Marine men suggest feature for the Lewis and Clark Exhibition.

People connected with the marine enterprises of Portland think it would be a good plan to add a practical shipping exhibit to the fair, such, for instance, as a full-rigged modern steam carrier, which could be placed close to the fair grounds.

PARDEE SIGNS APPROPRIATION. California Governor Sets Approval on $70,000 Exposition Bill.

Governor Pardee, of California, yesterday signed the bill appropriating $70,000 for state participation in the Lewis and Clark Exposition. It was known that California's Governor took a great interest in the fair, and the bill was considered as good as law before Governor Pardee added his signature.

They were allowed freedom upon their own recognizance pending their hearing, the date for which has not yet been set.

CANADIAN SOCIETY MEETS.

Members Plan to Celebrate Dominion Day at the Fair.

A social success in every way was the first meeting since the organization of the Canadian Society of Oregon, which took place last night at the Glendora, Northwest and Couch streets. It was largely attended, and the president, Dr. K. A. J. MacKenzie, made his first formal speech to the society. He suggested that, although the Canadians are a thrifty race, yet a time may come when acts of benevolence might place the society on a more helpful basis.

This is his 25th consecutive year in "Kerry Gow" and the 27th for "Shawn Rhue," the companion dramas in which he has won his fame.

It is interesting to note that Joseph Murphy holds the richest district in Portland in 1864, under the management of F. M. Bates, father of Blanche Bates, and a well-known old-time manager. Mr. Murphy made a tour of the city yesterday, trying to locate the old theater in which he appeared, but was unable to distinguish even the site. It was, of course, the only playhouse he had seen, and Mr. Murphy says it was on the second floor of a corner building, but he does not recall the name.

Tonight at the Marquam Grand Theater the eminent Irish comedian, Mr. Joseph Murphy, will present his engaging drama of three acts, presenting his famous success, "Kerry Gow" tonight and tomorrow night; Friday night, "Shawn Rhue." PRAISE FROM EASTERN VISITOR

"Sweet Lavender" and the Columbia Company Win Commendation. "Where is a good play in town tonight?" asked a visitor from the East of the hotel clerk; and that urbane but business-like official unhesitatingly answered, "At the Columbia."

"Columbia? Oh, yes, I heard of that theater in St. Paul," said the tourist. "It's a good theater, I guess. What's the show? Is it good?" "Why, it's one of the best stock plays little, old New York ever saw in the West. It's a good play, and it's wild over it."

After the performance, he approached Manager Ballard and congratulated him in no uncertain way on the beautiful theater, the unexcelled stock company, "a company of players any Eastern city would be proud of," as he expressed it, and "to make a good play, and to be given of the beauty, the pathos and comedy in 'Sweet Lavender.'"

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

"Quo Vadis" Next Week. A greater spectacle and more powerful and interesting play than "The Holy City" is "Quo Vadis" to be presented by the Columbia Stock Company the week starting next Sunday afternoon. Preparations have been made for several weeks. Special costumes have arrived from the East, and an army of extra people have been secured to fill the immense cast.

EXPLAINS LAMP EXPLOSIONS

T. R. Gilstrap Says Gas Forms if Flame is Blown Out.

J. R. Gilstrap, of Woodstock, has made investigation into the cause of oil lamp explosions, which have resulted in the death of several people in the city and state recently. Mr. Gilstrap says: "I think the public should be warned against blowing out the coal oil lamps without first turning the wick down very low. I am convinced that a sort of gas is formed, which ignites when the light is blown out, and from that the oil in the bowl is set on fire and explodes. Anyone can see that after blowing the light out there is a cloud in the chimney, which I believe to be gas. The gas seems to produce the explosion more during the past few years than before, and we hear of these fearful accidents resulting in deaths with more frequency than years ago."

CARLINE TO FAIRVIEW

THREE SURVEYS FOR COLUMBIA RIVER AND LA CAMAS ROAD.

Oregon Water Power, Portland Consolidated and New Company Are in the Field.

OREGON, Or., Feb. 7.—(Special.)—Unless all plans fail Fairview is destined to have a railway in the near future. Three surveying parties have been trying to locate a route, each working in a different direction and, seemingly, trying to see which can find a suitable roadway first.

A right of way has been secured and a route located from the Oregon Water Power line at Odenville, a distance of about six miles from Fairview, while the Portland Consolidated Company has been busy looking up a route from somewhere near Woodlawn. The results of their labors have not been made public yet, but both companies have the same objective point in view—a road to Fairview and the Columbia River by a ferry across to La Camas.

The third set of surveyors are in the employ of a new railway company recently organized and are now at work locating a route from Hibbard street in Montaville direct to Fairview. Seneca Smith, who is in the new company, has withdrawn his earlier offer of $10,000 as a bonus to the Portland Consolidated Company. Although his organization was capitalized at only $10,000, it is understood that there will be plenty of money behind the enterprise if a suitable right of way and route can be obtained.

One-half of the capital stock has been subscribed for the purpose of surveys. The difficulties to be overcome will not be great, except the one to be met in crossing the O. R. & N. Co.'s tracks. It will be necessary to tunnel under the railroad tracks, which can be done at one point west of Fairview. From there the work will be comparatively easy in both directions.

It is understood that Judge Smith's company has secured the privilege from the Portland Consolidated Company of running cars over the tracks of the latter between Montaville and Portland, and that there is practically nothing in the way of building and operating the system. The distance from Montaville to Fairview is about eight miles, with two miles more to the Columbia. It is by far the shortest and most direct route from Portland, and the indications are good that the road will be built soon.

However, the Oregon Water Power Company may conclude to build first. In any case, it looks as if Fairview would get a road, which is all it wishes.

TEN BIG TRAINS ON SANTA FE

Storm-Bound Tourists Glad to Reach Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 7.—Soon after daybreak today the first of the storm-bound Santa Fe trains arrived in Los Angeles. They continued to arrive at intervals during the forenoon, and by noon the last of the 10 overland trains had arrived and unloaded its wearied tourists. In several instances two trains were combined into one and were drawn by two engines.

Trainmaster McCaffrey, of the Southern Pacific lines, who has been at El Caezo Canyon, taking charge of repair work there, returned home after all the trains had passed safely over the hills and "shooflies." He reports the damaged tracks in bad shape and says the repairs will require considerable time before the roadbed is as good as it was before the storm.

GRAND AVENUE IS NOW CLOSED

Remonstrance Stops Traffic Between Pine and Stark Streets.

Grand avenue is closed to teams between East Pine and Stark streets, for an indefinite time. This was effected yesterday when a remonstrance was filed against improving the street by building an elevated roadway on each side of the part occupied by the double tracks of the Portland Consolidated Railway.

It was proposed to pay for the improvement by assessing all the property between East Morrison and Burnside streets. The remonstrance was signed by more than a majority of the owners of the property affected. The result is that the street is closed up for an indefinite period. It will throw all the travel and business back on Union avenue, where it once was and where it will likely remain now.
